When a democrat tells you that democracy is for free silver coinage, simply tell him that his party has control of every branch of the government and ask him why the deuce we don't have free silver coinage, and in the ratio of 16 to 1, too.—Free Trader.

It will bear repeating of tenthat if national taxes were collected as are state and county taxes, 31,000 families who own three-fourths of the United States would have to pay three-fourths of the taxes, or $375,000,000 a year. Now they don't pay over two million. You poor devil, do you see the protection!—Coming Nation.

"Now is the time," cries the old party boss, "for every true democrat (or republican as the case may be) to stand solid for his party." It seems to us that the time has arrived for every honest man to join hands and stand solid for his family; the average voter, we believe, has become tired of voting himself down the ladder of prosperity and sustaining the leaders at the top.—Missouri World.

Labor organizations vote to cease work, and the president of the organization proclaims the order to the world, for which he is arrested. Sugar kings, railroad kings, and other robber kings, bribe legislatures and congress, form gigantic trusts to control prices in open violation of law, and when the people question them on their doings they say: "The people be damned." They are never arrested, though they violate the law every day. It is such injustice as this that is leading the people to despise the judiciary. —The People's Advocate.

Attorney-General Olney has ordered the case against the Southern Pacific railroad dismissed, but the case against Debs and the A. R. U. leaders will be tried. The anti-trust law was made for the suppression of labor organizations and not for wealthy corporations. Olney knows how the courts will rule, for the judges are appointed on the recommendation of the corporations. Working men must obey the law but it don't apply to railroads and other wealthy combines. Perhaps the laboring millions may yet learn that this is just what they may expect to receive for their loyalty to the old parties.—New World.

Here is "anarchy" run rampant:

"All men have a natural right to a portion of the soil, and as the soil is indespensable to life, the right of all men to the soil is as sacred as the right to life itself."

Every republican politician in the land would call that anarchy to-day. And yet it is only a sentence from the republican platform when the party was honest years ago. That was at the time when republican processions carried banners saying, "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." —Advance.

The school boy's composition on "The Editor" reads as follows: The editor is one of the happiest beggars in the world. He can go to the circus in afternoon and evening without paying a cent; also to inquests and hangings. He has free tickets to the theater; gets wedding cakes sent him and sometimes gets licked but not often for he can take things back in the next issue and generally does so. While other folk has to go to bed early the editor can sit up every night and see what is going on.

Ex-Census Superintendent Porter reports the average income per day of Kansas farmers to be 84 cents; their average yearly interest burdens on real estate mortgages, $114. This leaves a net income of 36 cents per day for 300 working days and Mr. Porter writes to Secretary Mohler of the board of agriculture to know if the farmers find this interest charge a burden and if it in any way reduces their comforts. As a good republican Mr. Mohler is bound to answer no, the interest is no burden, and farmers revel in comfort on 36 cents per day. And lots of ragged, half-starved republican farmers will confirm it.—Jeffersonian.

There seems to be a growing inclination among dyed-in-the-wool party newspapers to describe Populists as anarchists and lawbreakers. This is to close observers a sign that the People's party has extended to a degree which makes it feared by partisan newspapers. A year or two ago ridicule was the weapon by which they sought to crush it. Now violent abuse and libel are employed. While the Times does not indorse the whole Populist program, it holds that the leaders of that party are to an unusual degree men of lofty aims, warm sympathies and deep earnestness of purpose. Their movement is rather to be fostered than decried.—Chicago Times.

It is estimated that there are now 4,000,000 unemployed men in this country. This means about 18,000,000 people who can not purchase anything. Farmers wonder why the price of wheat has gone down and merchants are in despair over the scarcity of purchasers. But it is easily accounted for. Cut 25 per cent of the demand from anything and the price will fall. The way to bring prices up is to increase the demand. Set these millions of mouths to eating, furnish them with money with which to buy; and the farmer immediately finds more markets for his wheat and the merchant for his goods. Evidently what we need is employment for the idle and more money with which to employ them. Elect the Populist ticket and the country will get both.—Nonconformist.

NEBRASKA NEXT.

That there is a great conspiracy on the part of capital as represented in Wall and Lombard streets to own and control labor, and that Cleveland, in conjunction with John Sherman, is the conscious agent and tool of this combination, elected for this purpose, may be untrue; it may be a delusion of cranks and pessimists. But this we know, that the evidence that such is the case is so strong, so convincing to the impartial observer, that if marshaled against a Grayson county boy on the charge of horsetheft, twelve good men sworn to administer the law would meet the approval of the community and their own consciences by sending him to the penitentiary for full time.—Young Populist.

Twenty-five years ago the slave holding plutocrats howled about the sacredness of their vested rights in property, and the United States courts sustained them; but the people would have none of it, as it interfered with humanity. To-day other plutocrats are again howling about the sacredness of their vested rights that crush humanity, and the United States courts again sustain them. The latter set of plutocrats should take warning from the lesson taught the former, or they may awake some fine morning and read another "emancipation proclamation" that will take from them all the vested rights they are howling for and leave the United States courts nothing to sustain. The sovereign power is in the people and in them exclusively.—Texas Union Workman.

DEMOCRATIC PRAYER.

NO. XIII.

Our most adorable political father whose body is occasionally in Washington, and whose heart is always in Wall street; whose name we love and split our throats cheering whenever thy silver tongued servants mention it; whose word is law and whose frown means no pie; whose avordupois weight is 300 but whose political weight is more than that of all thy party; again we bow before thee to acknowledge ourselves indebted to thee for additional humiliation. We come before thee, oh most worshipful Grover, acknowledging our own weakness. We haven't got sense enough to lead a goose to water. But a short time ago we were yelling for free silver, free sugar, free coal, free iron or a free fight. When thou didst knock silver out we cursed thy name. We declared that thou wast not a democrat. We said thou wast a traitor and a rascal. Then when the senate put sugar, coal and iron on the protected list we swored a mighty swear. We behold the glory of the democratic party has gone glimmering. But, most adorable Grover, we sinned against thee. We cover ourself in sackcloth and ashes; it it about all we have left to cover ourselves with. We beg thy Majesty's pardon. We don't know enough to set a goose on a hillside. Kick us for our ignorance. Kick us for our presumption. Kick us for daring to speak evil of thee.

Kick us for thinking at all. Kick us for not having any sense.

Kick us for having an opinion of our own.

Kick us to thy heart's content. The more thou kickest us the more we will love thee.

The more thou thumpest us on the head the more we will sing thy praises.

Have not the Alabama democrats sang thy praises?

Have not the Georgia democrats done likewise?

Yes, Grover, thou art all right. We are dad bummed fools for not finding it out sooner. Chuck our heads in the mud of thy displeasure.

But let us worship at thy shrine. We don't want any free silver. We don't want any free sugar. We don't want any free coal. We don't want anything free but the whisky we get during the campaign.

We want to protect everything that thou commandest us to.

We sinned when we cussed the republicans for demonetizing silver.

We sinned when we told them protection was a fraud and unconstitutional.

We now want to apologize to them through thee.

The republicans have always been right in everything except wanting the offices. On this alone do we differ from them.

But, oh, almighty Cleveland, thy servants which are our bosses have made us lie. They put the words in our mouths. They told us to yell for free silver, and we yelled.

They told us to yell for free sugar, and we yelled.

They told us to yell for free raw material, and we yelled.

They told us to yell against thee, and we yelled.

Now they tell us to yell for thee and we stand on our tip toes and yell. And why not?

We are political jumping jacks.

We couldn't tell for the life of us what kind of a democrat we are going to be to-morrow, for we don't know which string the bosses will pull.

But we know that we will be a democrat. It is easy to be a democrat. There are so many different kinds. But, most adorable Grover we are sorely pressed by the Populists. They hem us in on every side. They punch us with Jeffersonian doctrines.

They thrust Calhoun sticks into our flesh.

They put Thomas Benton flies into our political buttermilk.

They lariat us with "time honored principles."

They beat us into a jelly with Washington's farewell address and Jackson's messages.

They cover us all over with the democratic record in congress and rub it in on us.

They finish up by piling on top of us a mountain of broken promises of the democratic party and leave us struggling beneath the burden.

Oh, most worshipful master, thou who canst make congress tremble in its boots and stamp platforms into the earth, canst thou not do something, to save us from these pesky Populists? Surely they are becoming as sands upon the sea shore for numbers. Oh, why didst thou not kill Coxey and use him for fish bait?

Verily he is a Populist breeder. Save us, oh save us from the Populists, and thine shall be the glory, forever—Amen.

THE railroads own the government Cleveland, a railroad attorney, is President, and Olney at the head of the law department, is another of their attorneys. The people are not in it.

Over-Production — Another Falsehood.

We have been told that the low price of wheat was not due to the demonetization of silver, but to overproduction. That is, we had raised too much food, while several millions of hungry stomachs in this country, and many more across the Atlantic, were clamoring for something to eat, and had not the work to procure the money to buy it. But we have not raised too much. Read the following table:

"The following table gives the receipts of wheat at the four principal spring wheat markets from the beginning of the crop year, Aug. 1, 1893, to date, and for the same time a year ago:

	This Crop. Bu.	Last Crop. Bu.
Milwaukee	16,164,670	14,732,039
Duluth	28,771,926	37,716,284
Chicago	19,708,101	58,249,814
Total	105,519,952	175,099,344

The following table gives the receipts of wheat at the four principal winter wheat markets from the beginning of the crop movement, July 1, 1893, to date, and for the same time a year ago:

	This Crop. Bu.	Last Crop. Bu.
Toledo	218,623	185,591
St. Louis	526,717	700,000
Detroit	110,107	168,000
Kansas City	159,000	112,800
Total	1,014,447	1,166,[illegible]91

From this it appears that, while the population of the United States is greater in 1893-1894, than in 1892-1893, and therefore the wheat crop should be so much greater, it really fell off, so that the spring wheat crop of 1893-1894 fell 69,000,000 bushels below that of the previous year, while the winter wheat crop fell off 151,947 bushels in the same time, or a total shrinkage of 69,731,319 bushels. And the crop of 1894 will be still smaller than that of 1893. The falling off from 1892 to 1893 was equal to our whole average exportation of wheat from the United States. I. D.

From the Revised Version.

The revised democratic platform amended by that party in the house and senate in 1894 is said to read as follows:

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the democratic party that the federal government has every constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties for the benefit of senators interested in special industries or speculating in Wall street, and for the enrichment of trusts contributing locally to democratic campaign funds in democratic states, or of syndicates and combinations controlled by the President's political and personal friends."

Its anti-trust plank of 1892 in the hands of the practical politicians who run things in Washington has now taken this form."

"We recognize in the trusts and combinations which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint product of capital and labor convenient business agencies for securing democratic campaign funds in Presidential years and for controlling the election of democratic senators, and we believe that the financial resources of the party can be vastly increased by the enactment of tariff schedules directly in the interest of trusts, together with such further legislation in support of syndicates and corporations as experience may show to be necessary for making hard cash a controlling issue in democratic elections."—Wealth Makers.

WHAT has become of the time-honored principles of the democratic party? They have not been heard of since 1860.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

HAPPINESS COMES AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING.

The Terrible Experience of a Well Known Official's Wife—A Story That Appeals to Every Mother in the Land.

No county official in East Tennessee is better known and more highly esteemed than Mr. J. C. Wilson, Circuit Court Clerk of Rhea County, the home of Mr. Wilson. He enjoys the confidence and respect of all classes, and in his business community his word is as good as his bond. Just now Mr. Wilson is receiving heartiest congratulations from his numerous friends because of his restoration to robust health of his estimable wife, who has for years been a helpless invalid. Mrs. Wilson's high standing in society, and her many lovable traits of character have won her a host of friends, and her wonderful recovery has attracted widespread attention.

As the Press was the medium of bringing to the invalid lady's attention the remedy that has effected her remarkable cure, a reporter was sent to Dayton to interview Mrs. Wilson, in order that the general public might have the benefit of the sufferer's experience and be made aware of the treatment that wrought such a marvelous change in her condition. The reporter was welcomed at the Wilson home, and the enthusiastic lady with becoming reluctance gave the history of her affliction and the manner in which she was relieved:

"Yes," said Mrs. Wilson, "I was for 8 years an invalid with one of the most distressing afflictions woman can suffer. For 8 years I moped around, dragging myself with difficulty and pain out of bed. My little ones went untrained and were greatly neglected while I looked listlessly and helplessly at the cheerless prospect before me and them. I suffered the most intense pains in the small of my back, and these seemed even greater in the region of the stomach, extending down to the groins. I suffered agony sleeping or awake. Despair is no word for the feeling caused by that dreadful sensation of weakness and helplessness I constantly experienced.

"I was treated for my trouble by several local physicians, but they were able to give me only temporary relief by the use of sedatives and narcotics. I had almost given up all hope of ever securing permanent relief when I saw an account in the Press of a cure which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had affected. I decided to try them, as I knew the lady who had been cured and had great confidence in her statement. I began to take the pills in October, 1893, and in two months I was doing light housework and attending to the children without any bad effects or weakness, such as I had formerly experienced. Hitherto, I had been unable to retain any food, but now my appetite grew stronger, and with it came back that old, healthy, tone of the stomach. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me, and I assure you the cure has brought a great change in our home. I can now rejoice in my husband's success, for I feel that I have something to live for. Who has a better right to feel this than a mother? One thing more. I have recommended these pills to others and many of the women of Dayton have taken them with good results, and it is my greatest pleasure to recommende to every suffering woman a remedy that has done so much for me."

An analysis proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headaches, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

Women in French Post-Offices.

The introduction of women into French post-offices in France has not not given very satisfactory results. The minister of posts and telegraphs has decided to do away with the system of employing female clerks in several metropolitan and provincial offices. The public constantly make reports of the inefficiency and inattention of the women officials, and although the employment of women was decided upon with a view to economy, it has been found that they cost more than men, as they have to be frequently replaced because of fatigue or illness. They cannot stand the same amount of work as their male colleagues.

"Jumping Frenchmen" in New York.

"Jumping Frenchman" is in town. That peculiar disease, with the still queerer name, is rapidly becoming epidemic in New York. It is one of the maladies which are inexplicable to medical science. Under its influence the patient will do the most startling things upon nervous impulse, from laughing insanely to committing downright murder. The strangest feature of the affliction is that the sufferer will obey any sudden order delivered in a quick, sharp tone. Say to him: "Kill yourself!" and say it quick enough, he will do his best to become a self slayer; tell him to jump to any place and he will do so.—New York Journal.

The Ex-Empress Eugenie's Wealth.

The ex-Empress Eugenie is a very rich woman, the late emperor having invested largely in English stocks, wisely foreseeing the evil day which was to come. Besides this the art treasures and jewelry belonging to the ex-Empress are of immense value, and her lace alone is worth a quarter of amillion. The wedding veil (which is of the very finest old point d'Alençon) worn at the brilliant time of her wedding cost the enormous sum of 250,000 francs.

Pretty Pistols for Women.

Women who shoot like finely decorated weapons. The old-fashioned, pearl-handled revolver, which was supposed to be dedicated to the fair sex, is now made in cheap styles and has, accordingly, lost prestige. Alongside the fans at a leading New York jeweler's are some revolvers, which show to what extent people will carry their love for ornamentation. One, a 38-caliber revolver, of the latest pattern, as far as improvements go, has the handle so lengthened that it looks like an old-fashioned dueling pistol. This handle is of silver, beautifully carved and chased and set with dozens of turquoises. In the barrel joint and the butt are large pieces of polished lapis lazuli. The six-inch barrel is of etched steel. Another larger revolver, or Russian model, has a sterling silver handle formed of the coils of a serpent. Another handle is of carved ivory incrusted with silver, and still another of silver inlaid with mother of pearl. A fashionably dressed woman was looking over these weapons when a Sun reporter came up. She was evidently going to buy one and, as it turned out, for herself. Her concession to the traditions of the husband being the stronger vessel was rather amusing. "Send these three up to the house," she said. "My husband doesn't know the first thing about them, but I'd like to have him see them before I choose." If women continue their progress in the line of hunting and target practice, Dresden handles and accordion plaited barrels will probably be the next developments.

Renting a Public Garden.

A new London idea is to give private garden parties in the lovely botanical gardens, Regent's Park. The countess of Galloway began it, and her entertainment was exceedingly successful. Perhaps something of the kind might be done at home. To rent the privileges of a botanical or zoological garden for an afternoon at a round price would add materially to its funds.

Immense Yields.

A. A. White of St. Paul was awarded diploma at the Minnesota state fair for the best exhibit of sheaf grain, wheat, oats, barley, timothy, alfalfa and millet. This grain was raised without irrigation at Kalispell, in the Flathead valley, Mont., on the west side of the Rocky Mountains, on the line of the Great Northern railway. The samples are immense, and attracted universal attention. Oats, seven feet high, that thresh out 100 bushels to the acre; wheat that goes 40 bushels to the acre, one sample showing a stool of wheat with 134 heads from a single seed.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

BOODLE!

How the Republican Party Taxes the People to Raise Funds for Campaign Purposes.

An Easy Method Which Has the Merit of Originality and Effectiveness.

Banks Holding State Deposits Are Assessed for Political Purposes and Pay Promptly.

From the Representative.

A country banker, who was in the Twin Cities during the state fair, gave away the plan by which the Republicans raise a generous amount of cash for political purposes. The "snap" is a new one so far as the REPRESENTATIVE knows. It is also an effective one, so far as experience goes. The originators ought to take out a patent on the idea. The financier who conceived it deserves great credit. He ought to be at the head of some great financial enterprise. Such eminent ability ought not to be hidden in a political campaign in the "wild and woolly" west.

Said the banker: My bank has on deposit of state funds nearly $20,000. I do not loan any of this money at less than 10 per cent. The bulk of it I use to purchase notes at 20 per cent discount. I could use three times as much money as I have. The only drawback is that I have to pay $500 for Republican campaign purposes, but even then it leaves me a handsome profit."

Now, let us see how the figures stand. The banker gets $20,000 from the state treasury, for which he pays 3 per cent interest, or $600. He loans it at an average of, say, 15 per cent, which brings him in $3,000. Out of this he pays for campaign purposes $500. The net profit of the transaction is, therefore, $1,900.

The state has $2,500,000 on deposit in the banks. At 10 per cent this brings them in $250,000. For this they pay the state $75,000. For campaign purposes, let us say they pay $75,000 more. This leaves them a net profit of $100,000, and not a dollar of capital invested. The people put up the money and the bankers do the rest.

It explains the presence of so many bank officials in the late Republican State convention.

Will it explain a Republican victory in Minnesota at the next election?

Well, we will see about that later.

TELL THE TRUTH.

No Matter Who It Hurts.

The fellow who, when the Flood was up to his lips, told Noah, who had refused him admission into the Ark, that he didn't think it was going to be "much of a shower after all," was worthy to have been a citizen of the United States of America to day. We are the most hopeful, enthusiastic, big-feeling set of lunatics on earth. We are ready to brag ourselves into poverty. We are natural poets. We deal in hyperbole. Col. Sellers, who saw "millions" in everything; and who, when he had no coal for his stove, put a candle inside of it, and warmed himself at the light which shone through the mica plates, should be adopted as the patron saint of America.

The farmers of the Northwest have lost millions of dollars by their extravagant exaggerations of their crops. The thing has been systematic. The occupant of the land brags to the village merchant about the outlook, to keep up his credit; the village merchant brags to the wholesale merchant, of the great cities, to keep up his credit; the wholesale merchant brags to the newspapers so as to keep up the price of their watered stock in Wall street; and all America lies to prevent the Britishers drawing out our gold, or selling our securities.

There never yet was a crop in this Northwest that wasn't just p-r-o-d-i-g-o-u-s! If one field goes 25 bushels of wheat to the acre;—or if one farmer can lie his 10 bushels up to 25;—the whole county is rated the same figures. And the truth is never found until the farmers have all sold their wheat.

But here we have at last discovered one honest man! He won't lie to please all mankind. Listen to him:

Editor of the Penny Press.

Sheffield, S. D., Aug. 31.—As the Minneapolis Journal prints columns of reports of big yields, and studiously avoids alluding to the small ones, and as I think it only fair to give both kinds, I will give you a list of actual yields as taken from the threshers' books:

Frank Baye, Richland township, 180 acres, total yield, 30 bushels.

J. Munch, Barret township, 90 acres, total yield, 30 bushels.

P. Kline, Milford township, 100 acres, total yield, 91 bushels.

J. Kline, Milford township, 75 acres, total yield, 51 bushels.

A. Allison, Cavour township, 125 acres, total yield, 405 bushels.

Allison's was corn ground and summer fallow and was estimated before harvest to go 8 bushels, but failed to do so.

C. A. McConnahy, Liberty township, 75 acres, total yeld, 26 bushels.

J. McConnahy, Liberty township, 250 acres, total yield, 175 bushels.

R. Allison, Cavour township, 143 acres, total yield, 360 bushels.

G. Mills, Liberty township, 200 acres, too poor to cut.

J. Blair, and B. Blair, Cavour township, 300 acres, too poor to cut.

A. Mellbury, Liberty township, 250 acres, too poor to cut.

D. J. Medbury, Liberty township, 260 acres, to poor to cut.

And the above is only a few samples. To sum it up this county did not get the seed back, and the Lord knows how they will get through the winter.

I will mention an item which will give an idea of how it is I manage the elevator at Sheffield. Last year I took in during August several thousand bushels. This year the total receipts were 67 bushels for the entire month, and that was delivered as rent.

Our crop last year averaged about 5½ bushels. I am yours truly,

J. BLAIR.

Praise the Lord for J. Blair! He is the man Diogenes was looking for, in broad day-light, with a lighted lantern, and could not find. South Dakota should take especial pains to perpetuate the breed of that man—for that kind of stock is nearly run out.

But we expect to hear, soon, that a lying generation has risen up and burned J. Blair alive, for dissipating the universal illusion. What! Tell the truth! Why the bottom will come out of North and South Dakota, if this thing is persisted in. Stand shoulder to shoulder, brothers; but let one universal lie enfold the globe, so that we may comfortably die behind it.

Poor J. Blair! The idea of such a man running an elevator in South Dakota! But it may be he has grown desperate. You can't expect a man to lie much on 67 bushels of receipts in one month. There is no room for the imagination. The truth is squeezed out of him with a scream.

But, seriously, what an awful picture does Mr. Blair present. You cannot rival it in Dante's hell. Thirty bushels on ninety acres—worth 45 cents per bushel! And the dreadful winter coming! And no wood! And the interest on the mortgage unpaid; and all the countless robberies and extortions, reaching from ocean to ocean.

May God in his infinite goodness, have mercy on his poor, wretched children, who have never wronged Him, and who look up to Him, through their tears and miseries, as to their only friend. God help them. I. D.

LIES ANSWERED.

Shallow Sophistries.

But time are very hard, indeed, for the time being in considerable districts of South Dakota. The farmers there—those of them that are not enough well-informed to see the folly of the thing—are disposed to run after the miraculous remedies for poverty offered them by the Populists. Money is naturally very scarce with them, and forgetting that its scarcity is due to the fact that they have nothing to offer in exchange for it, they eagerly accept the Populist delusion, that money could be made more plentiful by putting a lot of paper in the treasury hopper and grinding out unlimited issues of printed rags. They do not stop to inquire how they are to get hold even of this cheap money when it comes out of the hopper, or how they are going to get hold of any money until they produce something which they can offer in exchange for it.—Pioneer Press.

And yet this fellow knows perfectly well that when the bankers of Wall street, in 1861, wanted to charge the government from 12 to 36 per cent loans of money, the government "put a lot of paper in the treasury hopper and ground out unlimited issues of printed rags," and not only carried on with them the greatest war in the history of the world, but produced the best times this country has ever known. But the Pioneer Press will say,—that gold rose to 250 per cent premium over greenbacks. Yes; over some greenbacks, because they were disqualified on their face. The government refused to accept them for duties on imports or to pay interest on public debts. But the $60,000,000 of first greenbacks, that did not have these qualifications, but were full legal tender, kept side by side with gold through all the horrors of dreadful war. "Printed rags;"—Why this bankrupt newspaper would be mighty glad to have a hundred thousand dollars of those "printed rags."

And how, they ask, could the people get any of the cheaper money if it was issued. Easy enough. The more money there is the cheaper it is;—that is to say other things are dearer;—that is to say, prices rise. If we had twice as much money as we have wheat, wheat would be worth $1 a bushel instead of 50 cents. Then if a farmer sold 1,000 bushels he would have $500 more of the "printed rags" than he gets now, and he could pay off his debts, to that amount.

These rascals see that plainly enough, but they are working in the interest of the money-lenders and against the producers. They are hired to befuddle the people with just such shallow arguments.

Pine Land Frauds.

From the Representative.

The state of Minnesota has begun an action in the district court to recover $40,000 from Albert H. Powers and Anthony J. Dwyer for an alleged fraudulent appropriation of 5,000,000 feet of pine logs in Itasca county, section 16, township 50, range 23. This is one more of a number of suits brought against individuals and corporations by the state growing out of the exposure in the 1893 legislature of the Minnesota pine land steals.

This is but an additional case to those already commenced, some of which have already been settled by the payment into the state treasury of the sums claimed to be due. It bears out what the REPRESENTATIVE has claimed that the pine land ring has robbed the school and university funds of this state of hundreds of thousands of dollars. If the people of this state have sense enough to elect the People's party state ticket and legislature at the next election these frauds will be probed to the bottom and much of the money stolen will be recovered. It is the real issue in the coming election, so far as the state is concerned. The pine land ring dominates the Republican party. It furnishes the bulk of the campaign funds for the coffers of that party and the people foot the bills. It does not seem possible that it can again carry an election. If justice is done it will be defeated by a majority which will be paralyzing in its extent

The people of Minnesota have a solemn duty to perform in this matter. The question is, will they perform it like honest men.

A THUNDER-CRY!

GRASP THE LAW MAKING POWER.

Concede Everything For a Chance to Reform Abuses.

Seize This Opportunity Or It May Be Lost Forever.

Remember, friends, that the great stake in the pending battle is the United States senatorship. That holds for six years; the Senate is about a tie; a Populist Senator from Minnesota may decide the whole action of Congress and affect the whole destiny of the human race on this planet for centuries to come. We are on the eve of great and momentous events. No man can tell what revolutions lie waiting for us in the near future. A crisis is at hand.

We are opposed to "fusion," which means a sacrifice of principles for spoil; the coming together of discordant elements for purposes of plunder. But it is no fusion to say to the place-hunters,—"We care nothing for who is sheriff, or county treasurer, or county auditor;—any intelligent men put into those places will probably do their duty; but we are after bigger game. You want the large salaries; we want the law-making power, state and national; you are spoilsmen, we are patriots; we won't yield a particle of our principle, for profit; on the other hand we want a chance to put those principles into law. We are reformers. We cannot reform unless we succeed. If we fail now we must wait for two years longer. We may have to wait forever. Take the big salaries and the plunder, and give us the law-making power; take the county offices and give us our state ticket, Congress and the legislature."

There is no fusion in this. If two parties met and said:—"here is the county auditorship worth $2,000 you take that; and here is the county treasureship, worth $1,500 we will take that," and so on, that would be fusion, because it would be a waiver of principles for a division of plunder. But for a party of reformers to say—"we yield up all claims on the fat salaries; and are contented to take the lean places which pay almost nothing; because we feel the abuses should be reformed in the halls of legislation;" that is dragging progress out of the teeth of opposition. What difference does it make to us if all the county offices in Minnesota were yielded up to the Democrats and Republicans, if we can achieve the reforms demanded by our platform? There are, of course, honest men who will think that we ought not to concede a pound-master's place to win a United Senatorship. And there are knaves who will be hired by our enemies to howl against anything that will make reform possible. And these rascals will, on the 7th of November next, clink their ill-gotten gains, and grin, while honest reformers will sit, covered with sack-cloth and ashes, and shame and humiliation, because once more opportunity has yielded only disappointment, and wrong is more firmly entrenched than ever, and goodness is discouraged and disheartened and ready to lie down and die.

Brethren, boldly say to the seekers after the flesh-pots:—"Give us the Populist State ticket, the Congressmen, the legislative ticket and take all the rest."

If this be trading it is a divine trading, which seeks to achieve the good of mankind by yielding a little to human selfishness. We turn our backs on sordidness and plunder. We go out into the wilderness of poverty with John the Baptists. The legislative places pay $5 per day,—for ninety days,—the same as the doorkeepers and half as much as the chief clerks. Surely our efforts to win these cannot be charged up to greed.

Always keep your eyes fixed on November 7th,—the day after election. How will you feel then if you know that Washburn has won, and goes back to work for six years more in the interest of the Plutocrats, and to make your condition worse than it is? How will you feel if Minnesota sends seven members of Congress to Washinaton, to labor for two years more, in the interest of the money-power and against our impoverished and well-nigh ruined people?

Oh, bretheren, rise to the height of this argument. You are Reformers. The people must have reform or perish. REFORM IS IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT THE POSSESSION OF THE LAW-MAKING POWER, STATE AND NATIONAL. Bend all your energies to that great object. Yield everything—concede everything—to gain that end. You must gain it. This is the battle of the century;—yes of a thousand centuries. If liberty dies, in this generation, on this continent, mankind, hundred and hundreds, perhaps thousands of years from now, will curse you in your forgotten graves, for permitting the grandest heritage that ever fell to mortal man to perish off the face of the earth.

Don't yield a hair of the head of any man on our state ticket,—for that would be treason;—but let the fools take the spoil and trash and plunder of the county seats, if they will give you an opportunity to reform the state, the nation and the world.

Burke Gets Another Scalp.

From the Representative.

The connection of John H. Burke with unearthing the frauds of the Guaranty Loan is well known, but the public are not well aware that in 1891, Mr. Burke, filed charges with Kenyon, against the Union Debenture company of this city; also with the state authorities of Massachusetts, succeeding in getting the company shut out of that state, later he filed the same charges in Rhode Island and published them broadly in this state.

Last week application was filed to place the Union Debenture company, in the hands of a receiver when lo, and behold the Minneapolis Journal claims to be the orginator and father of the charges against said company, Robbinsdale in Hennepin county, has been and is almost unanimously Republican hence the result of a Populist meeting held there on Saturday night last shows that the members of the G. O. P., are willing and anxious to learn facts when given in plain language.

John H. Burke of this city, was one of the speakers entirely from an independent standpoint and pleaded for good government and election of pure men. As is well known he is one of the most outspoken writers and speakers in the state since he seldom speaks or writes without making direct charges and giving names.

After he was through the ministers and large numbers of the others,—not Populists—thanked him and asked him to come again and after guaranteeing him a full house.

If those who desire to hear unvarnished truths, regardless of party;—will make up a route taking in specially railroad towns, Mr. Burke will gladly lend his voice, desiring only his expenses to be assured. His address is, 504 Guaranty Loan.

TOO MUCH MONEY.

That's Where the Trouble Is.

Rawlins, Wyo., July 14.—A bunch of 2,000 ewes and 2,100 head of lambs was sold at mortgage sale here yesterday. D. R. Castiday, the mortgagee, bid them in for $1 a head.

Isn't that cheerful! We are getting back rapidly to the Dark Ages when a sheep was worth 2 cents.

You could sell three-fourths of Minneapolis and St. Paul, at forced sale, to-morrow, and you couldn't get enough to pay the mortgages. Men are being ruined by their wealth. That is to say they are eaten up and bankrupted by taxes and assessments.

And yet these people will all vote to continue the system which is destroying them. One of the most wonderful things in the world is the power of the Plutocrats, through the newspapers, to control the minds of the very men they are reducing to pauperism. It really makes one despair of the capacity of men for self-government. There is not an enlightened Monarch in Europe who would subject his people to the outrages the voters willing impose upon themselves in this country. And if you try to convince them that they are being enslaved and ruined, they grin a self-conceited grin, and tell you that you are a crank, and that they knew it all! And if you doubt their word they will produce a copy of the Daily Liar, owned by bankers and run by knaves, and read you a mass of fabricated facts and statistics that are enough to make an intelligent man howl with rage.

Slowly—slowly—slowly—the light of truth penetrates among the multitude; and before a majority see it "the great Doom's image" will darken the horizon.

Oh, bretheren, talk to your friends and neighbors. Work for the salvation of yourselves and your children. Spread the great truths everywhere. "There is no darkness like ignorance." I. D.

Will They Retract.

From the Representative.

Almost without exception the Republican papers of this state have published the charge that Hon. S. M. Owen, People's party candidate for governor, is running a "rat" printing office in this city. There never was any truth in the charge. On Thursday evening last the Printers' Populist club, of Minneapolis, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, A report has been spread broadcast that the "Farm, Stock and Home," of Minneapolis, with which the Hon. Sidney M. Owen, Populist candidate for governor, is connected, is running an unfair printing office,

Resolved, That the Printing Trades Populist Club, of Minneapolis, composed exclusively of members of the various local organizations affiliated with the International Typographical Union, after a thorough investigation of said office, are satisfied with the relations existing between the management of said office and its employes.

Resolved, That we, as individual laboring men, heartily indorse the candidacy of Hon. Sidney M. Owen for the office of the chief executive of the state of Minnesota.

These resolutions dispose of the charge completely. Will the papers which have made it now have the manliness to retract it? Probably not. They do no do business that way.

HOW IT WORKS.

We showed lately that nine north-Atlantic states gained between 1880 and 1890, according to the United States Census, three billion and fifty-four million dollars in wealth, while twenty-one western states, including our own, gained but $1,698,000,000, although they had six times as much land, twice as many people, and nearly as much capital. A good deal of this three billions of wealth, accumulated in the north-Atlantic states, came from the fat lands of the Mississippi Valley, and was transferred under the operation of the high tariff; and the western people voted, willingly, to so transfer their property to people in the East, because they believed that the bonus so paid would "encourage Amecican industry," by giving high wages to the working people; and that these, in turn, would constitute a market for what the western farmers had for sale, and would insure them higher prices for their productions. This is a very noble and philanthrophic theory, and has some elements of truth in it, if it could be carried out. It is carried out? Does this transferred wealth, taken from western pockets, go to enrich the workers and build up a home market?

No, while our people have been generously contributing from their means to lift up wages in the East the employers of labor have been selfishly occupied in breaking them down. And now they will not hire a man unless he agrees to give up the right of suffrage for five years!! We quote:

"The textile workers of Massachusetts have been made an offer for re-employment by the mill-owners. In this offer is an iron clad pledge that deprives each and every voter of his right of franchise for five years. Plutocracy expects in five years to have the toilers so firmly under their control that further resistance to the edicts of capital will be useless."

And what are the wages which these poor creatures are to receive in exchange for the sacrifice of their rights as American citizens? We quote again:

To give our readers an idea of the munificent wages paid in these mills during 1893, we publish the following table:

Receiving.	Males.	Females.
Under $5 a week	6,298	13,004
$5 but under $6	3,166	6,264
$6 but under $7	2,956	4,177
$7 but under $8	2,905	1,978
$8 but under $9	1,945	488
$9 but under $10	1,741	148
$10 but under $12	1,263	52
$12 but under $14	769	13
$15 but under $20	577	23
$20 and over	275	15

Here we have 48,197 employes of both sexes; and of these 28,752, considerably more than half, in these protected industries, receive less than one dollar per day!

And yet these manufacturing states, in ten years, made over three billion dollars of wealth, most of it taken from the West!

Is it not time to call a halt? Why should the Republican party divert your attention from the great issues of the day by a clamor about Protection, Home Market, etc.? Is it not all a sham? I. D.

WORKING BEAUTIFULLY.

The Concentration of the Land.

The land-owners increased in number, between 1880 and 1890, in these United States, according to the government census, but 2½ per cent while the "renters" increased 40 per cent. At the same time the foreign nabobs and combines, after impoverishing their own countries, and making their own people peasants, are coming over here to reduce our population to the same level. Read the following:

"Immense areas of valuable ground are held by wealthy foreigners, most of whom are Englishmen. A recent table, widely published, fixes the total of such alien holdings at 23,000,000 acres, distributed as follows:

Names.	Acres.
An English syndicate, No. 3, in Texas	3,000,000
The Holland Land company, New Mexico	4,500,000
Sir Edward Reid and a syndicate in Florida	2,000,000
Viscount Scully, in Illinois	3,000,000
English syndicate in Mississippi	1,800,000
Marquis of Tweedale	1,750,000
Phillips, Marshall & Co., London	1,300,000
German syndicate	2,100,000
Anglo-American syndicate, Mr. Rogers, president, London	750,000
Bryan H. Evans of London, in Mississippi	700,000
Duke of Sutherland	425,000
British Land company, in Kansas	320,000
William Whalley, M. P. Peterboro, England	310,000
Missouri Land company, Edinburgh, Scotland	300,000
Robert Tennant, of London	230,000
Dundee Land company, Scotland	247,000
Lord Dunmore	120,000
Benjamin Newgas, Liverpool	100,000
Lord Houghton, in Florida	60,000
Lord Dunraven, Colorado	60,000
English Land company, in Florida	50,000
English Land company, in Arkansas	50,000
Alexander Grant, of London, in Kansas	35,000
English syndicate, represented by Close Bros., Wisconsin	110,000
M. Ellenhauser, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, in West Virginia	600,000
A. Boyson, Danish consul, in Milwaukee	50,000
Missouri Land company, of Edinburgh, Scotland	165,000
Total	21,000,000

In the face of this startling array it may well be questioned whether our British cousins did not blunder in calling attention to the few pitiful sheep farms bought up by a couple of American plutocrats in Scotland. It is fair to add to the Anglo-American estates above enumerated the enormous holdings of Manhattan realty by Squire William Waldorf Astor, the rentals of which are being spent for the maintenance of English estates and decrepit Pall Mall journals."

Is that not a startling exhibit? Think of it. If that land was divided up into 40 acre tracts it would furnish homes for 575,000 families, of six persons each, or 3,450,000 people. It has been demonstrated in the state of New York that eleven acres will fur- a living for one adult person. In France many of the farms range from one to five and ten acres. And remember that the only political party in the United States that protests against this alien ownership of land, is the People's Party. If they get into power they will take possesssion of those 23,000,000 acres, pay a reasonable price for them, and throw them open to actual settlers at cost price. No man who is not a citizen or resident of this country should be permitted to take possession of vast areas of our soil and keep the children of the country without homes. It is a villainous outrage that should be stamped out at once. It is an attempt to re-enact the history of enslaved Ireland in this free and powerful republic.

The People's Party and the People's Party alone are making a fight against this great evil. Read the land plank of the Omaha platform. You will find nothing like it in the platforms of the two old frauds. Come in with us, bretheren, and give the people, through the People's Party a chance to redress the people's wrong. This is the day of fate. We need you.

Victory for Silver.

From the Representative.

In the Ohio Democratic state convention, on Wednesday last, after a hot fight, the following resolution regarding silver coinage, was adopted by a vote of 468 to 319:

> We dissent from the president's views, construction and treatment of the silver question and, therefore, believe that silver should be restored to the position it occupied as money prior to its demonetization by the gold party and to that end we favor the unlimited coinage of silver at the legal ratio of 16 to 1 and with equal legal tender power.

This is good Peoples' party doctrine and it is truly a great victory when the Democratic party in a state like Ohio takes this position. It shows that the people of the Middle states are getting their eyes open to the great wrong perpetrated on them by the Republican party, with the aid of Wall street, in demonetizing silver.

The cause of silver has nothing to hope for in the New England states, because the people in those states are largely money lenders to the West. As a matter of course they want pay for their mortgages on Western farms in gold, and they want that gold to be as dear as possible, hence the Republican party will continue to carry these states by immense majorities. The only wonder is that there is any opposition at all. Wall street influences and interests prevail there. In the West and Northwest it is different: Happily for the people of the last named regions they can and will control this government.

Joseph Light, the well known German editor from Winona, was doing business in town today.

The state board of equalization have reduced the assessment on goods and merchandise in St. Hilaire 25 per cent.

Andrew Trovaton, of McIntosh will deliver a lecture this evening in the village hall on the question of county division.

John Stranahan and O. W. Brink started out last Monday to kill all the geese in the country. They returned yesterday wet and hungry and the geese still live.

We are pleased to announce that Marshall & Johnson have determined to start a lumber yard in connection with their flour and grain business. The first car of lumber arrived last Monday and more will follow until they have a good sized stock.

S. M. Dainard took a registered Durham bull cow and calf to the Fertile fair last week and was fortunate enough to take the first prize for all three animals. This is a decided victory for this part of the county over the southern and older settled part of Polk county.

School opened last Monday with a fair attendance. Miss Harriet Felton, of Minneapolis, is installed as principal and Miss Mary Kyle, of Crookston, as primary teacher. Both ladies are well qualified for the positions they hold and the school will undoubtedly be a success this year.

The opening of the school last Monday showed that as usual a large number of the pupils did not commence at the beginning of the term. Parents do their children an injustice by not having them attend from the start as they get behind in their classes and it will interfere during the whole of the year.

The county division schemers are making a lively campaign and are telling all kinds of stories trying to bolster up their lost cause. To illustrate their manner of work we will cite one of their arguments. They claim that the ditches now being dug in the western part of the county is paid out of the county funds and that thousands of dollars are being spent. This is a flat falsehood and everybody who is posted at all knows that the cost of the ditches is assessed against the adjoining property and it will not cost Polk county one cent. This is but a sample of the numerous yarns they are telling. They seem to try and deceive the people in every manner but we predict that their campaign of falsehood will be a dismal failure. It may be possible that a small county under favorable circumstances may be run more economically than Polk county but Red Lake county could not be. This part of the county has been recently settled and it will take years and thousands of dollars to put our county roads in any kind of shape. The new county would have more bridges to take care of than all the rest of the county. In fact we would get the worst of it at every turn and a man who votes for Red Lake county thinking he would better his condition and cheapen his taxes is laboring under a delusion from which there will be a painful awakening if the proposition carries.

[illegible] party ever presented to the voters a cleaner better man than the peoples party of this state has done in the person of Sidney M. Owen. The republican party recognizes this this and fears the result. Attempts have been made already to blacken his character but this has resulted in failure. No taint of corruption attaches to his name and it may be relied upon that every moment of his life and every part of his career, public and private have been investigated. How sweet it would be for his opponents if they could find a dark spot in his life—some transaction reflecting upon his character. They will have to go without this satisfaction however as he has always been the upright honest man that we know him to be. He is an able man. He has studied the social problem deeply and thoroughly and like every other honest man whose judgement and sentiments are unwarped by relation with corrupt combines in business or politics, his sympathies go out to those who are the under dogs in life's battle. He is also a conservative man—a man whose good judgement would prevent him from perpetrating any of those heinous crimes against the state which the old party papers say he would. If elected governor Owen will on the contrary inspire confidence among the people of the state and those without. To begin with we want a new board of railroad and warehouse commissioners and Owen will appoint one that will look to the interests of the people as well as the railway companies. We also want another public examiner who will investigate the rotten financial institutions in the state and Owen will select such a man. We want other reforms and whatever is wise and within the governor's power to do Owen will do. Governor Nelson on the other hand says everything is lovely and the goose hangs high. If the people want a change let them vote for Owen—if they are satisfied with existing affairs let them vote for what we have.—Norman County Herald.

James Brice, British author and statesman, in his writing on "The American Commonwealth," volume 2 page 20, says:

There are now two great and several minor political parties in the United States. The great parties are the republicans and democrats. What are their principles, their distinctive tenets, their tendencies? That is what an European is always asking of intelligent democrats and republicans. He is always asking because he never gets an answer. The replies leave him in deep perplexity. After some months the truth begins to dawn upon him. Neither party has anything definite to say on these issues; neither party has any principles, any distinctive tenets. Both have traditions, both claim to have tendencies. Both have certain war-cries, organization, interest enlisted in their support. Both those interests are in the main, the interests of getting or keeping the government. Tenets and policies, poits of political doctrine and points of political practice have all but vanished. They have not been thrown away but have been stripped away by time and the progress of events, fulfilling some policies, blotting out others. All have been lost except the office or hope of it.

Norman county is doing valiant service as a horrible example to compare with Polk county. The four county divisionists use it in preference to counties that are nearer what Polk county is. Down in Norman there are no county buildings, no jail no bridges and numerous other things that Polk county has in profusion. Now, is Norman county fit for comparison with a county like Polk? There isn't a divisionist but who will confess that it is not. The other counties that are being used for the same purpose are fully as bad and attention is called to Norman only because it is nearer home, and many of the voters know just what improvements can be found in that county.—Crookston Times.

Gov. Nelson has a great antipathy for the populists. It seems that he will resort to any means to stab the movement or bring it into ridicule. Not being able, or at least, not being satisfied to make a case by argument he appeals to the gross-unmanly methods of scandal and vituperation—methods below a scholar, a statesman, or a gentleman. The other day he made an attack upon Gov. Waite of Colorado who has been made the object of persecution by the rowdy element of his state. In his Tawney speech he shouted when speaking of Populism: "Why Gov Waite has been arrested for opening a woman's letter." The very day, or the day after, Gov. Waite was discharged, there not being a scintilla of evidence against him. What we wish to make clear is that Gov. Nelson is so frightened of the populists as lead by Mr. Owen, that he forgets his historic for the democraty and furthermore, being unable to meet Owen in argument he stoops to vile abuse which would undignify a fish woman. Shame on such methods.—Progressive Age.

Why is it that some people will buy goods of traveling peddlers rather than go to the reliable merchant of their own town? As an evidence that they do such things, it is only necessary to cite one instance. For the past few days there has been several peddlers in the city disposing of rugs of every known hue and shape. Of course they have sold a large number of them. After someone has been silly enough to buy a rug from these peddlers, they of course go into one of the reliable mercantile houses of the city and ask for prices on the same article. In nine cases out of ten they find out something they don't like, and soon leave the store where they gained their information. A Times man noticed such a performance the other day, and after the inquirer had left, asked the salesman what was the trouble. He stated that the lady in question had priced several rugs and then volunteered the information that she had just bought one of a peddler for $3 that did not compare with the one that the salesman offered her at $2 50. Rugs are not the only thing that people persist in buying of peddlers always to their sorrow. When these same people want a favor they rush at once to their home merchants, and when they want to get skinned they deal with a peddler.—Crookston Times.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Of The Board of County Commissioners of Polk County, Minn., Sept. Term, 1894.

The board of county commissioners of Polk county, Minnesota, met at the auditor's office September 7th, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. Members present, Kirsch, Oppegaard, Lindem and Demers. On motion Mr. Kirsch was selected as temporary chairman in the absence of Mr. Rhinehart.

The hearing on the school petition of Henry H. Spencer and others, Paul Useldinger and others, and A. C. Aseltine was reset for next meeting, as it was found that proper notices of such hearing had not been posted.

Mr. Rhinehart arrived at 11 o'clock, and assumed the chair.

On motion the individual school petition of Henry H. Spencer, asking that his farm, the sw¼, section 34, township 141, range 48 be attached to school district No 13, was granted.

The school petition of P. J. Carey, and others was ordered to be returned, as it showed that there was not a sufficient number of children within the proposed new district to allow the granting of same.

Moved and carried that the chairman of the board be authorized to telegraph W. J. Hayes & Sons of Cleveland, Ohio, that if they do not send the money tomorrow with accrued interest, at 5 per. cent from June 15th, the contract with them will be cancelled, and if they comply, the bonds will be signed and deposited in one of the banks here.

In the matter of the petition of O. Osmundson, and others, for a county road through Bygland and Huntsville townships, a committee was appointed consisting of Kirsch, Lindem and Demers to examine the proposed location of the county road in said townships, such committee to meet at the residence of Anton Lindem on Thursday, September 20th, at 10 o'clock a. m., in Town of Bygland.

Moved and carried that the hearing in the matter of ditch No. 2 be postponed until Nov. 21, 1894, at 2 o'clock p. m., and the protest of Mr. Steenerson be filed.

The chairman was authorized to issue his order for $3700 in favor of the Wrought Iron Bridge Co., in payment of the construction of an iron bridge across the Marais in Grand Forks township.

A communication from James Robertson, of Huntsville township, setting forth that his land was west of the Marais referred to the attorney general with statement of facts.

The following bills were audited and allowed: and should not be assessed on ditch No. 1, was read, and on motion the county auditor was instructed to strike his land from the list.

Moved and carried that the bond of G. H. Palmer as court commissioner be approved.

On motion the chairman was directed to appoint a committee of three to examine the proposed location of a county road in the Townships of Hubbard and Vineland. The chairman thereupon named as such committee, Kirsch, Lindem and Demers. Demers withdrew from the committee in favor of Rhinehart. The committee designated Sept. 12, 1894, at 1 o'clock p. m., as the time, and the bridge over the State ditch in Hubbard township as the place for the meeting of such committee.

The tax application of Jos. Laurent was laid over; that of B. K. Brown was rejected, and that of H. P. Giese was granted and the auditor was directed to refund 12 dollars of the taxes paid.

The petition from Bray township, asking for an appropriation to assist in making a grade and a ditch, was laid over.

Moved and carried that the taxes against lot 5, block 2, Clements First addition to Crookston, be cancelled.

Moved and carried that a committee of three, including the chairman as one of such committee, be appointed to confer with W. J. Hayes & Sons' agent with regard to the Polk county ditching bonds, with authority to act in the matter to the best interest of the county. The chair appointed on such committee, M. E. Kirsch and J. E. Oppegaard.

On motion the county auditor was authorized to issue his warrant in the amount of $83.20 in favor of the City of Crookston to pay for the grading of Broadway along court house square.

M. E. Kirsch was appointed a committee of one to advertise for bids for cutting down west side of court house square, with power to receive bids and let contract, etc.

A resolution was adopted and filed allowing E. M. Walsh to erect telephone poles on public highways in Polk county.

A petition from Nels Muus asking for additional clerk hire was read, and a motion to lay it over lost. It was then moved and carried that he be allowed the sum of 150 dollars. Upon his refusing to accept the above amount, a motion was made and carried to reconsider the former motion, and the petition was then rejected.

It was decided to purchase of Brown, Treacy & Co. metal furniture for the office of the judge of probate, the price $500 to be paid, without interest, in March or June 1895.

Petitions for bridges, were presented, one asking for a bridge across the Clearwater at Terrebonne, and one across the Red Lake in Louisville. Moved and carried the board as a whole act as a committee to examine the proposed locations of said bridges, and consider the petitions at some future meeting.

FRAUD IN ALABAMA.

TRUE STORY OF THE SWINDLES BY WHICH KOLB WAS DEFEATED.

Treacherous, Cutthroat Methods Employed by the Oates Gang to Defeat the Will of the People—A Day of Reckoning Coming. May Its Ways Be of Peace.

[Special Correspondence.]

IDAHO, Ala., Sept. 10.

When I come to think of it, I am not surprised that our friends in the west and throughout the country do not understand our repeated failure to carry Alabama for the reform movement, as we have no great daily press to give the facts to the world and are continually misrepresented by the opposition press. I will state the facts in brief as I understand them and hope for a careful examination thereof.

In the first place, the election laws of the state are and were framed for the express purpose of suppressing the popular will of the people. It was and is now claimed this is necessary in order to maintain the rule of the white people of the state. It is true that advantage was taken of the law for this purpose only so long as the white people were practically a unit, but now it is used to suppress the will of a majority of the white and black voters of the state. The law providing for the appointment of election inspection is, "The probate judge, sheriff and circuit clerk of each county shall appoint three inspectors of election for each polling place of the county, two of whom shall be of opposing political parties when practical." This seems fair on first reading, and we do have fair elections under it in the white counties, but when I give you the practices under it you will readily see its object. There is no requirement here that these inspectors shall be competent men, and in the black belt counties the county officers generally appoint two intelligent white Democrats and an utterly ignorant and incompetent colored Republican to represent the opposition. These inspectors appoint the clerks of election and the "fixers" for the illiterate voter. Thus it is clear that the Democrats have every advantage secured to them by the law itself. Under this law and practice a demoralized and entirely perverted public sentiment in the black counties has been forming for years until today, if you raise your voice there in favor of honest elections, you are at once read out of the Democratic party. I quote from a prominent Democratic lawyer of the city of Montgomery in The Evening Journal, a Democratic newspaper, of the 19th of August last, in which he boldly exposes the practices of that county and appeals for honest methods. Colonel D. S. Troy says:

"The frauds in this county, while not so extensive, were more flagrant than ever before. The law of the land, intended to protect the rights of the opposition, was defiantly trampled under foot in several precincts and the will of partisan Democratic politicians substituted in its place.

"Colonel H. C. Thompkins, as chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, charged in a campaign circular published Aug. 2 that I was trying to discover frauds in this county with the assistance of Kolbite politicians, and that we had only found evidence of fraud in precinct 12, and that the alleged fraud in that precinct was sufficiently refuted by the denial of the registrar charged with it. At the election on Aug. 6 in precinct 4, where Colonel Thompkins himself voted, John Washington, an illiterate, degraded old negro who ekes out a precarious living by whitewashing fences and doing odd jobs, was appointed and served as the inspector, representing the Jeffersonians, and at other polling places in the county the same thing was done. Negroes without intelligence, character or education were appointed and served as inspectors, representing the opposition. The law secured to the opposition the right to have one of their men, competent to act as inspector, appointed for each polling place, and the only possible object in appointing illiterate and incompetent inspectors to represent the opposition is to furnish the opportunity to falsely certify the result of the poll at the places where they served as inspectors.

"For this reason, or because word has been 'sount' by their Republicans leaders, I know not which, the negroes in this county were very generally unwilling to register as voters. They preferred to take no part in the election, and when this was discovered the Democratic employers of the negroes told them in a number of instances that if they did not register as voters their rations would be dropped.

"This was a degradation of the elective franchise which recalled the days of the carpetbaggers, when they herded the negroes to vote to sustain their usurpation and wicked domination under threat that they would be re-enslaved if the Democrats got into power. It was a complete reversal of the good work done by the men who overthrew the government of the carpetbaggers. What they intended to do was to use force in one way or another sufficient to exclude the ignorant, disqualified and incompetent negroes on whom the right to vote had been thrust by the federal government from the exercise of the elective franchise.

"But what excuse can be made for Democrats who forced these ignorant, helpless negroes against their will to assume the duties of citizenship and register as electors? But this was not all. In order to swell the registration lists at voting places where illiterate, incompetent and degraded negroes like John Washington were to represent the opposition, names were entered on the registration lists without the knowledge or consent of the persons so registered."

This is but a sample of the practices in the black belt counties. However, they have other methods. In some counties the county officials take advantage of the shameful fact that in Alabama we have no contest laws for state offices, and since the returns from the counties to the secretary of state for these offices cannot be legally investigated they send up as large a majority as may be required to overcome the Populist majorities from the white counties. We carried the 51 white counties of this state in the recent election, as shown by the official returns, by about 10,000 majority. In all these counties, where we had the appointment of election inspectors, we gave the Democrats competent inspection clerks and fixers in each precinct, and no one claims the election was unfair here. The county officials certified the correct vote to the secretary of state. How different this to the practices in the black belt counties as illustrated by Colonel Troy above and the following private letters from a very intelligent Populist of Lowndes county, where in 1890 there were about 4,000 white people and 26,000 negroes:

SANDY RIDGE, Ala., Aug. 29.

Hon. M. W. Whatley, Idaho, Ala.:

DEAR SIR—You ask as to the frauds in Lowndes county. There were not more than 1,000 legally registered voters in Lowndes. However, the registration list showed 2,600. In 15 precincts we had inspectors. Oates, by the aid of negro votes, carried them by 194 majority. In the other five precincts there were 100 votes polled by actual count; 1,717 were returned, all but six for Oates. I was at count in Hayneville (courthouse). Oates' majority, including the fraudulent vote returned from the five precincts where we had no inspectors, was 1,911. I challenged the vote of Hayneville, as poll lists had more names than the registration list, and Lowndesboro and Whitehall precincts on the ground that the poll lists were not certified by the inspectors, as required by law. Now, Oates' majority could not have been more than 1,911, including frauds of five precincts, where we were not represented, yet in official count he is given 4,634. This only shows to what extent partisans will go. I have written this up for the Montgomery Journal, and it was published yesterday. By these methods Oates' majority was obtained. I have been in a bad humor generally since the August election. The frauds were more open than ever before, and what we have been pleased to term the "moral element" of Democracy have no word of condemnation for the wrong and outrages perpetrated upon us. The meeting in our county to determine what course for our people to pursue on the 22d inst. was well attended, and our people are ripe for revolt. Who will lead them? T. REESE.

Our people in Alabama have no such idea as giving up this fight. They are a law abiding, conservative people, who have been goaded, robbed and outraged by ballot thieves, who, according to Senator Morgan, "would steal from their mothers," until they are almost desperate, almost ready to exclaim that "when the ballot is denied the right of revolution remains."

Oates' majority in the 15 black belt counties was more than 80,000 as returned by the county officials. Every intelligent man here knows and every honest man will confess that the negroes generally do not willingly vote the Democratic ticket, they being Republicans, and, being advised by Republican leaders, want to vote our ticket—yes, do vote our ticket, as do half the white voters in these black belt counties.

Since we have large majorities in the white counties as well as in the black belt we know we are being robbed by a set of the most consummate villains that live today—that, too, by the consent of the most infamous set of election laws that disgrace the statutes of any state in the union.

Our people have tried to have these laws so amended as to allow each party to have competent inspectors, clerks and fixers at each polling place, to be selected by the executive committee of the respective parties throughout the state, but have been contemptuously refused. Our people have about reached the point where we are ready to ask the United States congress to interfere in this matter so as to guarantee to us a Republican form of government in Alabama. We would not want the Lodge election bill nor the enactment of the recently repealed federal election laws, but since the whole country is interested let congress enact a general law requiring that each state at all federal elections and at elections where assemblymen are chosen who will elect United States senators shall give the opposition in each precinct representation of their own selection.

These are a few of the methods employed to rob the people in Alabama. We would say to our friends in the west and throughout the country we will use every lawful and just method to be heard at the polls, and when we are heard we will stand with Colorado and Kansas for the money of the constitution. Our people instead of giving up are more determined than ever before. We will nominate candidates in every district for congress, and whenever we elect our men will inaugurate contests and pillory the thieves before the world.

You people of the west who met Dixie's soldiers on the battlefield from 1861 to 1865 know something of the persistence and determination of our people. We are now united with you in the cause of good government and will never let up until victory is achieved.

MARTIN W. WHATLEY.

The Third Party.

Thoughtful men of both the old political organizations," says The Record, "must be impressed by the growth of the third party movement. Confined hitherto to the rural communities, it has now invaded the cities, and almost daily announcement is made of coalitions tending to weaken either the Republican or Democratic lines. Labor organizations find themselves allied with socialists, the advocate of the single tax joins hands with both, and the prophet of free silver adds his strength to the combination. Obviously something is the matter with parties whose adherents desert in platoons and regiments to join the apparently forlorn hope of a thirp party movement. Nor is the cause of these defections hard to discover. The older parties are intent upon political glory and individual profit rather than the success of principle or the achievement of reform. They have promised much and fulfilled little until their pledges mean nothing even to the partisan faithful. They are standing still when progress is demanded.—Chicago Record.

Honest Sailors Needed.

The Republicans held power for 30 years, ran the country in the ground and were kicked out for incompetence and corruption. The Democrats were given full power and completed the ruin by following in the footsteps of their predecessors. The absolute necessity of a new deal and a new party is too plain for argument. Unless the piratical crew is thrown overboard and honest sailors given charge the ship of state will be completely wrecked on the breakers of Capo trust.—Nonconformist.

Three Leading Scientists

Proclaim the Superior Value of

Dr. Price's Baking Powder.

Scientists are devoting closer attention to food products. Recent examinations of baking powders by Prof. Long, Dr. Haines, and Prof. Prescott, were made to determine which powder was the purest, highest in leavening strength, most efficient in service, and most economical in cost. They decide that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder excels in all the essentials of an ideal preparation for household use. They write:—

"Chicago, March 28th, 1894.

We have purchased in the open market cans of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and also of the other leading brands of baking powders, and have submitted them to chemical analysis. We find that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder, that is has a considerably greater leavening strength than any of the other baking powders we have ever tested.

THE DOCTOR LOST.

A Bet of a Thousand Dollars That His Patient Would Die.

The gambling instinct is strong in most men, but it is seldom that one hears of a man with sufficient nerve to bet a sum of money on his own life. A wager of this kind has just leaked out in which two prominent members of a Walnut street club are concerned. These two men have been close friends for years. One is a doctor and the other a lawyer. A year ago the lawyer, who had previously enjoyed the best of health, began to complain of feeling run down. He consulted his friend, the doctor, who, after a minute and thorough examination, told him frankly that his lungs were affected, the action of the heart was impaired, and that he wouldn't live a year. The lawyer, who is a man of indomitable pluck and will power, was naturally stunned for a moment. After the first shock had passed off, his true nature asserted itself. "I'll bet you $1,000 you ar wrong and that I do live over a year!" he exclaimed. He was in deadly earnest. The doctor was positive that his diagnois was correst, and was forced to accept the bet.

The money was placed n a safe deposit vault, and the lawyer went abroad In six months he returned. The year was up last week and he won his wager. And what is more, he says he is open for more bets of a similar nature.

Departure in Social Usage.

We are told that the numerous tourists to foreign lands during the present year have noticed and will transplant to our soil and society severe radical departures in social usage; that the shaking of hands has quite gone out of style abroad; that ladies no longer take the arms of gentlemen, except when walking out of doors in the evening—not even in going to dinner. To what extent these changes, and others, will be adopted by our stay-at-home people remains to be seen. We are not informed as to the reasons lying back of the more radical of these changes. It may be fear of "the deadly microbe," which figures so extensively. Some modern reformers have recently undertaken on its account to abolish the kiss—at least the merely social kind; but the effort has not been entirely a success. A robust young lady, when warned that she periled her health by kissing and being kissed, very determinedly replied, "I don't do kissing as a health measure!" And we predict that the good old custom of taking a dear friend warmly and tenderly by the hand will endure yet a little longer—microbes or no microbes, foreign fashion or no fashion.—Good Housekeeping.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DOG AND CAT IN CHURCH.

Ten Minutes of Devotion Which Sorely Tried a Good Man's Nerve.

The worshipers at the Church of the Ascension in Auburn had a novel experience Sunday morning, says the Providence Journal. The processional hymn had been sung, the white-robed young clergyman had finished his exhortation to the "dearly beloved brethren," the responses were over and prayers commenced when a tardy parishioner arrived. As he walked down the aisle he did not notice that he was followed by a companion. When the parishioner stopped and bowed his head in prayer his companion continued its demure tread onward toward the chancel. Once or twice it stopped as the organ sounded the "amens," but when progress was resumed the course was still onward. By a nimble leap the wanderer landed on the platform leading to the chancel and there revealed itself as a tiger-striped kitten about six months old. The kitten's and the clergyman's eyes met. The horrified clergyman with great effort continued to read on, while the unconcerned kitten, with tail erect and ears pricked, gazed on him with interest. Giving him a wink she passed on to the chancel, entered the sanctuary, and with a bound reached the altar. Not content with this she leaped to the bishop's chair and then set about adjusting herself to the surroundings by washing her face. The sound of the clergyman's voice, however, seemed irresistible to her, and, jumping over the brass chancel rail, she leaped to the seat in front of the reading desk at which he was kneeling. With the close of the collect, "Lighten Our Darkness," the choir, the congregation still kneeling, sang an anthem. This interval gave the dominie his coveted opportunity to make a lunge for the cat. Puss was happily purring very loud, but, seeing the attempt on her liberty, a nimble jump saved her from the clergyman's grasp.

With the close of the anthem came the resumption of prayers and also the renewed preambulations of pussy. She remounted the seat behind the clergyman, and, to his horror, he felt her gently testing the stability of his robe, apparently feeling her ground for a leap. The only place to leap was the clergyman's back. The kitten eyed his victim critically and was about to leap when she was startled by the terrific yelp of a dog which had some how got into the choir stall. The kitten now turned her attention toward the organ, and, peeping around, saw her enemy. Her enemy saw her at the same time. Each gazed intently in an apparent effort to hypnotize the other, but the experiment was cut short by the dog, who, with a leap and yelp, made for the cat, and, but for the vigorous scrambling of the bassos, the two would have had an argument in full view of the clergyman and congregation. The dog was held and the cat vanished just as the swelling sound of the final "Amen" brought the worshipers from their knees, many of whom were entirely ignorant of the fearful ordeal through which their pastor had gone during the space of ten minutes of prayer.

Ellen Terry's Garter.

There was a great outcry in the Lyceum (London) one night. Miss Terry had lost her mascot garter. The stage hands were all put to work searching for it. At last the property man found it and produced not the dainty article that one would expect, but a soiled and shabby looking band of elastic, says the Philadelphia Press. This was the mascot without which Miss Terry never goes on the stage on the first performance of any piece. It was the property of a woman who was drowned and was taken from her body when it was lying in the morgue waiting for identification, and given to Miss Terry. Anything belonging to a murderer or suicide is a wonderful mascot.

HILL FOR GOVERNOR

THE SENATOR COMPELLED TO ACCEPT THE NOMINATION.

He Is Nominated Unanimously by New York Democrats, Who Refuse to Take No for an Answer — Mr. Hill Says It Is an Outrage.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Senator David B. Hill was nominated for governor by the state Democratic convention by acclamation. He declined the nomination, but the convention would not listen to him, and the nomination was made amid scenes of wildest enthusiasm. Senator Hill said after the close of the convention that it was an outrage. He was evidently greatly angered. Daniel M. Lockwood was nominated for lieutenant governor and Judge Gaynor for court of appeals. The platform is as follows.

The Platform.

"The Democratic party of New York congratulates the people of the state upon the restoration of business confidence and the improvement of industrial conditions which are following the repeal by a Democratic congress of the laws of its Republican predecessors. Unsound financial legislation, driving out our gold an threatening a silver standard, a worse than war tariff, unnessarily adding to the cost of living, diminishing federal revenues and overstimulating favored industries at the general expense; profligate expenditures, converting an assuring treasury surplus into an alarming deficit; these were the ill-conceived and ill-fated productions of Republican partisanship which brought the country to the verge of financial and industrial ruin, which wiped out private fortunes, reduced incomes, turned tens of thosands of men out of work, closed factories, destroyed business, brought thousands of deserving poor face to face with starvation, and inflicted general distress upon the American people. The complete transfer of the government to the Democratic party was too late to avert these terrible evils; it could only remove their cause and repair the injury.

"We therefore rejoice that by the repeal of the Sherman law for the purchase and storage of silver bullion, all fear of a depreciated currency has been allayed and faith has been restored in the ability of the government to maintain a constant parity between gold and silver coinage; that by the repeal of the McKinley tariff law, the inordinate taxation of the many for the benefit of the few, has been notably diminished, and in the place of inequitable and monstrous customs duties which have starved some industries and overfed others, the tariff schedules have been adjusted so that while affoding ample safeguards for American labor, the price to the people of necessities of life has been reduced and steps taken to encourage the promotion of industry by cheapening the cost of many raw materials used in the manufactures, and that by reducing expeditures wherever possible, and by provision for additional revenues, the legitimate demands upon the federal treasury will no longer exceed the government's income and necessitate an increase in the public debt.

"The beneficial effects of the adoption of these salutary measures of public policy are already plainly apparent. Each day gives evidence of returning prosperity. Mills closed by the effects of Republican legislation are reopening and their operatives are returning to work. Merchants report a largely increased volume of business, and manufacturers are prepared for the period of prosperity which the readjustment of the tariff and cheaper raw materials assure.

Want the Tariff Given a Rest.

"We concur with President Cleveland that the new tariff law does not embody the full issue of tariff reform, but with him also we endorse its provisions for cheaper and freer raw materials and lower taxes as a substantial recognition of Democratic principles, and we bespeak for the law an impartial trial, confident that its successful operation will convince the people of the wisdom of Democratic policy and induce them to demand its proper extension. While favoring, therefore, such wise modification and readjustment of particular schedules by the enactment of separate bills, as future conditions and the fulfillment of Democratic pledges may require, we deprecate, pending a fair trial of the law by actual operation, any further general tariff revision, which, under present conditions, would be likely to retard improvement in business and thereby prolong the evils brought upon the country by the Republican folly.

"We commend the enactment by the Democratic congress of those measures of public importance demanded by the people, particularly the repeal of the federal election law and the stringent legislation for the suppression of trusts. We reaffirm the declaration of principles contained in the Democratic national platform of 1892, and we reiterate the expressions of recent Democratic state platforms in favor of honest money, economy in public expenditures, just and liberal provision for all disabled Union soldiers, their widows and dependents, and strict adherence to the true principles of civil service reform.

"We commend the efforts made by the senators and representatives in congress from this state to avert the adoption of the present income tax, and we record our regret that the reform of the tariff, to which all Democrats were committed, was embarrassed by engrafting on its provisions a direct tax to which many Democrats were strenuously opposed."

The platform then demands the rigid enforcement of the laws to prevent and control trusts. It heartily endorses "the honest purpose and high ideas which have characterized the administration of President Cleveland, and pledges their earnest support in all his efforts to secure the enactment of Democratic measures and the carrying out of Democratic policies," expressing confidence that the people will sustain him at the polls in November. The remainder of the platform is devoted to state issues, closing with commendations of Gov. Flower's administration.

Cleveland Non-Committal.

Buzzard's Bay, Sept. 28.—An Associated Press reporter called President Cleveland's attention to the nomination of Senator Hill at the Saratoga convention. It was the first intimation the president had of the result, and when asked for an opinion, said: "I am out of politics now." This expression of opinion was in a kindly but firm tone and no effort could prompt an expression of opinion. The face of the chief executive was a study, but no word of mouth could he be induced to express either of satisfaction or regret at the action of the Democratic convention.

Fire at Kaukauna.

Kaukauna, Wis., Sept. 28.—Fire at 2 o'clock this morning destroyed Col. Wires' livery barn, Mundinger's brick block, Mrs. John Chapin's boarding house, and several barns and smaller buildings adjoining. Faust's music store occupied Mundinger's block. The losses are: Mundinger, $2,500; Faust, $300; other buildings and contents, $500. Four horses burned in the barn. The property was all insured. Incendiarism is suspected.

On Trial for Murdre.

Media, Pa., Sept. 28.—The famous case of Prof. Swithen C. Shortlidge, who murdered his wife in a sudden fit of insanity while out for a walk on Sunday, Dec. 31 last, came up for trial to-day before Judge Clayton. The prisoner, who has been confined in an insane asylum since the murder, was much aged and did not appear to appreciate his grave position. Several witnesses testified to the shooting, but no material testimony other than has been published was adduced.

Favor Federation.

Baltimore, Sept. 26. — The Brotherhood Trainmen commenced its session here this morning. In the morning the delegates had a parade. After the parade a secret session was held at Hazazzer's hall. A system of federation uniting the organizations of the trainmen, engineers, conductors, firemen and telegraphers was discussed by S. E. Wilkieson, grand master and Alfred E. Brown, vice grand master of the engineers. The sentiment of the trainmen is for the proposed federation, but no action on the plan was taken by the meeting.

Fall Medicine

Is fully as important and as beneficial as Spring Medicine, for at this season there is great danger to health in the varying temperature, cold storms, malarial germs, and the prevalence of fevers and other serious diseases. All these may be avoided if the blood is kept pure, the digestion good, and the bodily health vigorous, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

"My little boy, fourteen years old, had a terrible scrofula bunch on his neck. A friend of mine said Hood's Sarsaparilla cured his little boy; so I procured a bottle of the medicine and the result has been that the bunch has left his neck. It was so near the throat, that he could not have stood it much longer without relief." Mrs. Ira Hood, 324 Thorndike St., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are prompt and efficient. 25c.

Household Hints.

Woodenware when not in use should be turned bottom side up.

A person who is ill should not be over-burdened with too much or too heavy bed clothing.

A fresh egg beaten and thickened with sugar, freely eaten, will relieve hoarseness, and the skin of a boiled egg, wet and applied to a boil, will draw out soreness.

Croutons in tomato and bean soup add to their attractiveness, and are easily prepared by buttering a slice of bread on both sides, cutting it into tiny squares and browning them in the oven.

Boiled milk with a little salt added to make it palatable, is one of the most healthful drinks. It soothes an irritated stomach, nourishes the flesh tissues and tends to make the complexion clear.

Brown paper should be used in putting away ribbons and silks for preservation; the chloride of lime in white paper discolors them. A white satin dress should be pinned up in blue paper, with brown paper outside, sewn together at the edges.

For cleaning mirrors keep for the purpose a piece of sponge, a cloth and a silk handkerchief, all entirely free from dirt, as the least grit will scratch the surface of the glass. First sponge the glass with a little spirits of wine or gin and water, so as to clean off all spots; then dust over it, powder blue tied in muslin. Rub it off lightly and quickly with the cloth, and finish by rubbing with the silk handkerchief. Do not rub the edges of the frame.

There is almost as much nutrition in a pint of milk as in a quarter of a pound of meat, and it is digested in one-third of the time. Milk is human food and should agree with every young person. It is not appreciated as it should be; the prejudice against it is unmerited. A little lime water will make cold milk agreeable with a whimsical stomach, and anybody can drink boiled milk with salt. Next to pure milk comes milk foods—cereals, custards, purees, etc.

A cup of clam broth made from fresh clams and unseasoned is a most acceptable bit of nourishment after a sick headache. Often the stomach will tolerate it when all other forms of food are exceedingly distasteful. The broth should be strong, and can then be diluted according to taste. A little of it may be frozen, or diluted with ice water if cold food is advisable. If at a distance from supplies, it is well to have a few bottles of clam juice in the store room.

Sam Spence's Strange Adventure.

A queer story comes from North Carolina. Sam Spence, a colored man of Union County, was in the woods gathering wild grapes. He climbed a tree and slipped off. His foot became entangled in the vines and he was suspended in the air by one foot. Spence had to wait for assistance, which did not arrivef or more than an hour. The blood all flowed toward his head, and after he was taken down he was very sick. Since that time all the wool on his head has pulled out, and he is getting almost as white as aw hite man. His skin first began fading in spots, which have now spread all over his body.—Atlanta Constitution.

E. S. Willard's Mascot.

E. S. Willard firmly believes that he owes his success to the fact that he possesses about six or eight inches of old rope. He never goes to the theater for rehearsal or performance without this treasure, which he guards most jealously says the Philadelphia Press. This is the piece of rope with which a suicide hung himself, and is regarded by Mr. Willard as am ost powerful mascot.

A Big One.

Bobby—Pop, I wonder how it was that George Washington never told a lie?

in time, if you are a sufferer from that scourge of humanity known as consumption, and you can be cured. There is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its early stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write to those who have been cured and profit by their experience.

MR. WILSON IS DINED

BY THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF LONDON.

The Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee Makes a Speech, in Which He Discusses the Tariff Question.

London, Sept. 29.—The dinner given by the chamber of commerce of London to Congressman W. L. Wilson of West Virginia took place at the Hotel Metropole last evening. About seventy guests were present, including J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture, and his two sons, Paul and Joyce Morton, Congressman Isadore Strauss of New York, Sir Courtney E. Boyle, permanent secretary of the board of trade, and a number of leading men in trade and commerce. United States Ambassador Bayard and James R. Roosevelt, secretary of the United States embassy, sent regrets.

After acknowledging the honor conferred upon him and reciting the events of the long struggle to overthrow protection, Mr. Wilson said:

"All the people saw that our system was generating a brood of monopolists, so powerful as to defy the law, and which used part of the wealth they drew from sharing in the power of taxation to increase their privileges, debauch elections and corrupt legislation. I am quite sure that our protective policy has already served to promote the trade of other nations, and if continued, it would still further promote such trade and pre-eminently your own. So, standing before you, a representative of those who are striving for a freer commercial policy for the United States, I fear I cannot ask you to rejoice at its adoption, except as you may prefer right principles to selfish advantage.

"Protection has seen our voluntary withdrawal from the seas and from the neutral markets. Our protectionists have been building defenses to keep you and other nations from competing with us in your home market. The tariff reformers are breaking down these defenses.

"Let us compete in all the markets of the world. Not only is our production of cotton and food products growing more rapidly than our consumption, but we have to-day a manufacturing plant, which, urged to its full capacity, would in six months fully meet our demands for a year.

"The tariff, hitherto, has given many temptations to form trusts to limit the output. But, fortunately, the way now seems open to give the working people more control over their wages, and to break up the monopolies which are corrupting our politics must be with our services. Without boasting, I may say that it is not in our line to long be underlings. This is the real meaning of the aspiration of the great reform movement in America. It is in no selfish, exultant temper that I thus give you neighborly warning of our plans and expectations."

After referring to the growth of American trade returns, "even under protection," Mr. Wilson predicted that "Now, when released from such vicious laws, there will be a new era and a revival of the American merchant marine, as well as a steady increase in our exports, both of food products and manufactured articles. The nations of the world are drawing more and more neighborly, and the manufacturing supremacy of the world must eventually pass to that nation which, having the largest supply, shall apply it to the highest intelligence and enterprise.

"We are constantly confirmed in the belief," continued Mr. Wilson, "that our supply of materials is more exhaustless and more cheaply handled than that of any other people, and if we continue to be underlings, it is our own fault. We are being rapidly sobered, though unappalled, by the truth, forced upon us, that of all human governments a free government is the most complex and difficult, and, judging from the world's experience, the most uncertain and short-lived. Our institutions are strong because they are deeply rooted in the past. It is for you and for us to show that while other nations have been great in war, commerce, science, etc., we can be great in all, and great in the greatness of permanent freedom."

Sir Albert Rollit said that Mr. Wilson's name had become honored and familiar in England. The American tariff was probably not all it was hoped by its promoters. England had already been benefited by the new tariff.

Speeches were made by Secretary Morton and others, and toasts to the queen and president were drunk.

The Color Line.

Indianapolis, Sept. 29.—An important suit was filed in the superior court here to-day which may furnish an important precedent. It is by Benjamin Thornton, a prominent colored citizen, who asks that a mandate compelling the public school superintendent and his subordinates to admit his child to the public schools No. 4. Thornton charges that the child was transferred from this building because it was not attended by colored pupils. Thornton refused to take his child out when requested to do so by the superintendent. Judge Wishard issued an alternative writ.

Senator Kyle, although badly shaken up and belated in reaching Claremont, spoke for two hours to a well filled house upon the tariff question.

Keeping Poultry.

Keeping poultry teaches love in its broadest sense. It compels man to love his home, to watch the little matters, to be regular, to be frugal, to be industrious. All these go to make a happy life, and to be in love with that which is dear to him. It is an old saying that he who has no pets has no love for home. The woman who delights in the company of neither bird nor animal, finds the society of gossips and street runners the most attractive. The poultry woman makes the model wife. City life has no charm for her. Her home and her fowls are everything and in them she finds comfort, health and strength. The patient, loving, kind-hearted woman alone makes a success in egg and poultry culture, while the fickle-minded, grumbling female would not think of stooping so low as to "mingle with such pests."

A once poultry woman was, by force of circumstances, taken from her country home to a tenament in the city. Although she lived in a more elaborate dwelling, and owns finer furniture, she is cooped up in a narrow court, amid the noise and din of slop carts and drayages. "If I could only get out of this way of living," she said, "back again to a rural home, where I could keep poultry, as I used to. Then I always had money and clothing—many a month I had more clear money with my fowls than my husband did with his crops—but, helping a friend on a note did it, and here we are; the mint has passed out of our hands. Were it not for the disgrace, I would far rather live all my life in a real jail, behind genuine ironbars, than subsist, from hand to mouth, in this prison they call city life." If there were more such sensible women in this world there would be less half-starving families in the cities.

Unsound Teeth.

The belief that unsound teeth belong only to a highly civilized state of life seems to be a prevalent one. But J. Howard Mummery informs us that a very different conclusion was reached by his father more than twenty years ago after an inquiry extending over more than a decade. Over two thousand skulls were examined, including all the available collections in Great Britain. Among thirty skulls of ancient Egyptians there were fifteen with carious teeth; among seventy-six Anglo-Saxon skulls, twelve; among 146 skulls of Romano-Britons, forty-one, and among forty-four miscellaneous skulls of ancient Britons, nine. Several other collections gave like results. Examining skulls of savage races 267 per cent of Tasmanians were found to have dental caries, 20.45 per cent. of native Australians, 24.25 per cent. of the natives of East Africa and 27.96 per cent. of the natives of West Africa.

LONG-LIVED RUSSIANS.

Centenarians Are Far From Being Rare in the Czar's Dominions.

It has long been a well-established fact that abnormal longevity is more common among the Russians than among many other of the European nations. From an official report collated from well-authenticated local registers it now appears that the government of Kieff takes the first place of all Russian provinces in this respect. During last year, it is officially stated, there were fourteen centenarian deaths registered in that government. In the city of Kieff one man died at 110 years, while within the suburban circle two women died aged respectively 102 and 104 years. In Berditcheff two men reached the respective ages of 101 and 114 years. In Vassilkoff another patriarch died in his 115th year. In the same district there died a Jewess aged 105; in Svenigorodka, a man of 110 year; in Tarastscha, another of 105; in Uman, two men aged respectively 103 and 102 years; in Radomytzel, a Hebrew aged 107 and a Christian aged 103 and lastly a man of 105 years died at Tcherkassy.

Here are fourteen persons dying within the same year and within the limits of one district, whose united ages amount to 1,489 years. According to the Saratoff journals there is still in that government an ancient veteran of the First Napoleon's army, formerly Lieut. Savin, and since 1812 known as Nicolai Alexandrovitch Savin, who has celebrated 126 birthdays.—London Daily News.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

SHAMEFUL ENCROACHMENT.

Men Denied the Rights of American Citizens As the Price of Employment.

Whither Are We Drifting.—The Aggressions of the Courts.

From the Representative.

John M. Thurston, the Union Pacific railroad corporation attorney and member of the Republican national committee, has issued the following order on behalf of Nebraska corporation politicians of the Republican stripe who seek to coerce their employes. Read it.

"On account of personal strife engendered by partisanship it has been decided to ask all employes of the Union Pacific company to refrain from active participation in politics. Should any employe desire to accept the nomination for any office he will be requested to resign from the service of the company."

Shame! Shame!! Shame!!!

Are they parties to the outrage, too?

Talk about government ownership of railroads!—Denver Road.

This is one of the most striking signs of the times. There are a great many of them, and they all point in the same direction,—toward a change in our form of government.

If any railroad employe is nominated for an office, and accepts, he must give up his bread and butter, so far as the road is concerned, for which he is at work. And, as the corporations have a general "blacklist," and the man discharged by one company is refused work by all others, the unhappy wretch has nothing before him but the poor house. And this in a free country, standing on the platform of the Declaration of Independence, which proclaims that all men are free and equal.

And what is "an active participation in politics?" Does that include voting? Why not? If it is an unpardonable sin for a railroad employe to run for an office, is it not an equally unpardonable sin for another railroad employe to vote for him? Where is the difference? Are the millions of railroad men to be disfranchised, and free institutions made a nullity, so far as they are concerned? Can the nation afford to see millions of its sons wronged in that way?

And in connection with this order of the Union Pacific we note a communication in the Chicago Times, as follows:

To THE EDITOR: Your vigorous editorial in the Times on the action of the Union Pacific company in warning its employes against taking any part in political matters has been read with feelings of keen delight. You have characterized its action justly as insolent, and I hope this may be the only instance which may call for such criticism. But I am fearful the full significance of this action by the Union Pacific company is not fully realized by any considerable number of people. Perhaps not the next, but the final move certain to follow if matters now in court are decided as it is fully expected they will be by the railroad companies, will be an injunction by the courts just before election in November directed against all Populists warning them to take no part in the voting. This on the ground that if they do vote, as Populists, it will be construed as a conspiracy against the money and other laws of the country.

If the present case against Debs and others is successfully maintained such a result as I have indicated above is just as sure to follow as day follows night. If the principle sought to be established in the Debs case is upheld it will become a precedent to be followed by all the small-fry courts, and when this occurs the end of the republic is not far distant. B. J.

Our readers may think these suggestions unreasonable and extravagant, but the march of aggression is rapid and unhesitating.

When our national constitution was formed the states were without a master, and were regarded as sovereignties. Our country is called "The United States of America." That is to say,—the States united and conferred certain clearly defined powers on a general government; and all powers not so conferred were "reserved," says the constitution, "to the states respectively or the people." Hence it was conceded that all questions of roads, bridges, transportation, and internal commerce belonged to the states; and local self-government was considered so sacred that the president of the United States could not send a company of soldiers into a state, unless the Legislature of the state asked him so to do; even the governor of a state could not invite the president to send in a single soldier unless there was domestic violence, and the Legislature could not be gotten together. But while each state was to be thus master within its own limits commerce necessarily passed from one to the other: and at this point of junction neither state was regarded as in full possession of it; and hence the Constitution gave the power to Congress to "regulate commerce between the states." But who would ever have imagined that, in this year of grace 1894, a court of the United States would have held, as Judge Woods did the other day, in the Deb's trial, that the power to "regulate commerce between the states," gave the national government power to send its troops into Chicago, to protect and regulate street cars (!) because, forsooth, said Judge Woods, a traveler about to cross the boundary of Illinois into Iowa, two hundred miles distant, might take a street car from the Palmer House, Chicago, to the railroad depot in the same city!!!

But the traveler also came down the elevator of the hotel, before he took the street car. Ergo the national government has the right to regulate all hotels in the states! And the traveler also walked across the pavement to reach the street car. Ergo all the streets of all the cities, are under the control of the national government! And he may have stopped to buy a cigar in a store. Ergo all the stores of all the cities are to be regulated by Uncle Sam!

Why what have you left? State sovereignty is wiped out. Put a military man in the White House, and he has the right to march his armies anywhere; take possession of all the cities, and regulate all the people in every detail of their lives.

Then supplement this with the power claimed by the federal courts to call any disrespect of the orders of court a "contempt," even if committed five hundred miles distant; and clap the offender into prison, and keep him there as long as it pleases; and refuse to recognize his right to the writ of habeas corpus, which the national constitution provides "shall not be suspended unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it."

It is very evident that one aggression "doth tread upon another's heels, so fast they follow." Our government is already transformed. We are no longer free citizens of a union of free states, but subjects of one all-devouring, unlimited nationality. It needs but the occasion to arise to rob us of the last vestiges of our ancient liberties, and the machinery is ready built for the work. The blade of the guillotine hangs suspended by a single hair—the will or the necessities of our masters.

Let the people rise to a full understanding of the terrible conditions that are upon us; and move as one man to put the government back where Jefferson and Washington intended it should be. The public liberties are in more danger today than they were when the hirelings of George III. were landing on our shores, in 1776; or when Lee's legions were in sight of the Capitol at Washington.

"Awake, arise, or be forever fallen!" I. D.

THE THING UNIVERSAL.

Hard Times Not Due to the Tariff.

From the Representative.

The Republicans tell us that the hard times are due to the Democratic tariff. This is nonsense; as we have shown a number of times. Read the following from the Chicago Times, and be convinced that the real cause of our troubles is the demonetization of silver.

"I am tired of the tariff question; when we get the money question settled we can take up the tariff again." Judge E. J. Blandin, of Cleveland in a recent interview preceded the foregoing statement with this observation: "I regard the tariff question as set aside for four years at least; all our efforts should be concentrated on the silver question." That is the way a pioneer tariff reformer is disposed to view the condition. Judge Blandin is a Democrat and a free trader. For years he has labored in conventions and in legislative halls for the reduction of duties on imports. He was in Europe when the new law was passed, and while the terms of the measure cannot be expected to wholly satisfy so radical a reformer as he Judge Blandin is disposed to let that matter rest while the monetary system is reformed. He has always been an advocate of the bi-metallic standard, but was never so confirmed in his belief that in silver lies commercial salvation as since his visit to Europe. Everywhere in the old country he found the same business depression that has existed here. While times in America have been of the kind described as hard, they have been worse abroad. Here the stringency was ascribed to the uncertainty of what was to be done in a tariff way. Judge Blandin, basing his conclusions on observation of European conditions, says that the degredation of the world's financial system in the cause of the business depression which is universal. Until the wrong is righted and the pale dollar restored to respectability and power, he says, there will be no commercial health here or elsewhere. The rehabilitation of silver, he argues, is what the democracy should now fight for.

But the Democracy will not fight for the rehabilitation of silver. They are in favor of free silver—if—if John Bull has no objection!

And John has serious objections. We owe him hundreds of millions of dollars of interest annually, on his investments, and he wants that interest, naturally enough, in the scarcest and dearest money possible—to wit, gold;—and gold alone;—no silver in his. If John could make one dollar equal to ten bushels of our wheat instead of one, (as it was when this villainy was inaugurated), John would be delighted. Wheat at ten cents per bushel! How John would laugh! How cheaply he could feed his starving people.

The Democracy and the Republicans and John Bull are all working together to enrich England and impoverish the United States; What a handsome trio they are! Why shouldn't you vote for them? I. D.

Pine Land Frauds.

From the Representative.

Thomas B. Foley, of Atkin, is the latest contributor to the state treasury on account of pine land frauds. On Monday he paid in the sum of $7,500. If all of the pine land rascals could be made to repay the amounts which they have stolen the school and university funds would be enriched by millions of dollars. If the men who did the stealing could be locked up there would be some vacancies on the Republican ticket.

State Funds.

From the Representative.

State Treasurer Bobleter has made his monthly statement again. It appears elsewhere and shows that two millions five hundred thousand dollars of the people's money are in the hands of bankers, drawing 3 per cent interest. In the meantime this money continues to be loaned to the people to whom it belongs for anywhere from 8 to 24 per cent per annum.

Mr. Bobleter's bank at New Ulm still has the largest amount of any country bank.

Grover Cleveland is a corporation lawyer. Attorney-General Olney is a corporation lawyer. Dan Lamont is a corporation lawyer. Bissell is a corporation lawyer. Hoke Smith is a subsidized newspaper man. Carlisle is attorney for the whisky trust. This is a pretty crowd to be at the head of the affairs of this nation. Oh, yes, the Democratic party is the people's party—in your mind.—Denver Road.

MINNESOTA.

One of the Insignificant States.

From the Representative.

The state of Arkansas is the Egypt of the Union. No state attracts so little public attention or shines with so little brilliancy among the galaxy of states.—St. Paul Globe.

We were stopping for some weeks, this summer, in Mount Clemens, Michigan; and every day we bought the Chicago papers,—three or four of them,—and eagerly scanned them for news from home. And the thought was forced in upon us that Minnesota was in some respects, one of the most insignificant states in the Union. Although it was less than three hundred miles from our boundary line to Chicago, and although the newspapers of that city had a great deal to say about Kansas and Colorado and Iowa and Wisconsin, they utterly ignored this great commonwealth, save when the telegraph conveyed the news about a murder or a fist fight or something of that important kind. The comings and the goings, the sayings and the doings of Lewelling and Waite and Peffer and Kyle and Pettigrew and Ingalls were faithfully recorded,—but Minnesota! It was a terra incognita. Never once did I see the names of the learned Washburn, or the spotless Davis, or the scholastic McCleary, or any other of our illustrious men referred to in those metropolitan journals. We were "the lost continent;" the "No-mans Land." Indeed they did not seem to think our great officials amounted to "shucks." How they could come to such a horrible conclusion passes all comprehension; for we know that Clay and Webster, Calhoun and Benton, Sherman and Vest, Jones and Stewart are not to be mentioned in the same breath, (we should say not)! with the truly great men we have incubated so laboriously for these many years;—yea, have set upon so long, to hatch out statesmen, that the very eggs have addled.

Has the world grown weary of the Tariff discussion? Is it flat, stale and unprofitable? Has it lost point and pith and flavor and seasoning? Can it be possible that the brutal age does not care sixpence whether the tariff on collars and cuffs is legislated up or legislated down? Does it care nothing whether "alzarine assistant" contains 50 per cent of castor oil or not? That would be a very interesting question for most of us. Has the world no interest in the fact that the tariff on tooth-powders has been reduced 20 per cent and that the Indians can now clean their teeth? Is it oblivious of that other great fact, that sausage skins and false teeth, (we tremble while we write it), have been placed on the free list? And that the western farmers can now import acorns from England; free from duty, provided—mark the weighty distinction,—provided they are unground! And "that any animal, (including foreign dukes and counts, we suppose), imported especially for breeding purposes, shall be admitted free!" And that wood ashes and asafedita shall pay no duties—and even cabbages shall be on the free list!

And can it be that because our great men refuse to talk of anything else but these mighty issues that they fail to attract the attention of mankind? Does the world salute their eloquent utterances with the disrespectful ejaculation—rats!

> "Rome, thou hast lost thy breed of noble sons.
> When went there by an age, since the great flood,
> When he who spake of Rome could say

And we might speak even worse of Minnesota—that her wide borders seem to enclose only Washburn, Davis and McCleary,—a flat vacuity of nothingness.

Would it not pay the state to send off and import John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, to reside among us, as an immigration agency, to attract population, by forcing mankind to remember that there is a beautiful land up here, filled with intelligent people, called Minnesota? I. D.

Push the Work.

From the Representative.

The reports from all parts of the state are most encouraging. Mr. Owen is making a brilliant and effective canvass, and the local workers are hard at it. Victory will be ours if we all pull together. Every man who can talk in public should take the stump at once and keep it until election day. Don't wait for somebody else. Sail right in.

The Outlook In Chicago.

From the Representative.

I have just returned from making a Populist speech in Chicago. It was on last Saturday in Central Music Hall,—one of the largest halls in the great city;—it was literally packed to the roof and every seat occupied. No charge of admission was made and yet tickets were given out in advance for each seat, so as to prevent a mob. The overflow audience filled two other great halls. A procession of many thousands marched through the streets carrying torches and banners. It was the most uproarious and enthusiastic crowd I ever looked upon, and yet there were hundred of ladies and people of the middle class present, some drawn by sympathy and others by curiosity.

Mr. Eugene V. Debs spoke first and the reception he received was a perfect ovation. It lasted for several minutes. He is a tall, slim, pleasant-looking, able man, and a very interesting and effective speaker. He is undergoing a trial which may send him to prison, and he spoke with clearness and force, but uttered no word that could be tortured into use against him. He declared that there was not a single anarchist in his great railroad society,—the A. R. U. He urged all workingmen to join the People's Party and reform abuses at the ballot box. We hope to soon publish a full report of those great meetings and the speeches. We may be able to get it ready for our Campaign Boom Edition. Don't you want some copies? If so send in your order at once. We think of getting it out next week.

The reports we received were most encouraging. The Populists are going to carry Chicago! That is the belief of our friends. In one ward with 2,300 votes 1,600 were enrolled in the People's Party clubs!

The outlook of the winter is dreadful. There are now between 60,000 and 100,000 unemployed in Chicago. How they will live through the winter God alone knows. While I was there the discharged workmen around the packing houses tried to break in to get work, and were driven back by the policemen's clubs. A contractor advertized for one hundred men. Many hundreds gathered, seized upon his picks and shovels, refused to give them up, and were ready to fight for the privilege of working.

Either the People's Party must succeed, and change their conditions peaceably or we will have anarchy and revolution in the worst forms. I. D.

MORE TIMBER DEPREDATIONS.

Extensive Raids on Northern School Lands.

From the Representative.

St. Paul, Sept. 25.—(Special)—Papers were filed today in four new cases brought by the state of Minnesota to recover the value of pine timber cut and removed from state school lands. In three of the cases the Itaska Lumber Company is the defendant, and allegations are made that the defendant company and its agents are responsible for the removal from the following described lands of pine of the following amounts and values:

From section 16, town 58, range 24, 2,463,510 feet, board measure, pine saw logs, cut between June 1, 1891, and Sept. 1, 1893; at $8 per thousand, valued at $19,708.08. The logs are in the Mississippi and Rum River Boom Company's boom. The return of the logs is demanded or their value with $500 damages.

From the northwest quarter of section 21, town 58, range 24, 1,588,220 feet, board measure, pine saw logs, cut between Sept. 1, 1891, and Sept. 1, 1893, and in the same boom, at $8 per thousand, amounting to $12,705.76; their return is demanded or their value with $500 damages.

From the north half of the northeast quarter of section 20, town 58, range 24, 231,380 feet, board measure, pine saw logs, cut between Sept. 1, 1891, and Sept. 1, 1892, and valued at $1,851.04; from section 16, town 58, range 25, 500,000 feet pine saw logs, valued at $4,000.

The fourth case is against Thomas Shevlin, who is sued for $26,281.22, the value of 3,295,153 feet, board measure, pine saw logs, cut on the state lands between July 1, 1891, and July 1, 1893.

The Situation.

From the Representative.

The Anoka Union, a Republican paper, says:

> In Anoka county very few Republicans will vote for Owen, but a number of Democrats will.

What is true in this respect at Anoka is true as applied to the entire state. The bulk of the votes of the Democratic party, will be cast for S. M. Owen. The "stool pigeon" ticket, headed by Gen. Becker, will get by far the lightest vote ever cast for a Democratic ticket in this state. The party is onto the scheme to elect Gov. Nelson by inducing Democrats to vote for the Becker ticket.

No doubt the intention is to replace Gen. Becker on the railway commission if his candidacy results in the election of Governor Nelson. This scheme will be a failure, however, for Mr. Owen will be elected over Gov. Nelson by a handsome majority, unless all signs fail.

Mr. Owen is now making his canvass. Everywhere he attracts large audiences, and the impression which he makes is most favorable.

Because the People's party is making no noise is no indication that nothing is being done. Everywhere the party is keenly alive to the situation. All that is needed is to keep up the good work until the polls close and the job will be done.

The cities are doing their part. Organization is going steadily ahead. The vote for the people's party state ticket is going to be a surprise all around to those who do not understand the situation. The old party papers have adopted their usual tactics of belittling the movement. The REPRESENTATIVE again says to its friends in the country, do not be deceived by these lying organs. Keep at work and we will win.

HON. JOHN W. WILLIS.

His Great Offense Is that He Is a Populist.

From the Representative.

It is laughable to see how interested the Republicans are to prevent the concentration of the votes of the opposition on any one candidate, or set of candidates. The Democrats are altogether "admirable" when they refuse to vote for the Populists. The Pioneer-Press says:

The Democrats of the Seventh district have taken an altogether admirable stand on the question of fusion, and have set up a rule of political action from which they must not flinch. They say, at the beginning of their platform: "We are in favor of nominating for office only tried and true Democrats and according to them the hearty and united support of the party." That is all right; but no Democrat who subscribes to it can consistently cast his vote for Judge Willis for justice of the supreme court. Judge Willis is not a "tried and true Democrat." He was a Democrat formerly, but this year went over to the Populists. He was nominated by their convention, as a Populist, when he was not the candidate of any other organization. He was required to stand on a platform that traverses the fundamental principles of Democracy, and contradicts utterly the platform adopted by the Democrats of the Seventh district. This oil and water will not mix. It was a long time afterward, when his Populism had become fixed and ingrained, that he was indorsed by the Democratic convention, as a fusion venture. Again this was not as a Democrat. On the contrary, Mr. Donnelly exhibits a liberal contribution from him, with a gushing letter, as proof of his earnestness in the cause. The "no fusionists," therefore, including the Democrats of the Seventh district as a whole, cannot vote for Judge Willis without denying their own words and casting their principles to the winds.

Yes, they told you. They told you that prosperity would come when the Sherman law was repealed, but somehow prosperity was belated. Then they discovered somehow and somewhere that there was a lack of confidence in the tariff views of the Democracy, and now congress has adjourned, after passing a law that out-kinleys McKinley, and still the people are sitting on the ragged edge of despair, waiting for the promised appearance of Mr. Prosperity. A 10-year-old boy would never be deceived that way and not recognize his dupeship, but the voters of the land—they are such wise lulus. Yes, they told you!—The Coming Nation.

Not True.

From the Representative.

The Pioneer Press of Monday morning printed a speech made at Mankato by Gov. Nelson, and says it covers all the issues of the campaign. This is not true. The speech contains no reference to the issue, which is the stealings of the Republican pine land ring, which were exposed by the People's party members of the last legislature and which has resulted in the return to the state treasury of thousands of dollars. Gov. Nelson boldly ignores this issue, but devotes the bulk of his speech to the abuse of the People's party and its principles. He had the bad taste to repeat the charge that Gov. Waite, of Colorado, was arrested for opening a letter addressed to another person, but forgot to say that Mr. Waite was discharged at the examination, thus showing conclusively that there was no foundation for the charge in the first place.

Gov. Nelson's speech will deceive nobody. It is a rehash of stale arguments and false statements. It is the expiring gasp of a rotten bondocracy party. The people will pass upon it at the polls and condemn it by a large majority.

The republicans are working harder than ever before. This would indicate of course that the populists are loseing ground.

The weather the past ten days has been about as bad as it could be. The prediction of a wet fall is being verified with a vengence.

Who will you vote with this fall, your the farmer and laborer for Owen, or with the railroads, bankers and capitalists for Knute Nelson.

C. G. Rapp went down to Crookston Friday spending Sunday there. He returned Monday with Mrs. Rapp who expects to remain here for some time

Orville McCrillis, the peoples party candidate for county superintendent of schools, was here last Saturday. Mr. McCrillis is a young man well fitted for the position he seeks and makes friends wherever he goes and his election is assured.

If you wish to vote withthe railroad directors, pine land thieves, wheat robbers and the iron kings vote for Knute Nelson. If you wish to vote for reform and honest governmenr vote for an honest man Hon. Sidney M. Owen.

Governor Nelson will deliver an eddess at Thief River Falls to-day and the train makes an extra trip to that place this afternoon to take him to Crookston. Several of the faithful are up there this afternoon to hear him, and the balance will probably be at the train here.

National Republican: The candidacy of this old soldier and statesman for governor of Minnesota has aroused the cohorts of the old parties to a bitter arraignment of his motives. They charge him with any and everything envy and hatred can invent. In a manly and dignified way Mr. Owen meets his defamers without docending to their level and the people are flocking to his standard. His election is fairly won, We confidently anticipate the success of the entire people's party state ticket. Mr. Owen is never uncouth, never disrespectful to inquirers, is always ready to make every assertion plain and never misrepresents an opponent. He is just the man for governor of Minnesota. His defeat would be a calamity. Our public affairs need an overhauling. To prevent this the bosses of both old parties are making extraoroinary efforts without progress in their direction. The people have decided in favor of S. M. Owen.

Mr. Andrew Anderson, of Goodhue county, is again in town this week. He is looking over the country with a view of purchasing some farming land.

The Tribune says that Gov. Nelson will speak in this city on Thursday evening Oct. 11th. We do not know whether the Tribune speaks the truth or not, But we hope that if Nelson speaks here he will be a little more civil and a little less puguacious than he was on his previous visit. It don't look well for the little governor of a great state like Minnesota, to run around like a common ordinary plug-ugly looking for a scrap.—McIntosh Times.

The Polk Country Journal informs us that some of the Populists believe that Becker will with draw from the Democratic ticket for govenor. Don't you believe we have any such an idea Brother Cook. Everybody should know that slugger Knute has a long stout string on the Democratic Candidate and that he never makes a move without consulting his bose. How do you suppose he could get his old job back if he went back on his Master at this stage of the game.

State Treasurer Bobleter has made his monthly statement again. It appears elsewhere and shows that two millions five hundred thousand dollars of the peoples money are in the hands of the bankers, drawing 3 per cent int. In the meantime this money continues to be loaned to the people to whom it belongs for anywhere from 8 to 24 per cent per annum.

Mr. Bobleter's bank at New Ulm still has the largest amount of any country bank,—Representative.

The Red Lake reservation lands are still with-held from market for reasons unknown to any but the pine land barons and the "official pap" suckers Meanwhile the pine is being destroyed by fire and the Indians fund depleted. A large part of these lands have been surveyed and appraised and there is no good reason why they should not be immediatly put on the market. Both the Indians and the prospective settlers desire this and our congressmen should see that their rights are not denied for the sake of fostering the petty averice of a few white livered pothouse politions.—McIntosh Times.

The populist have always insisted that the old parties have always used barrels of money to carry elections. Well this year ought to satisfy the most particular pop on that point so far as the republican party is concerned at least for the republican committee this year finds hard scraching to get money for absolutely necessiary expences. No fear of boodle or bribery this year if indeed there ever was. Polk County Journal.

Possibly, Bro, Cook the Republican State Central Committee have not yet fully recovered from the time you were one of its members we are real sorry however that you are unable to locate the barrel this year.

Albert Lea Standard: Senator Allen of Nebraska, who proved himself to be a broad minded and progressive statesman in the recent session of the senate and who won the esteem and confidence of political opponents as well as of his Populist fellow members in a speech recently said: "I have always looked upon a political party since I have grown to manhood simply as a means to an end. I think a party should be held no more sacred than a mans shoes or garments and that whenever it fails to subserve the purposes of good government a man should abandon it as cheerfully as he dispences with his worn out clothes. I am a member of a members of a political party simply because I believe that through the triumph of that party the government will be made better and so a political party has no charms for me outside of what it can accomplish conducive to good government.

My old party brother, you know you are not satisfied with the commercial and social condition of the country, I don't care if your lips do assert that you are, down in your heart, down in that heart you cannot deceive you have a feeling that there is something wrong You don't like to see poverty, hunger and crime stalking the land, You say it is the fault of these people, you do not say it with that impulse that comes of a complete conviction. You do not approve of the open bribery of congress by which a few get millions they never earn, which means that the many, who are poor, lose millions they are entitled to. I say there are times when you think things on these lines that you would not for considerable have your party associates know. They think the same things but keep it to themselves You are afraid to be outspoken in your thoughts, as it would subject you to ridicule and probably financial loss. It takes a hero to defy public opinion for truth's sake, and so you go on supporting a system you do not like, supporting a party because you are not able to brave the ridicule of friends, support a tyranny because you do not know just how to change it. A little study of reform books would do wonders for you, my friend. Just try it.—The coming Nation.

The republicans put a plank in their state platform favoring taxation of railroad lands and we notice that the party press, in luding our own illimitable Index, is making capital out of this clause in the platform in favor of the party. This is simply another attempt to fool the people. If the railroad lands can be legally assessed why did not the republican party see to it that it was done twenty or thirty years ago? The party has been in power and has had unlimited control ever since. Why wait with this important reform until the struggling pioneers have covered the country with school houses, intersected the wilderness with passable roads and borne the many burdens incidental to organized government? On the other hand, if the lands are exempt by law from taxation what good can come from a declaration of this kind? It is either a confession that the party has favored railroad corporations by allowing their lands to remain untaxed in the past or it is cheap clap trap to catch the innocent voters. Will the Index say which horn of the dilemma it choses to take. We may then investigate what position the different parties took on the proposition to tax railroad lands in the last legislature.—Norman County Herald.

GOLD AND SLAVERY.

CONTRACTION OF CURRENCY INEVITABLY ENSLAVES HUMANITY.

This Was What Reduced the Romans to Serfs to Be Sold With the Land—A Few Important Facts Pertinently Stated by Senator Stewart.

I tell you there is nothing like contraction to enslave men. There is nothing like contracting their money to make them cowards. How often have I seen in the mining camps such a case as this: A young man would come from the Atlantic states full of hope and vigor. He would go out prospecting for mines of gold and silver and find none. He would come in hungry. He would get credit for a little while. By and by his boarding house keeper would tell him he must pay or leave. In despair he would go out on the streets and try to get a "grub stake," as they call it, to prospect with. He would fail. Then he might, with his high hopes, go into the saloons, which were the only places where he could stop. They were all open, as the saloons are always in the mining camps. He could get no money. He would sometimes be driven out from there into the streets and kicked. Then by some chance he would crawl back into the mountains and find a mine. Then he would come into town himself again. He would stand erect. No man dared insult him. He would lay down his life for his honor. He was a man again, no longer a poor, cringing mortal without a dollar. He was the bravest of the brave. How often have I seen such a case as that! You can take any tramp, and you may kick him from your door. But you put $500 in his pocket, and you dare not do it.

The mode of creating slavery by contraction and taking money away from the people is the most insidious method imaginable. However brave a man may be, however independent he may be of others, however much he may be willing to defend his honor, you mortgage his farm and leave his family dependent upon him and his children crying for bread, and he will submit. He will become a slave. Nations have been enslaved by loss of money. Brave men become slaves for their suffering families. They will submit to any condition that the money lender may prescribe. They will bow down and submit to anything. That is the danger of this system of contraction going on to sap the courage of Americans and their manhood.

It will make this people submissive, as it made the brave Romans submissive. Who would have thought in the time of Augustus, with the Roman legions, before whom the world trembled and before whom none could stand, that within a few generations they would be reduced to serfs to be sold with the land? It did not come at once. It came by degrees.

I see now the greatest difference in our people. Go out now among the farmers, and you see them meek and submissive, trembling before the landlords. We see the tenant farmers increasing at the rate of 20 per cent in some states in 10 years. We see the men who have had the spirit of this country being destroyed by this insidious enemy, contraction. By the destruction of one-half of the money of the world the debts are doubled. Men have their families to support and their obligations to society to perform, and they grow weaker and weaker. Contraction is the only way by which brave people can be enslaved. After 1,400 years of contraction it made the Romans slaves, and they were sold with the land.

One thousand four hundred years of contraction, and then light broke in the west. The new world was discovered. The gold and silver from the new world revived civilization in the old. When men got money, they again asserted their rights, and their dormant energies that had been crushed out by contraction in Europe were revived. They could go to conventions. They could go to conferences. Within 50 years they produced a Luther to shake the foundations of society by proclaiming the abuses of the times. Without money they could not have done that. They could go to conventions. Often at our silver gatherings we have received letters from farmers who say that it will take more than they can make from their crops to bring them to Washington this year. They cannot move. They are in that condition, while, on the other hand, there is this colossal fortune, this colossal fabric of wealth in London, of which Gladstone speaks, with its branch in New York and with its tentacles in every commercial city. Their influence is everywhere in politics and makes the debtors crawl in the dust.

What do you propose? You propose to rivet the chains. How? How do you propose to rivet the chains so that they cannot be broken? You propose to rivet them by discarding silver.

Gold is able to buy politicians, able to make debtors crawl in the dust, able to bring on a panic. What do you propose? How do you propose to rivet these chains so that they cannot be broken? By the gold standard. There is practically no free gold in the world. It is held for war or extortion. It is not allowed to perform money duty.—W. M. Stewart.

Enthusiasm Born of Principle.

Enthusiasm is going to carry the People's Party right through to victory this fall, not an enthusiasm born of fusion and calculating schemes for gaining votes, but an enthusiasm arising from great and just principles and showing itself in stirring speeches at the county conventions, in the unique four horse team campaign, in a state convention larger and more enthusiastic than ever before held in the state of Nebraska and finally in a stirring educational campaign founded on vital principle and not on fusion, ending in a complete and glorious victory for unadulterated Populism.—Bartlett (Neb.) Independent.

LOOK OUT FOR OHIO.

THE REFORM FORCES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE ARE UNITED.

Magnificent Meetings Which Were Not Reported by the Plutocratic Press—Sending Cold Chills Up the Backs of the McKinley Cohorts.

Ohio has joined the great procession that is moving forward so rapidly at present to improve the conditions of all the people. The conventions held in Columbus were the largest, most enthusiastic and harmonious gatherings of the forces of labor and reform ever held in this state. In point of importance the conference last week was not exceeded by the conference that resulted in the consolidation of the reform forces a generation ago and the almost continuous rule of the Republican party ever since. History was made. Although its effect may not be largely perceptible at the coming election, nevertheless it will grow, and no human power can prevent the ultimate triumph of the new alliance. It is based on correct principles. It was the initial step of the welding together of the component parts of progression. The action of the conference in throwing down the gantlet to all that is wrong because reactionary will gain the applause of all who dare to think for themselves.

The kernel of the whole platform that was adopted by the labor convention as well as by the People's Party after a thorough discussion is contained in the following paragraph:

"We believe that the scope of the government should be expanded as rapidly and as far as the good sense of an intelligent people and the teachings of experience shall justify along the line of collective ownership by the people of all such means of production and distribution as the people may elect to operate."

That brief sentence breathes freedom in every line. It points the way out of the wilderness into which labor has been plunged by its own ignorance and criminal carelessness. It is not coercive. It trusts to the growing intelligence of the people, while at the same time filing notice on the privileged few that an avenue has been opened through which the despoiled can recover their lost heritage just as soon as they bury their petty prejudices and animosities.

From the day that the call was issued for a labor convention by President McBride up to the day of the meeting the purchased press predicted a failure, but the hired editors have remained silent ever since. Notwithstanding the fact that the call was issued only 13 days before the date of the conference and that scores of organizations held no meetings during the limited time, yet 110 organizations responded, and 200 delegates took part in the proceedings. It was truly a representative gathering of intelligent, progressive workingmen.

Every trade was represented by men who had the confidence of their fellows. The miners' delegates were there in greatest numbers—all powerful men, physically as well as mentally.

The joint meeting between the labor and Populist committees for the purpose of forming a combination lasted six hours and was marked by friendly discussion and good feeling from beginning to end. The labor platform was unanimously adopted by the Populist committee, and the convention also adopted it by a practically unanimous vote and seated the Labor delegates, who vied with the Populists in making the convention a success in every particular.

If there were any differences between the various labor and reform factions in Ohio, they were buried in Nelson's grove. Trades unionists applauded the splendid speech delivered by G. M. W. Sovereign to the echo, and John McBride was given as fine a reception by the Knights and farmers as any trades unionist could wish for. Preachers, lawyers, laborers, business men and farmers were all given the same warm welcome by the thousand or more delegates underneath the big tent. Men swung their hats in the air and cheered until hoarse, and ladies waved their handkerchiefs and wept for joy as the speakers pointed out the victories that would be gained by labor by a combined, universal strike at the ballot box, where all wrongs can be righted, where the masses can secure relief from the strangling influences of class privilege.

Perhaps the strongest point was made by John McBride when he declared that, while men are now classed as scabs for taking the places of those who are forced to strike owing to the pernicious legislation of the two old parties, the time is near at hand when workingmen who will insist on voting for the two old frauds will be no better than scabs.

The procession through the principal streets in the evening was a large one, although somewhat handicapped by the turning out of the electric lights by the small minded fellows who happened to hold office in Columbus. But the audience that greeted Messrs. Coxey, Groot, Harrington, Rankin and others, who delivered speeches in the statehouse grounds, was undoubtedly large enough to send cold chills through McKinley and his cohorts. It was simply impossible to get near enough to the speakers' stand to hear on either of the four sides, while the enthusiasm was unbounded. An old resident and a business man informed the writer that it was by long odds the largest audience that ever gathered inside the grounds. And for three hours the people stood listening to truths that will have weight when the votes are counted next November.—Cleveland Citizen.

Two Kinds of Anarchists.

There are two classes of anarchists which this country doesn't need. It is the poor pauper who uses dynamite and the rich pauper who uses winchesters and gatling guns. The latter are more dangerous to the liberties of the poeple than the former.—Denver Road.

Honest Sailors Needed.

The Republicans held power for 30 years, ran the country in the ground and were kicked out for incompetence and corruption. The Democrats were given full power and completed the ruin by following in the footsteps of their predecessors. The absolute necessity of a new deal and a new party is too plain for argument. Unless the piratical crew is thrown overboard and honest sailors given charge the ship of state will be completely wrecked on the breakers of Cape trust.—Nonconformist.

A Girl's First Fancy.

It is always to be regretted, I think, when love comes to a girl before she has attained her moral and intellectual majority, writes Mrs. Burton Kingsland in the October Ladies' Home Journal. The man whom she would love at sixteen is often quite different from one to whom she would give her more mature affections, and there is always the danger of seeing him at a disadvantage, when larger experience of other men will lead her to make comparisons. There are some things to which time is the only guide, and in so momentous a step as the choice of the companion of a lifetime, "the unreasoning madness of love" can, in extreme youth, rarely be trusted. A young girl has so many illusions, so little knowledge of human nature, so slight an acquaintance with her own heart, as to make the risk always a serious one.

Freckles and Carrots.

There are two kinds of freckles, sun and constitutional. The first comes from the sun, last all summer and disappear at the approach of Jack Frost; the others come from a superabundance of iron in the blood or a bad condition of the liver. Citric acid, applied to the "pinches of Phoebus," is recommended by reliable authorities. No harm will be done the face even if they do not come off. The discolorations will wear off as the weather and the sun cools, and a diet of carrot is said to assist nature. Nothing will do away with the constitutional freckle but a blood purifier or liver reform.

Tea-drinking prevails to a very large extent among persons of literary habits.

TROOPS FROM INDIA

ENGLAND WILL SEND SOLDIERS AT ONCE TO CHINA.

Treaty Ports and the British Legation at Pekin Will Be Guarded—The Madagascar War Cloud Blows Over.

London, Oct. 6. — The cabinet met to-day. Most of the ministers were present. Sir William Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, was absent. It is announced on authority that the cabinet council, after discussing the state of affairs in China, decided to send troops to that country in order to protect British interests. It is also probable that additional ships will be sent to strengthen the fleet in Chinese waters under the command of Admiral Freemantle. It is also said that in consequence of to-day's meeting of the cabinet, the British legation at Pekin will shortly be guarded by British gunboats and native Indian soldiers.

The Exchange Telegraph company says 6,000 troops will be sent from India to protect the treaty ports in China. The first rifle brigade will leave Calcutta on Oct. 8 for Hong Kong. The other troops which are expected to be dispatched include the Northumberland Fusileers, two battalions of Ghoorkas and four regiments of Sikhs and drafts from the Punjaub.

The British consuls at Hankow and Ning-Po sent alarming dispatches to the government on Tuesday and Wednesday reporting disturbances in those places, and stating that the European residents were in peril. The Evening News publishes a sensational statement that the cabinet council was called to consider a dispatch received from Minister O'Connor at Pekin, in which it was stated that Russia was intriguing to assist China against Japan in return for the cession to Russia of certain ports of Corea. If this is true, the Evening News adds, it will be a question of sending first-class British men-of-war to China to thwart Russia's intentions. There is no confirmation of these statements from other sources.

The war scare over Madagascar has subsided, and it is now known that there is no trouble between England and France that cannot be settled amicably.

IN COMMERCIAL LAW.

Important Decision Touching Indorser's Liability.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—A case relating to commercial law and of the greatest to attorneys, has just been decided in the district court by Judge Otis. The case is entitled The National German-American Bank of St. Paul against The Illinois Fuel Company, A. G. Postlethwaite and W. J. Footner, and came before the court on a motion of the plaintiff that the answers of the defendants be stricken out, the motion being denied. The Illinois Fuel company gave a note for $36,000 to the bank and this note was indorsed by Mr. Ives, president of the company, and the two individual defendants. It is the case of a promissory note made by a corporation, providing in terms practically as follows: "For value received we promise to pay —," etc.; signed by the corporation at the end thereof, and indorsed before delivery for the purpose of giving credit to it by three of the defendants. The note is held to be the joint (and not the joint and several) promissory note of the corporation and the persons so writing their names on the back of the note. It is held that a suit brought against the corporation without making the indorsers parties thereto, and judgment entered in such suit against such corporation is a bar to an action afterward brought against the indorsers.

BROKE THE RECORD.

Flying Jib Paces a Mile in Remarkable Time.

Chillicothe, Ohio, Oct. 6. — Flying Jib went a mile with a running mate to-day against the record of 2:01 3-4, made by Westgate in Chicago ten years ago. He went without a skip and shot under the wire amid the hushed silence of 10,000 people who eagerly strained forward awaiting starter Loper's announcement of the time. Some who had caught the pacer began cheering, knowing that he had beaten the world's record. Loper said: "You have witnessed something which no audience in the world has ever seen before. You have seen the fastest mile that was ever paced. Flying Jib has beaten Westmont and made the mile in 1:58 1-4." The audience once more broke out into cheers and applauded the pacer and Andy McDowell as they came up in front of the grand stand. The first half of the heat was made in :59 and the last half in :59 1-4.

FIFTY DEAD BODIES.

Evidences of the Fury of the Recent Tropical Cyclone

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 6.—A special from Key West says that fifty dead bodies, victims of the wrecks occurring on the reefs during the recent storm, have been washed ashore on the islands around Key West. The dead, it is stated, are evidently sailors from the vessels destroyed, although the length of time which has elapsed since the storm has rendered the bodies unidentifiable through decomposition. The probabilities are that many more of these ghastly evidences of the hurricane's fury will be brought to light in a few days.

MOBS IN CONTROL.

Fears Entertained of an Armed Rebellion in Hankow.

London, Oct. 6.—A dispatch from Hankow says that as a consequence of the urgent demands of the imperial authorities the province has been denuded of troops. Turbulent mobs have demonstrated at several points that the authorities are powerless to check them. Europeans are alarmed, and the British consul has advised that all women and children be sent to Shanghai, which is considered the safest place. This will be done as soon as possible. The men with the traders and officials have ordered a volunteer corps to protect themselves. The viceroy fears that the mobs will bread out in armed rebellion. He is having fortifications thrown up at Woo Chang, on the other side of the river, to be ready in case an attack on the city is attempted.

WHEAT FROM BRITAIN.

The First Cargo Goes From Tacoma, and Others Will Follow.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 6.—The ship City of Athens has sailed for the united kingdom with the first cargo of wheat shipped from this port, amounting to 1,800 tons. Four large ships have arrived to load wheat in charter by Balfour, Guthrie & Co. and Gibson & Kerr. They are the Androsa, Cape York, Glencove and Windsor Park. Capt. Lockhart, of the Androsa, reports that on Aug. 23, 740 miles east of Shanghai, the ship encountered a terrific gale which lasted thirty hours. For twelve hours it assumed the proportions of a typhoon. Two ships were dismasted near the Androsa, and she met three steamers disabled by the storm. The Androsa lost a fore mainsail but she suffered no other casualty.

BARBER'S CURT REPLY.

Communication From an Army Officer.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Oct. 6.—The final business session of the Army of the Tennessee's twenty-ninth reunion, closed to-day. The only matters other than routine business discussed was a bit of correspondence between Col. Merritt Barber, assistant adjutant general of the department of the Platte, and the local committee, having in charge the local arrangements for the reunion. Col. Barber was appointed on the committee on music and requested to meet the local committee. In reply to the invitation he answered that he did not know of such an organization, had no interest in it and would have nothing to do with it. The disrespect to the veterans implied was discussed, but no action taken.

HARRISON'S CANDIDACY.

The Ex-President Will Not Fight for a Nomination.

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 6. — Mr. Burton, general manager of the Daniels Steel Tie company, who returned to-day from Terre Haute, reports that in a conversation in that city with Russell Harrison the latter said, replying to a question whether his father would enter the lists for the presidential nomination: "As an active candidate I think not. I think that a number of the aspirants will loom up for the nomination before the convention time arrives, and if a general diversity of sentiment develops in the convention and there should be an expression from the people that father is the choice, it is not probable he would decline the candidacy and nomination."

Robbed by Footpads.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 6.—Frank Dupre, a commercial traveler from Rochester, N. Y., was sandbagged and robbed of over $1,200 on Spondina avenue last night. He may die of his injuries. Dupre, it is said, was to have been married to-day.

Refuses to Talk.

New York, Oct. 6.—Embezzler Howgate was taken to Washington to-day by ex-Chief Drummond. Howgate still refuses to make any statement.

THE THING BUSTED.

Disagreeable Experience With a Man Strange to the Electric Light.

A strong wind had set in from the sea, banking huge masses of clouds over the city. The rain descended in a blinding staggering deluge and solid sheets of fire flashed athwart the angry skies, followed by crashing peals of thunder. The gloom was excessive. The lights in the streets cast a fitful, sickly glare over the wet pavements and a few belated pedestrians who were hastening home. It was a night for dark thoughts and darker deeds.

I laid aside the book which I had been reading—an absurdly impossible tale of midnight horrors and ghastly crimes—and sat moodily looking at the raindrops chasing madly down the window pane and at the fierce night without. The cabbies in the street below were swearing and the call bells in the hotels were clanging like wild.

Suddenly in the adjoining room I heard a sharp click like the cocking of a firearm. The connecting door was unbolted and slightly ajar. I sat still, with bated breath and hair bristling all over with terror. A shuffling of heavy feet and a muttering imprecation as something fell on the floor. A cold, paralyzing dread seized on me, freezing the blood in my veins. God of heaven! what horrible tragedy was being enacted behind that door!

Sharp, clear and loud, above the raging of the elements, rang out the report of a pistol, followed by a terrible oath and a heavy fall. Pale as a specter, I sprang tottering toward the door to escape, and, with a horrified scream, fell, crashing to the floor in a dead swoon.

I awoke with a start. The connecting door was wide open. Above my prostrate form stood a rough-looking man in his shirt sleeves. His right hand was bloody. I seemed to feel his clutches on my throat already, and closed my eyes with a gasp. I opened them again, cautiously. In his bloody grasp he held the shattered remains of an electric light globe.

"Sorry, stranger," he said, "but I tried to open the durned thing to light up, an' hit busted."—Atlanta Constitution.

Digestibility of Foods.

Animal foods, such as meats, fish, eggs, and milk, are rather more digestible than most of the vegetable foods, although bread made from ordinary white wheat flour is very easily and completely digested. Bread from whole wheat flour, or that from which only part of the hull of the grain has been removed, is not so completely digestible, but is decidedly healthful for some people in aiding the passage of the food through the intestines.

There are great differences in people in respect to their power for utilizing different kinds of food. Milk is one of the most wholesome and digestible of foods and yet there are people who cannot endure it. Late research makes it probable that in the changes which milk undergoes in the body injurious compounds are sometimes formed, and that this is the reason why milk does not agree with some people. The case is the same with eggs, with certain fruits, as the strawberry, and indeed with many different food materials. Hence it may be literally true that "One man's meat is another man's poison." But while there are exceptions, the general rule holds good that, for ordinary people with good powers of digestion and assimilation, the nutritive values of the ordinary standard food materials are measured pretty accurately by their chemical composition, and that the right mixtures of food are those which furnish the nutrients in the proportions demanded by the body. —Prof. W. O. Atwater, in Good Housekeeping.

In Stuttgart there is a rosebush that covers a space of 230 square feet.

A Marvelous Showing.

The U. S. Government, through the Agricultural Department, has been investigating the baking powders for the purpose of informing the public which was the purest, most economical and wholesome.

The published report shows the Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful preparation, absolutely free from alum or any adulterant, and that it is greatly stronger in leavening power than any other baking powder.

SET HINCKLEY'S FIRE

BOLD CHARGE AGAINST A LUMBER COMPANY EMPLOYE.

Sensational Statement Contained in a Paper in a Law Suit Begun in the "Hennepin County District Court."

Minneapolis, Oct. 7.—A paper was filed in the district court to-day which contains a rather startling statement. It is nothing more or less than that the fire which proved so disastrous in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, Sept. 1, including the destruction of Hinckley, was set by an employe of the firm of Laird & Boyle, who owned a saw mill at Mission Creek.

The paper is an answer in a suit brought by the person mentioned against Wisdom & Cannon, who also own a mill at Pine City, and with whom there were negotiations pending for an exchange of properties, the defendants to put in a note for $1,500 and make some other concessions. The answer alleges that the negotiations were not completed at the time of the fire which destroyed the plaintiff's mill, but says that if the court should find that they were completed, then the plaintiffs ought not to recover the amount sued for, since the mill was burned Sept. 1, 1894, by a fire "which was set and kindled by the plaintiffs, their servants and employes, that it occurred wholly and solely by reason of the carelessness and negligence of the plaintiffs and their employes, and that the fire so set and kindled was the same fire which thereafter and on the same day destroyed the village of Hinckley and a large amount of timber, as the defendant verily believes."

The charge that is made in this answer is substantiated by a witness to whom one of the plaintiffs is said to have remarked that one of their men had set fire to some stumpage that morning, and that he didn't know what the d—d fool meant, for the wind was very strong that day, and he would burn them all up. It is said that all of these facts will come out on the trial of the case, and that there is no doubt as to the veracity of the witness.

So far as is indicated in the paper, there is no charge that the fire was wilfully or maliciously set, but that it was simply the result of a poor piece of judgment on the part of the Laird & Boyle employe, who, regardless of the fact that it was a very windy day, and that the country was as dry as tinder, proceeded to set the fire to clear out a few stumps.

The answer in which the above charges are made was filed by Fuller & Taylor.

WOMEN IN POLITICS.

New York Ladies Organize to Fight Tammany.

New York, Oct. 7.—A meeting of the women of New York, to organize in opposition to Tammany, was held last night. The meeting was in pursuance of a special notice, issued last Tuesday by Col. John J. Gifford, chairman of the Twenty-third district. Supplementary to Col. Gifford's notice was one from Mrs. Mark M. (Brick) Pomeroy, inviting such women as wished to take part in the movement to call at her house, No. 50 West Ninety-sixth street, for the purpose of going together to the hall, which is only a block away.

Col. Gifford called the meeting to order, and Mrs. Pomeroy, who is a strikingly handsome woman, and who was at her very best in the light colored gown she wore, was unanimously asked to preside. She said that New York was like a house that was reeking with filth, and it was eminently proper that the women of the city should organize to assist in the house cleaning.

Miss Ella Rowls was then chosen secretary and treasurer, and made a speech in which she said a large percentage of the poverty and misery in the city was due to Tammany, because Tammany built private palaces with the money its leaders stole from funds generally contributed to relieve suffering.

FOUGHT FOR LIBERTY.

Officers Have a Desperate Encounter With Murderer.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 7.—The murderer of Charles H. Birdsell was captured in a lodging house by Detective Cudahee and Officer Corbett after a desperate encounter, in which Cudahee came near losing his life. The murderer said his name was Robert Blank, afterward admitting that it was assumed. When the police were informed of Blank's hiding place, Cudahee and Corbett went to the house, the former entering first. He found Blank and tried to engage him in conversation. Blank pointed a revolver at Cudahee and said: "Throw up your hands." Quick as a flash Cudahee threw his arms over his head and dived headlong at his antagonist. The desperado pulled the trigger and the bullet grazed Cudahee's neck. Cudahee seized him by the waist and threw him on the bed, where a life and death struggle ensued. Just then Corbett rushed in and beat the desperado over the head. At the police headquarters the man said robbery was his business and that he shot Bissell in self-defense.

Boiler Explosion.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 7.—A saw mill at Mineral Wells, owned by George Schultz, blew up last night, killing Frank Halley and fatally wounding Samuel Cook and George Schultz.

Howgate's Trial.

Washington, Oct. 7.—It is expected that Capt. Howgate will be tried within sixty days, although no definite time has been set by the district attorney.

THE THIRTEEN HOODOO.

Strange Circumstantial Corroboration of Correctness of the Superstition

"No," said the man who was waiting for his turn in the barber shop to a "Detroit Free Press" man, "I'm not superstitious, but I have a kind of a horror for the number 13, and I think a good many other men have the same kind of sentiment about it. I had only one experience, but that was a peculiar one.

"Did you sleep in number 13 in a hotel?" asked the man to whom he was talking.

No; I went to Pontiac to attend the funeral of a friend, and was invited with others who were at the services to dine at the house of a relative of the deceased—his niece, in fact. When at table our hostess, who was assisting in waiting upon us, remarked that there were thirteen at the table. She had a beautiful child, two years of age, and to break the spell she brought the little fellow and put him in my arms. He was much admired and was passed from one to another until his mother was ready to sit down, when he was taken away."

"Well, what happened? Did somebody die before the year was out?"

"That is the strange part of it. It was not one of the 13 guests who died, but the one who was brought in to break the spell."

The Mantle of Charity.

It is the one garment the fashion of which never changes, writes Ruth Ashmore in the October Ladies' Home Journal. The years may go and come, and yet she who cloaks herself in this mantle is at once happy herself and the giver of happiness. In cut it never changes. It is always large and full, so that it can envelop those who are unhappy and give them warmth and comfort. Like the cloak worn by the prince in the fairy tale, it is invincible to all but those whose eyes are made clear by faith. It is the garment that I would like my girls to wear. It is true that much patience and much self-denial are required before this cloak is put on, as it should be, for all time; but once assumed the amount of joy to be gotten from it, and the happy heartbeats to the wearers of it, cannot possibly be overestimated.

Misdirected Sympathy.

BUDS, Society buds, young women just entering the doors of society or womanhood, require the wisest care. To be beautiful and charming they must have perfect health, with all it implies—a clear skin, rosy cheeks, bright eyes and good spirits. At this period the young woman is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this time. If there be pain, headache, backache, and nervous disturbances, or the general health not good, the judicious use of medicine should be employed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best restorative tonic and nervine at this time. The best bodily condition results from its use. It's a remedy specially indicated for those delicate weaknesses and derangements that afflict womenkind at one period or another. You'll find that the woman who has faithfully used the "Prescription" is the picture of health, she looks well and she feels well.

In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic displacements common to women, where there are symptoms of backache, dizziness or fainting, bearing down sensations, disordered stomach, moodiness, fatigue, etc., the trouble is surely dispelled and the sufferer brought back to health and good spirits.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

GOV. NELSON'S NEW SPEECH.

He Has Dropped His Argyle Argument.

IT WAS TOO MUCH RIDDLED TO HOLD WATER.

He Abandons National Matters and Turns to State Affairs.

He Is Equally Unfortunate In His New Field.

From the Representative.

Our friend Gov. Nelson is an able lawyer, and he is making the best he can of a bad case; and when the fire gets too hot he shifts his ground with admirable rapidity and discretion. He began the campaign on national issues. He has now fallen back upon the state questions; and before the battle is over we expect to see him confining himself to the past political history of Douglas county.

His argument now is, that the People's Party should not be trusted with power, because they had possession of the Legislature in 1891 and made a dreadful "mux" of it.

Now, really this is not fair. The Governor knows as well as any one that the Populists or Alliance, (as it was then called), did not control that legislative session of 1891. They had but 32 members in the House out of 114—the Republicans had 41 and the Democrats 41. The Republicans therefore had more votes in the House than the Alliance. They were the least of the three. In the Senate they had but 12 votes, while the Republicans had 25 and the Democrats 17. The Republicans had more than twice as many Senators as the Alliance, while the Democrats had five more. In the two branches the Alliance had but 44 votes, out of a total of 168 or a little more than one-fourth. It would be very unjust to claim that 44 votes were responsible for the acts of 168 members.

It is true, as the Governor says, that the Alliance combined with the Democrats in both branches. There had to be some combination formed with somebody, or the Legislature could not have been organized or any laws passed. In the Senate some of us sought to combine with the Republicans, but they tried to trick us, and made a combination with one or two Democrats; and it was only at the last moment, and by a desperate effort, that we were able to get the Democrats to unite with us. If we had not done so we should have been entirely ignored in the organization of the Senate and its important committees, and could not have done anything for our constituents.

The Governor says, in his new speech:

"Well, some of the farmers were beguiled in 1890. They did elect a large number of Alliance members and sent them up to the legislature: and when they came up there it turned out that neither the Alliance, nor the Democrats, nor the Republicans, had a majority; but these Alliance members, these reformers, these special friends of the farmer, they fused; they entered into a fusion with the Democrats. Many of us supposed that that fusion involved great reforms; matters of great principle; matters of some great importance to the farmers of this state; but after you look at the work of that legislature, you find that the fusion was mainly in respect to some secretaries, employes, clerks and spittoon cleaners around the legislature. So the fusion didn't extend beyond that. And, aside from the Australian ballot law, that legislature enacted no legislation of any particular importance; nothing especially in the interest of you farmers; nothing calculated to give you any assistance or produce any reforms in the political, economic or business world."

Here, again, we think the Governor is very unfair. That session of the Legislature did more and better work for the people of this state than any other that preceded or followed it. They passed 402 enactments, all of them of value to the people, or, Gov. Merriam, the Republican governor, would not have signed them.

1. An act proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting special legislation. This has already saved the state hundreds of thousands of dollars.

2. An act to amend the state constitution, so as to permit the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads, sleeping cars, parlor cars, telegraph companies, telephone companies, express companies and insurance companies. This was a reform long demanded by the people.

3. An act to regulate elections, to wit, the Australian law, a great boon to the honest voters. It was introduced and carried through by our candidate for Attorney General, Hon. John A Keyes, of Duluth. He was then a Republican but his legislative experience helped to make him a Populist.

4. An act to provide for the assessment, taxation and collection of taxes of telegraph and telphone lines. A just and righteous measure, too long deferred by the Republican party.

5. An act to prohibit pools and trusts in this state. A very important act to prevent combines in lumber, coal, grain, etc. I had opened the way for this act in a previous session, by securing an amendment to the state constitution declaring such combinations criminal conspiracies.

6. An act to prevent the sale of imitation butter. A measure of great benefit to the farmers.

7. An act to prevent the use of vegetable oils to displace lard;—aimed at cotton-seed oil, which was ruining the business of the pork raisers. And yet the governor says we did nothing for the farmers.

8. An act to authorize the formation of farmers mutual fire insurance companies.

9. The Anti-Pinkerton act,—prohibiting any but residents, of four months standing, being sworn in as constables or policemen; and prohibiting the hiring out of armed bodies of men by private parties for the use of corporations. This act was demanded by the laboring men of our cities. The Republicans in thirty years had never passed such a measure.

10. An act to prevent railroad companies requiring their conductors or brakesmen, who have worked for 20 hours to go to work again without 8 hours rest. A humane act as regards the men, and a wise act as regards the safety of the traveling public.

11. An act to extend the time for the payment of seed grain loaned to poor farmers, who had lost their crops, by hail, etc.

12. To compel all railroad passenger trains to stop at county seats, to take on and let off passengers. Declared constitutional by the Supreme Court. Fought bitterly by the railroads.

13. An act to do away with "struck juries;" a most iniquitous scheme, in the interest of the rich and against the poor.

14. An act to protect women from slander.

15. An act to make the legal age of consent of a female fourteen years; and two or three other acts to protect children from violence, etc.

16. An act to require railroad corporations to provide suitable waiting rooms, well lighted and warmed, at all depots. An important matter in our cold winters; where oftentimes half frozen passengers would drive across the prairies to find the depots closed or fireless.

17. An act to regulate common carriers, etc., prohibiting unequal tariff rates on railroads, and providing for speedy hearing of cases in courts, etc. An important measure.

18. An act to permit owners of land to drain and reclaim them where others' lands are affected. Another important measure.

19. An act to make Washington's Birth day and Memorial Day legal holidays.

20. An act to provide for the revision of all the laws of the state of Minnesota.

21. An act to provide for the appointment of commissioners to enquire into the Torrens Australian system of land transfers, now in use in Canada, etc.

22. An act to carry on the investigation of the question whether hundreds of thousands of bushels of wheat had been fraudently taken out of a public elevator at Duluth, without inspection.

23. An act to establish and maintain Farmers Institutes in Minnesota.

24. An act to furnish seed grain to farmers, who had lost their crops in 1890, from frost, blight or hail.

25. A memorial to Congress against option dealings, in wheat and other agricultural products.

And yet with all these great acts before him, in the Statute Book of 1891, the Governor says that the Legislature of that year passed no measure, except the Australian law, of any interest to farmers!

And, it must be remembered that for every good bill, which got through the ordeal of Plutocracy and became a law, there were a dozen that "died in the borning." The Alliance could only suggest remedial measures;—but, with about one-fourth of the votes, they could not pass them. Many of the Democrats and some of the Republicans were good, honest men; others were worked upon, through party prejudices, to fight anything that came from an Alliance member or senator.

In that list of 25 good measures we omitted the Alliance act to appropriate $185,000 to increase the manufacture of twine in Stillwater. That measure required a considerable expenditure to buy machinery and supplies, but it has saved the farmers of the state, hundreds of thousands of dollars, and will yet save them millions. The sum of $35,000 was appropriated to buy an additional twine-making machine; and $150,000 for raw material. This reform has reduced the price of twine from 18 to 6½ and 7 cents per pound. But the governor has not a word to say on the subject. For thirty years the Republican party has been taking the farmers money and giving it to everybody else. When did they ever pass such an act as that, to use the farmers taxes to help the farmers, except when forced to do so by Alliance men?

And the Governor complains that the Legislature of 1891 was a very extravagant one and appropriated more money than they should. He knows very well that every one of the state officers in that year 1891 were Republicans; and that they told the Legislature just what appropriations were necessary to run the state, and that the Legislature did not pass any appropriations, (except that for the twine plant), not asked for by the Republican party through its state officials.

We challenge the Governor to point to any Legislature in the history of the state that put forth more good and useful laws than that of 1891, when the Alliance had one-fourth of the members. What will they do next winter if you give them a majority in both branches?

He boasts of the last session but what did it do? It increased the appropriation for the national "blowout" at Chicago $100,000 over the $50,000 voted in 1891. And what for? What benefit has the state realized? It gave a lot of our citizens fat places and a big treat:—but wherein is the common voter any better off? And our little state building at the World's Fair was lost in the grandeur of the general display. It was as conspicuous as a fly-speck on a locomotive-wheel. We appropriated $185,000 to cheapen the price of the farmers' twine. The Republicans spent $150,000 to exhibit a stuffed moose, and a commission of worthy gentlemen, who were better stuffed than the moose before they got through. Our work will endure for years. Where is the moose and the commission and the "blow out" now? Where is that $150,000?

What next? They initiated an expenditure of two million dollars to build a new state capitol, by levying a tax on the people; and their Supreme court then killed our State Elevator bill, which might have enabled the people to pay the tax. Nothing that will help the people is constitutional in Republican courts.

What else?

The Governor says they passed an important law to enable farmers to build elevators on the right of way of railroad companies, or to get side tracks if they built on their own land.

Very opportunely, Mr. A. H. Hendrickson, Secretary of our State Alliance, sends us the following letter, which shows the practical operation of these laws and their futility to help the producers.

ERSKINE, Minn., Sept. 26, 1894.

H. A. Hendrickson, Secretary State Farmers' Alliance, Sauk Center, Minn.—

Dear Sir: I thought I would write you a few lines in regard to the Northwestern Grain Growers' Association, also informing you as to the experience we have had here at Erskine with the Great Northern Railway Company in our endeavors to obtain a lease for a site for an elevator or warehouse.

As secretary of our Alliance (Scandia Alliance No. 643), I received your circular advising the necessity of organizing a local Grain Growers' Association. We have not called a meeting for such purpose as yet as we have been awaiting the result of our application for a site for an elevator from the railroad company. If we cannot get a location or site for our elevator or warehouse from the railroad company, I don't see much use in organizing a Grain Growers' Association.

We have organized a Farmers' Elevator Company here and incorporated under the co-operative law of this state (style of company is "The Farmers' Elevator Company of Erskine"). It is a stock company. We applied for a site for an elevator or warehouse of the size of 20x40; 16-foot posts, exclusive of cupola, at an estimated capacity of 10,000 bushels. The objection of the railroad company to granting us the site is that the house would be too small. They don't care to grant sites for elevators of less capacity than 30,000 bushels; so they say in their refusal.

We applied for a site in acordance with the new law of 1893, and stated (and tendered) the amount we deemed reasonable as compensation to the company for such site, namely, an annual rental of $5.00. Having been refused, then, according to that law, we could now, of course, take an appeal to the district court. If we should be successful enough to win in that court, the railroad company has a right to appeal to the state supreme court, and what chance would we stand there? Most likely the result would be the same as in the state warehouse or elevator (at Duluth) case, and we would incur great expenses, disrupt our company and receive no redress.

There is a law (also of 1893), entitled, "An act to provide for the construction of sidetracks and switches upon the right of way of railroad companies, to elevators, warehouses, mills or manufactories, located on lands adjacent to the right of way of any railroad company in this state." Now, I don't know which one of these two laws it would be best to proceed under. It seems it rests entirely with the railroad and warehouse commission to decide under this law last referred to, in case the owners of such proposed elevator and the railroad company cannot agree as to "terms and conditions." On the other hand, the first law takes the matter of dispute into the courts. According to both laws, it seems to me, it is only a question as to compensation to the railroad company for constructing, maintaining and operating such sidetrack. So in both cases it would be a matter of expense to our company. This seems queer to common people, as erecting more elevators (there is now only one elevator at Erskine) would naturally build up the market and thus bring more wheat to Erskine and more traffic to the railroad company. Erskine is also a competing market with Fertile and Red Lake Falls, on the Northern Pacific railroad, a rival road. Respectfully yours, J. E. OPPEGAARD, President Farmers' Elevator Company of Erskine.

But the governor says the Warehouse law, passed in 1873, known as "the Governor's bill," was of great benefit to the farmers. We would like to know where that benefit comes in. We do not know that several officers of farmer's warehouse-companies have complained, through the columns of this paper, that this law compelled them to shut up their buildings, and left the people more completely than ever at the mercy of the Elevator Combine.

And the Governor says that the expenditures of the Legislature, in 1891, for legislative expenses, officers, etc., were very much greater than in 1893. Suppose they were. The whole cost of the Legislature of 1891, was $162,953.52; and this divided between two years, under our biennial system, amounted to but $80,476.76 per annum; while the cost of the Judicial Department was $128,000; the Executive Department $83,000 per year; the State University $166,000 per year; the four hospitals for the insane and feeble-minded, (that means the old parties), cost us $401,841.51 in 1891, and the Reform School cost us $160,255.84!! The truth is, the cost of the Legislature is a mere bagatelle;—about five cents a year per capita. The whole process of self government,—the law-making part—costs us half as much as the street vagrants of St. Paul and Minneapolis! And yet our governor would seek to distract attention from the great issues, involving millions of dollars, and the prosperity of the whole people, by an outcry about a few extra clerks and doorkeepers. It is not worthy of him.

And by the way, we desire our friends, while noting how small a part of our total state revenue, of $3,321,078.53, (in 1893), is taken to pay the expenses of our legislative biennal session, equal to $80,476.76 per year, to observe the trick that has been played upon us, by the Plutocracy, in confining our period of legislation to one month and a half, or 45 days, in a year, or 90 days in two years, on the pretence of economy! We save $80,000 a year, in law-making, and we mal-administer $3,321,078.53!! We save at the spigot and waste at the bung. We plug up a gimlet hole and knock out the head of the barrel. The governor's microscopic mind sees the extra clerk hire; but the robberies of the pine lands, principally by Republicans, never were arrested until men who did not belong to the Republican party took up the work.

The Governor is claiming great credit for the pending investigation of the Pine Land Frauds which has already placed nearly $40,000 in the treasury of the state; has instituted additional suits for $100,000; and has revealed frauds on the public of a million dollars; all at a cost of $6,000. But the truth is that that whole investigation was originated by a People's Party senator; and after the bill passed the Senate it was stolen by a Republican member from Minneapolis, who disappeared with it. This was on the last day of the session, on which bills could be passed. It looked as if the investigation was killed; but the Journal shows that I at once, April 17, 1893, introduced a new joint resolution, S. F. No. 577, explained the situation to the Senate, had all the rules suspended, and the bill was read the first, second and third time and passed at once, with only one dissenting vote. I got the Secretary of the Senate to carry it over to the House; I accompanied him; posted our friends, Dick Walsh, Bjorge, and others; prevented the bill going to a committee, and it was passed by the House, with an amendment. I hurried back to the House and moved that the Senate concur in the House amendment. Thereupon Senator Crandall, a Republican, moved to put on another amendment, which would have sent it back to the House and possibly have defeated it, in the awful rush, clamor and pressure of business of that last day, (hundreds of bills being on the Speaker's table that could not be reached and never were reached); I opposed Crandall's motion; it was lost; yeas 11, nays 32. Of the 11 yeas eight were Republicans and three were Democrats,—not an Alliance man among them. And thus the investigation was started. And then the republican attorney general decided that it could not proceed, because the appropriation had not been made, by "a bill," while it was a bill, (S. F. 577.) It is true that Governor Nelson helped us to get past that obstruction—but the obstruction was made in his own official, Republican family; and he knew very well that if we had not got past it the Republican party could have shut up shop in Minnesota forever.

I say nothing of the Coal Combine Investigation, the State Elevator, and many other measures of 1893, in which Populists took a prominent part; and which were interfered with, if not defeated, by Republican officials, executive and judicial.

The truth is, and every man in Minnesota knows it, that the Alliance and People's Party have been the motive power and incitement to every effort for legitimate reform, during the past fifteen years; and the stronger they grew the more they have been able to do. We make no personal fight on Governor Nelson, but if the people want the abuses under which they suffer abated they will vote for the People's Party, especially the legislative ticket, and give it a chance to help them. Certainly they need a change. Their condition cannot be made worse than it is. Will they help us? We believe they will! They are not fools. They are not going to vote longer to help the robbers who are plundering them. I. D.

Send in Orders.

From the Representative.

Every edition of the REPRESENTATIVE from now until election will be a valuable campaign document. Extra copies can be procured at prices named elsewhere for the edition of Oct. 31, but orders accompanied by the cash must be in by the Monday preceding the day of publication. Candidates will find it good policy to order these editions.

Sound.

From the Representative.

Judge O. P. Stearns, of Duluth, once a Republican United States senator from Minnesota, in a recent letter to the Duluth Commonwealth, says:

> Keep it before the people that the constantly falling prices of commodities, the strangulation of enterprise, the non-employment of labor and hard times generally are the direct result of the scarcity and consequent dearness of real, ultimate money, caused by the demonetization of silver and that the only prompt and certain remedy is by its remonetization.

Still They Come.

From the Representative.

The Svenska Amerikanska Posten, a Swedish paper printed in Minneapolis, with a circulation of 34,000, has come out strongly for Mr. Owen this week.

The Penny Press has already announced itself for Mr. Owen. While it does not claim to be a People's Party paper, it will, no doubt, make itself felt in the canvass.

GREAT consternation was caused at the capitol at St. Paul last week by the news that the Svenska Folkets Tidning, one of the leading Swedish papers of this state, had declared unreservedly for Mr. Owen for governor. The influence of this able paper will be widely felt.

Don't Forget It.

From the Representative.

Don't forget that the reason the People's Party nominated Judge Willis for the Supreme Bench was because he showed in numerous decisions, as District Judge of Ramsey county, that his sympathies were all on the side of the common people and against the Corporations and Rings. He decided that the State Elevator act was constitutional, but the Supreme Court reversed him. We want him on the Supreme Bench to prevent the Elevator and other Rings wiping out any legislation which may be passed next winter in the interest of the farmers and workingmen. And for the same reason we want Sumner Ladd there. If you elect both, the court will stand four Populists and one Republican. Stand by Willis and Ladd. Talk to your friends and neighbors and explain the situation to them, and get all the votes you can for Willis and Ladd. It is of vital importance. I. D.

To Amend the Constitution.

From the Representative.

At the coming election an amendment to Section I, Article 9, will be voted on. It is proposed to add the following words:

"And provided further, that there may be by law levied and collected a tax upon inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description above a fixed and specified sum, of any and all natural persons and corporations. Such tax above such exempted sum may be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum tax of 5 per cent."

This amendment should be adopted.

Pillsbury Puzzled.

From the Representative.

> Talking to a reporter today, W. C. Van Horne said it was extremely difficult to account for the continued slump in wheat, and he did not see how it could last. One unfortunate circumstance was that wheat had lost every friend it had on the continent. Men who had stood by it and kept on buying long had all been bitten, so that they had finally chucked up the job, and in disgust left wheat to care for itself. While in Minneapolis he had talked the question over with C. A. Pillsbury, and that gentleman had agreed that wheat could not long stay where it was. At the present time it was cheaper, pound for pound, than corn. When it is remembered that wheat produces more high wines, starch, and, in fact, every other article in which it and corn are used for, than corn does, it must be self-evident that wheat must go up. "Or else go down," suggested the reporter. "Well, yes, that might be the result, but Pillsbury seems to think that wheat will go up. However, I have retired from the business of prophet on wheat, or anything else, and I really don't know that I have any definite opinion to offer."
> "What about the times?"
>
> "Well, they are bad enough, heaven knows, but they are not so bad in Canada as they are in the states, and it looks to me as if they were going to worse in the Central States."
>
> "Do you think we have seen the worst in Canada?"
>
> "Well, yes; I rather think we have scraped along bottom and are an inch or so above. I don't look for things getting any worse than they are, and I hear that in the Northwest here you are likely to be some better, owing to the fact that farmers did not contract many debts this year. But the price of your wheat is so low that it does not leave a great deal to buy with."

People's party papers have published and republished undisputed tables going to show that the price of wheat has fallen steadily with the contraction of the currency and the fall in the price of silver, caused by its demonetization. Some of the most eminent financiers of Europe have admitted this statement to be true.

The remonetization of silver will, if it succeeds with free coinage back of it, put wheat on the up-grade once more and restore the country its lost prosperity.

The way to bring that about is to vote the People's party ticket.

Gives It Up.

From the Representative.

The Minneapolis Times, a leading Democratic paper, said editorially on Tuesday morning, Oct. 9:

> It is by no means certain that the "Penny Press," in declaring itself the personal organ of S. M. Owen, has not climbed upon the band wagon. It is quite within the range of political possibility that Mr. Owen may be elected. The Populists are making a vigorous and telling canvass, and if reports of their meetings throughout the state are reliable, they are making a strong impression upon the rural voters. The Republicans are going to find it very difficult to hold the regular party, while the Democratic vote, to judge from present indications, will fall off many thousands from that of two years ago. If the Populists are going to be strong enough to elect their governor, it is reasonable to assume that they will be able to largely increase their representation in the state legislature. Indeed, it now seems probable that they will hold the balance of power in the contest for the United States senatorship, and may be able to compel the election of a Populist senator.

H. W. Childs.

From the Representative.

No voter in this state who takes any interest in the preservation of the school and university funds should cast a ballot for H. W. Childs, the Republican candidate for attorney general. Mr. Childs rendered an opinion that the sale of a section of school pine land in Mille Lacs county at private sale and for less than half of its value was a legal sale. The court unanimously set this opinion aside and saved to the state $7,500 on half of the section. When the other half is sold again it will show a saving of at least $7,500 more, making $15,000 for the section. Hundreds of sections have been sold in the same manner and for less than one-half of their value. Mr. Childs was either the agent of the pine land ring or he was grossly ignorant of the law. One of these conclusions is inevitable, and either one disqualifies him for re-election.

The People's party has in the person of Mr. J. A. Keyes an honest man running for this office. If he is elected these illegal sales and robberies of the school children of Minnesota will be unearthed and hundreds of thousands of dollars returned to the school fund. Vote for Keyes.

Not Quite.

From the Representative.

Knute Nelson, in his own good time and his own sensible way, announced down in Albert Lea that he was not a candidate for United States senator, and would serve out his term if elected governor in November.—Anoka Union.

Oh, no, Brother Pease! Gov. Nelson said he expected to serve out his term as governor if elected—which he wont be. He has never yet said that he would serve the term out.

Don't be Fooled.

From the Representative.

A vote for Gen. Becker for governor, or for the Democratic state ticket, is a half vote for Nelson and Republican rule in this state. It is a vote to let the pine land ring continue its robberies of the school and university funds. There is not a man in Minnesota who dare put up one dollar that the Democratic ticket will not be third in the race when the votes are counted.

The race is between Owen and Nelson. Everybody recognizes that to be the fact. Nelson and the Republican state central committee have already recognized it. Their whole canvass is directed against Owen and the People's party state ticket. Their hope is to fool enough Democrats into voting for Becker to elect Nelson by a plurality. The scheme will fail, for the people are on to it and will vote accordingly. The Democratic state ticket can not secure 30,000 votes, all told. The people are going to defeat Nelson and they know that the only way in which to do it is to vote for Owen straight.

Effect of a Demonetized Currency.

The following table tells the story of the infamous manner in which the interests of the Southern and Western farmer have been assassinated through the gold bug legislation of the past 20 years. Read it, ye industrial toilers, and then answer candidly whether or not you want any more of the same kind. If you do, then keep right on voting the old party ticket. By the way, examine the table carefully, and then kindly point out wherein "tariff agitation" has figured to bring about these conditions:

Year.	Wheat.	Cotton.	Silver.
1872	$1.47	$0.19.3	$1.32
1873	1.31	18.8	1.29
1874	1.43	15.4	1.27

1876	1.24	12.9	1.15
1877	1.17	11.8	1.20
1878	1.37	11.1	1.15
1879	1.07	9.9	1.12

1882	1.19	11.4	1.13
1883	1.13	10.8	1.11
1884	1.07	10.0	1.01

1892	.80	8.7	.88
1893	.50	7.2	.83

Cut this out, says the New Whatcomb Champion, and when one of your old party friends begins to talk "tariff" just switch him on this table and ask him to explain the relationship between the foregoing complication and "tariff agitation."

How to vote on county division NO.

Arlington Enterprise: The address by Hon S. M. Owen at Esser's hall last Wednesday night was an able one and was well appreciated by the large audiance present. He expounded good, sound People's party doctrine and any one who says that he is a calamity howler or an anarchist is sadly mistaken. There is nothing whatever in his address that could be taken for calamity howling or anarchism. It was a plain sensible argument in favor of the people as against the money power, for government ownership of railroads, for free coinage of silver and for equal rights to all, Lack of space prevents us from giving a more extended report of the speech.

It must amuse the English capitalists to read in our papers how alarmed we are lest we should adopt some law favorable to England. Bless your soul, they own most of what is profitable in this country anyway. They own our big mills. Pillsbury is the agent of an English syndicate. They hold most of our railroad securities and a good sized chunk of our national debt. They own the big breweries and distilleries and a short time ago they bought ten million dollars worth of paper mills down in Wisconsin. Protection against England is becoming protection to English capital invested here and to its owners—living in England.—Norman County Herald.

There seems to be a wide-spread opinion in all of the political parties through-out the state that the outlook for the re-election of Governor Nelson is a gloomy one. The democrats insist that the republicans are deserting him and will vote for Becker and the republicans are equally positive that the deserting Becker and will vote for Owen, The fact is that the independent ones in both of the old parties who are opposed to the political job put up by Nelson and Hill will vote for the populist candidate as a protest against that kind of dirty work.—Crookston Times.

A fine load of wheat-fed hogs raised and fattened on wheat in Northcote, Kittson county, away up near the Canada line, were killed yesterday at O'Leary's packing house. They are very fine, and dressed out as well as any corn fed hogs that come to these yards. These can be raised clear outside of what used to be known as the "hog district," and "corn belt," it means a dawn of prosperity for the Northwest. There is an abundance of cheap wheat in this country, and we expect to see many loads of choice wheat-fed hogs in the yard this winter.—St. Paul Reporter.

In referring to such men as S. M. Owen as long-haired wild-eyed populists Gov Nelson used very poor judgment. Make no mistake about S. M. Owen. He is a more able, more conservative and more trustworthy man than either Gov. Nelson or General Becker, and he is proving it every day by his gentlemanly broad-minded utterances on the stump. He is above trickery or jobbery of any kind and in his advocacy of the right is courageous and unselfish to a marked degree, These are qualities the people admire and the more they see of Mr. Owen the more they are coming to believe he is a safe man to trust in any position. If he is elected governor—and the indications are that he will be—Minnesota will never have to blush for any of his acts, Crookston Times.

The men who have been doing the bidding of the money power are taking trips to Europe since congress adjourned. The poor men whose votes elect such traitors are eking out a miserable existence and waiting for election day to repeat their folly as they have just done in Maine.

No producer puts the price on what he produces. Prices are fixed by the speculator who produce nothing but mischief, I can think of no exception to this rule. A gold miner can not put the price on his product—the Bank of England does that, The coal operator not the miner, the oil operator, not the actual workers those who control the market, not the farmer, and so on down the list. Why the millions who produce are willing to support a system—a theory of society—that allows a few to govern them like so many menial slaves, is the great problem, What can be done to get them to see their degraded condition? I read a dispatch the other day that the natives of Hawaii desired royalty re-established. They had been raised that way. They have been kept in subjection so long that they knew no other way. We look at them in pity and wonder at human beings who demand their own subjection to the whim or fancy of a few. But we, in our boasted enlightenment, are doing the same thing. We demand, at least uphold, a system that enables a few idle, worthless members of society to place on our labor their own price, and thus as completely enslave us as could be desired by any ruler. What more could a ruler ask than to have the people serve him on such terms as he should elect. Strange, blind menial Americans.—The Coming Nation.

LOYAL TO GOV. WAITE

PEOPLE'S PARTY OF COLORADO WILL STAND BY THE MAN OF NERVE.

He Will Be Re-elected Governor and Then Sent to the Senate—Lafe Pence Is Made of the Right Kind of Stuff—An Able Man For Lieutenant Governor.

Davis H. Waite will not be the next governor of Colorado. This is an official fact that will be received with surprise by a great many people who imagine themselves members of the inner arcana and are figuring on their rewards for active support during the campaign. His excellency has loftier aspirations, and there is scarcely a shadow of doubt that his political plans will be carried to their full fruition. He has not made a single error in his calculations so far, and there is every reason to believe that he will not make a faux pas of his latest and loftiest aspiration. He will represent Colorado in the next or Fifty-fourth congress as the successor of Senator Wolcott. In making the race for governor he simply seeks vindication at the hands of his constituents, who, by their election two years ago, enabled him to teach the bankers an object lesson on the rights of labor. For his service in their cause the executive has been abused and vilified to an extent without parallel, even in the cases of Altgeld and Pennoyer, his able and fearless contemporaries in the field of national politics. He has been extensively described as the insane governor of Colorado, and his enemies have been sleepless in their attempts to cover his administration with odium.

Notwithstanding these assertions the governor today can challenge his slanderers to adduce a single case where the courts have not sustained him in whatever action he took. But this is not the kind of a vindication Waite is after. He is a man of broad caliber, who rises above the petty local jackals who bark in his wake, and he is going to make an appeal to the people of the United States from the senate chamber. The one man who might possibly have disputed the honor of a nomination with him is Lafayette Pence.

The latter has retired from the field by accepting the nomination for a second term in congress from this district. Pence is a firm friend of the administration, and during the few weeks that intervened between his return home and the date of the state convention at Pueblo he was the governor's most active supporter in the state canvass. It is true that he was after the nomination for the senate and expected the indorsement of the Pueblo convention; but as the campaign shaped itself he was persuaded to abandon his pet scheme to save the party in Arapahoe county, where the hardest fight of the season will be made. The Republicans had decided to put up their strongest candidate in the First district and stiffen his knees with generous financial aid. Inevitable defeat stared the Populists in the face, and the only name that savored of victory was that of the young man who had just completed his first term in congress. He was appealed to, and although he declared that there was plenty of good timber in the ranks the people were not in a mood to try any experiments at a critical time. Finally, when the first congressional convention was called to order, a spontaneous call was sent out for the choice of the people Pence responded, and after reaching the platform wept at the demonstration that greeted his appearance. He told the convention that he was there to do his duty to the party aside from all individual interests and would go into the campaign side by side with Governor Waite. He will stump the state in the governor's behalf, and it is fondly believed that next March will see Waite and Pence representing this state in Washington.

Under these circumstances the nomination of the lieutenant governor is imbued with new interest. The nominee is S. W. Harmon, a young and active member of the cigarmakers' union, who has made his mark in labor circles through his close attention to legislative work. He compiled a set of laws for the consideration of the special session, about which there was such an outcry last winter. Most of his suggestions were enacted into laws, and the remainder will be submitted to the regular biennial session in January. Mr. Harmon is a self poised man and will make an able executive officer for the state. He will follow the same lines as the present governor, and the cause of labor will be safe in his hands.

Reports from the interior towns favor the nomination of a straight Populist legislature. Last session there was an even break on polling the house and one majority for the joint Republicans and Democrats, who were given the organization by the defection of a Populist from Kiowa county. The senate stood 7 White Wing Democrats, 15 Republicans and 13 Populists. The next time the forces measure words it will be found that the young party has grown and that there will be do dickering for control. This insures the election of a Populist senator, and the name of Waite will be the only one before the party. The party is loyal to Waite.—Denver Cor. Chicago Times.

Chicago Workmen Are Populists.

If you would form an idea of the feelings among Chicago workingmen, here is the vote taken at one of the street car barns this week to settle a wager, the vote being taken by ballot: Republicans, 17; tariff reform, 1; Populists, 213. Last year there were not to exceed five Populists in the crowd.—Searchlight.

Look Out For Alabama Tactics.

Since ex-Senator Reagan of Texas practically bolted the state ticket, with its mongrel financial plank and indorsement of Cleveland, prominent Democrats admit that the Populists may carry the state. But the Pops will have to be very watchful for "Alabama tactics."—Cleveland Citizen.

RAILROADS IN AUSTRALIA.

The People of the Country Will Never Allow Them to Pass Into Private Hands.

The American consul general at Melbourne has sent an exhaustive report to the state department relative to government control of the railroads in Australia. Among other things the report says:

"The railways practically represent the assets for the national debts of each colony and today would probably realize, if they were to be disposed of, the full amount of national indebtedness. It is, however, improbable that the people concerned will ever allow these great possessions to pass into private hands, believing that they should be retained to open and develop the resources of the colonies and aid in the national progress of Australia.

"It is agreed, however, that to a certain extent the railway administration should be separated from politics. The construction and direction of new lines may well be left to parliament to determine, but the management of the lines and the control of the railway's daily working, it is held, are matters for skilled and capable railway managers, untrammeled by the exigencies that political considerations would often cause to influence the political mind. Each railway system is under the control of three commissioners, who have had large powers to administer free from political interference, and those best able to judge are of the opinion that the system has worked well.

"The completion of the now celebrated bridge over the Hawkesbury brought the four principal cities of the colonies into direct railway communication, and viewed from the population per mile of line point Australia can boast even now of being better served by its railways than any other country in the world."

This report differs materially from the statements of the plutocratic press of this country. From it we are to infer that railroad ownership has bankrupted Australia. The truth is always best.

Who Saved the Country?

Who saved the country in the civil war?

Was it the banker, to whose ear the clink of gold is music to the sphere?

Was it the merchant, whose ambition is to buy things cheap and sell them dear?

Was it the lawyer, who fattens on the quarrels of fellow men?

No, a thousand times no!

It was the farmer's boy, who left his plow in the unfinished furrow.

It was the mechanic, who flung his unwiped tools upon his bench.

It was the laborer, who dropped his shovel in the sewer.

Whose blood crimsoned the fields of Bull Run, Antietam, South Mountain, Fredericksburg, the slimy swamps of Chickahominy, the peninsula before Petersburg, the trenches in front of Vicksburg, the fair farms of famous Gettysburg, the bloody road to Richmond, when the nation stood with bated breath and heard or thought it heard the crash of cannon, the shock of steel, the hissing, hurling, shrieking shell, which tore through the canopied curtain of night, dealing death on every hand?

When day was night and night was day?

When battle blazoned all its hellish horrors on the crimsoned calendar of history?

When men laid down their lives that our own Mississippi might run unvexed, untrammeled to the sea?

A Silver Centennial.

The centennial anniversary of the beginning of silver coinage in this country will soon be reached. It was on Oct. 15, 1794, that the Philadelphia mint turned out 1,785 of these dollars, each one of 371½ grains of pure silver, with the words "Dollar unit" milled on the edges. The silver dollar was then what the gold dollar is now—the standard of value. And it remained so until its final demonetization in 1873.

The hundredth recurrence of this anniversary will doubtless be used by the friends of free silver coinage to make a demonstration favorable to that metal. And such a historic occasion, it must be admitted even by those who are opposed to restoring silver to the exalted place it held during more than three-quarters of our national existence, should not be passed over without proper observance.

Silver is and must always remain a large part of our currency, and as such the date of its introduction into our monetary system must remain an important one in our history.—St. Louis Republic.

Maybe Not Now.

Oh, that workingmen were not such blind fools! How easy it is to get 500,000 men to stand together, fight, starve, endure, die for a paltry 10 cents per day, but to get them to march together solidly to the ballot box and there vote out the old system and take over to themselves their own business and receive the whole product of their labor for their wages; to vote out the old swarms of suckers that devour them; to bring in the rein of peace and righteousness and plenty on earth—that seems impossible.—Author of "Dogs and Fleas."

The belief of the Egyptians in a future state of existence gave rise to the practice of embalming the dead. They wished to carefully preserve the body, so that the soul upon its return to its former abode at the end of all things might find it ready for its reception. Bodies were embalmed in three different ways. The most expensive and magnificent method was used upon the bodies of kings and other persons of distinguished rank, the cost amounting to a talent of silver, or $610.

A number of persons were employed in the process of embalming, and they were treated with great respect. They filled the cavities of the body with myrrh, cinnamon, spices and many kinds of sweet smelling drugs.

After a certain time had elapsed the body was swathed in lawn fillets, which were glued together with a kind of thin gum, and then crusted over with costly perfumes. By this mode of embalming the shape of the body, the lineaments of the face, the eyebrows and eyelashes were preserved in their natural perfection. Bodies thus embalmed are what we now call Egyptian mummies.—Philadelphia Times.

Dr. Price's Baking Powder

California, empire of the Pacific, salutes the world. Her Midwinter Fair closed in a midsummer blaze of glory. Second only to the Columbian Exposition in extent, variety and splendor, the coast display was a veritable triumph. Out of her abundance the state poured her treasures—and the nations of the earth came to aid her in her noble exhibition.

Memorable were the exhibits—of gold and silver, of wheat and oil, of fruit and wine, of silk and wool—of all that man and nature could combine to produce. And no exhibit attracted more attention or excited warmer approval than that of

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Official tests showed it to be highest in leavening power, purest in quality, and most efficient in results of all baking powders made. Accordingly, the Highest Award and Gold Medal were conferred on Dr. Price's at the Midwinter Fair.

The triumph at San Francisco confirms the victory at Chicago. The Midwinter Fair verdict sustains and vindicates the bestowal of highest honors on Dr. Price's by the jury of awards at the World's Columbian Exposition.

Sensitive to Noise.

M. Octave Feuillet, from all accounts must have been a hard man to live with. Mme. Feuillet, who ought to know, declares that he was a victim to his nerves. A strange voice, one he was unaccustomed to, in the house, made him wild. When he was ailing mattresses had to be piled up against his doors, so as to keep out the ordinary noises. When in the country the crowing of cocks, the crackling of hens the neighing of horses made him frantic. For a man of poetical temperament the twitter of swallows, the chirping of sparraws, caused him agony. By steady pistol practice says his wife, he exterminated all the owls in a country garden where he was living.

Black Hosiery Is Doomed.

In Paris the cry has gone up, "No more black stockings," and the shops in Paris are eager to please, and, obedient to the voices of their fashionable customers, exhibit now heaps of silk and thread hosiery, all of the same color, but infinitely varied in shades, from the dark gray, called the steel gray, to the palest dove tint; a few white articles are seen among the lot, and far away, in a remote corner, a thousand pairs of black silk stockings, open-worked, as thin as the webs of the spider, lovely, but disdained and snubbed by their friends of old, are given away almost for nothing.

Too Much Sameness.

Manager—Well, how do you like being an understudy?

Miss Wings—Not much. It's all work and no play.

A FLEMISH OBSERVANCE.

Religious Procession Much Like the Passion Play.

The quaint little Flemish town of Furnes, situated twelve miles from Dunkirk, has just celebrated its annual procession with a fervor of the Middle Ages. This procession, which in reality is a passion play, enacted by groups was instituted many years ago, in atonement for the sacrilegious act of two soldiers, and has since undergone no change. The town becomes for this single day in the year the rendexvous for devotees and pilgrims from all parts of Belgium. The procession consists of forty groups and the costumes many of which are provided by the inhabitants of the town, who regard it as an privilage to figure among the actors—are of the richest description.

The sacrifice of Abraham, the prophets, St. John leading a lamb, the stable of Bethlehem, with Mary and a child, the shepherds, the kings of the East, the flight into Egypt, and all the episodes of the Saviour's life, His entry into Jerusalem with the Apostles, the Last Supper, the Garden of Olives, the betrayal of Judas, and the scenes of the crucifixion are the groups which constitute the panorama of the Passion. Each group is preceded by penitents wearing long robes, with head and face concealed by a cowl, and walking barefooted. As soon as the passion play is over the public houses are besieged and dancing begins in the numerous booths set up for the occasion

A SCORE ARE INJURED

BAD ACCIDENT ON A RAILROAD IN LOUISIANA.

A Train Crashes Into the Rear Coach of an Excursion Train at a Crossing, Injuring a Score of People—It Was the Engineer's Fault.

New Orleans, Oct. 16. — Engineer Simpson, of the East Louisiana railroad, is responsible for a frightful accident that occurred this morning at the crossing of the Louisville & Nashville and Northwestern roads, about two miles from where the Louisville & Nashville road leaves Elysianfields street—an accident that will, in all probability result in at least one fatality, while a score of passengers on the Louisville & Nashville received severe injuries.

The Louisville & Nashville "across-the-lake" excursion train, consisting of eight coaches well loaded with pleasure seekers, a large proportion of them being women and children, pulled out on time. As the train approached the crossing of the Northwestern tracks Engineer Hanley brought his train to a stop and whistled, as the law requires. He then gave the signal to go ahead, and proceeded across the tracks of the Northwestern. The Louisiana train, carrying excursionists to points in Saint Tammany parish, was booming along its tracks, and with a shrill whistle for "down brakes," it crashed into the sixth coach of the Louisville & Nashville train. The collision threw a crowded coach completely into the ditch, while the attacking engine was derailed and buried its nose several feet in the soft mud. Passengers on the East Louisiana train were uninjured except by the shock of the collision. Not so with the coast excursion, however. Just before the iron monster struck the coach several of the passengers saw it coming and a panic ensued. There was a wild rush to escape from the doomed coach, but before one of the passengers could reach either platform the approaching engine had struck and the coach with its live freight was hurled from the tracks into the ditch. Women and children shrieked in their terror, while men fought their way blindly for some escape from the coach. Seats were torn up and hurled in every direction by the force of the collision, and after the first wild panic had subsided there were heard piteous moans from different quarters of the wreck, telling of painful injuries. Willing hands went to work and within a short time the wounded ones had been taken from the coach and made as comfortable as circumstances would permit. The greatest indignation and anger prevailed among the witnesses of the collision against Engineer Simpson, who had ruthlessly disregarded the law requiring him to stop, and had caused the frightful wreck. Inquiry developed the fact that Simpson had escaped to the swamp.

HIS SIN PUBLIC.

Why Col. Breckinridge Is Suspended From Mount Horeb Church.

Paris, Ky., Oct. 16.—Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge has been suspended from communion by Mount Horeb church in La Fayette county. The pastor of the church, Rev. Charles L. Thompson, gives the Kentuckian Citizen the following statement of the action of the church:

"On last Sunday morning at the Mount Horeb church was read publicly the action of the church concerning Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, who had made to them a confession of his guilt and asked the prayers and love of his brethren in leading a Christian life. The unanimous decision of the officers was that while accepting his repentance as sincere and heartfelt the great publicity of the sin demanded some public action, so he was suspended from the sacraments till Feb. 1, 1895. The law of the Presbyterian church book of church orders, paragraph 158, is definite suspension is administered when the credit of religion, the honor of Christ, and the good of the offender demand it, even though he may have given satisfaction to the court."

Three Drowned.

Brooklyn, Oct. 16.—Yesterday afternoon a catboat containing four men was struck by a squall off Coney Island and capsized. The accident was witnessed by a number of people on shore, and John and Daniel Bailey of Coney Island immediately started to the rescue in a small boat. They succeeded in reaching one of the party, who was clinging to the overturned boat and brought him ashore in an unconscious condition. He was finally resuscitated. He said that his name was Walter Booth, and that his companions, who were drowned, were Frank McIntyre, James Ford and Frank Britton, all of New Brighton.

Grant's Classmate.

Las Vegas, N. Mex., Oct. 16.—Henry H. Green died at Moral last night. He came to this country in 1854. He was a classmate of Gen. Grant at West Point, and the general appointed him internal revenue collector in 1868. He was stationed at Fort Dearborn when Chicago had not yet been started even as a village. He was a Mexican war veteran with a proud record, and was connected with the army in New Mexico for a great many years, chiefly in the quartermaster's department. He was seventy-one years of age at the time of his death.

A Good Deal of a Jump.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Capt. Montague W. Martin, a young English officer, who came to New York with a body of English cavalry last winter, jumped from the Poughkeepsie bridge to the water, 130 feet below. He was picked up unconscious after a few moments. He was revived with some difficulty, and it was found that he had suffered a slight wrench of the right knee, but he was apparently uninjured otherwise. The jump was made on a wager.

No Sugar Bounty.

Washington, Special.—Judge McComas, of the district supreme court, to-day denied the application of the Miles Sugar Manufacturing Company of Louisiana for a mandamus to compel Secretary Carlisle to appoint inspectors to ascertain the sugar production of the company. The object of the suit, it is understood, was to test the legality of the recent repeal of the sugar bounty provision of the McKinley law, and also to lay the foundation for an appeal to congress for payment of bounty for the current year.

A DAISY REPORTER

How He Gave Away a First Class Snap.

"As funny a thing as I ever knew of in the newspaper business," said the reformed reporter, "was the way Sandy McLean gave the Chicago Tribune a scoop. Now Sandy, to my way of thinking, is the best reporter in Chicago. He was a lawyer once, and a mighty good one, but he saw that the law had no such opportunities as the newspaper business, and he came to Chicago from the Iowa town where he was practicing and began work on one of the big dailies. He hadn't been there a week before the managing editor realized that he had a star, and Sandy was given every opportunity to make himself a name.

"He made it, too. He was put on big story after big story and beat every other reporter in the city. After a time he got to the Tribune and kept up his brilliant work. He was with the Tribune for a long time. The Herald and other papers wanted him, but Sandy stuck to the Tribune. He got a bit free and gay, but the old man put up with him. Finally patience ceased to be a virtue, and one day Sandy drifted into the office only to be told that they thought they might be able to get out a paper without him if they hustled.

"He went out whistling gayly and walked over to the Herald office. He told them the Tribune people had just fired him and asked for a job. The Herald was too glad to get him. They snapped him up right away. The next day Sandy reported for an assignment. The city editor of the Herald put him on a big story he had been keeping on the ice for awhile and told Sandy that it was exclusive.

"Sandy went out and got the facts. He found that he was the first and only newspaper man who knew anything about the tale, and it was a corker. He started back to the office to write it up. He had been so use to going to the Tribune office that he mechanically got off the car there and walked up to the local room. He sat down to his old desk, wrote the story and handed it to the city editor. The city editor saw that the story was sensational, put a scare head on it and ran it on the first page. The Tribune was the only paper that had it, and Sandy did not wake up to what he had done until he had got a note from the Herald city editor, next morning, calling him all sorts of names and discharging him. He got back to the Tribune, though, and he's there yet."—Buffalo Express.

STORIES TOLD BY OLD TREES.

Their Rings Tell of Wet and Dry Seasons a Hundred Years Ago.

It has been found that the rings of growth visible in the trunks of trees have a far more interesting story to tell than has usually been supposed. Everybody knows they indicate the number of years that the tree has lived, says the New York Advertiser, but J. Keuchler of Texas has recently made experiments and observations which seem to show that trees carry in their trunks a record of the weather conditions that have prevailed during the successive years of their growth. Several trees, each more than 130 years old, were felled, and the order and relative width of the rings of growth in their trunks were found to agree exactly. The fact showed that all the trees had experienced the same stimulation in certain years and the same retardation in other years. Assuming that the most rapid growth had occurred in wet years and the least rapid in dry years, it was concluded that out of the 134 years covered by the life of the trees sixty had been very wet, six extremely wet, eighteen wet, seventeen average as to the supply of moisture, nineteen dry, eight very dry and six extremely dry. But when the records of the rainfall, running back as far as 1840, were consulted it was found that they did not all agree with the record of the trees. Still it could not be denied that the rings in the trunks told a true story of the weather influences which had affected the trees in successive years. The conclusion was, therefore, reached that the record of the rings contained more than a mere index of the annual rainfall; that it showed what the character of the seasons had as to sunshine, temperature, evaporation, regularity of the supply of moisture and the like; in short, that the trees contained indelibly imprinted in their trunks more than 100 years of nature's history which we might completely decipher if we could but look upon the face of nature from a tree's point of view.

How to Clean Soiled White Shoes.

"I have ruined a half dozen pair of white shoes this summer," writes a bright young acquaintance to this department, "and yesterday I just sat down and had a hearty cry when I came home; I had been caught in a terrible shower, and there! my new white shoes were all muddy and ruined, I think, beyond reparation. Now, do tell me if there is any remedy, for papa says I shan't buy another pair of these 'ridiculous shoes,' and they are so stylish, you know." Now, if you are a sensible girl, you will not worry your father about the matter, but ask your druggist for a dime's worth of pipe clay; put a little in a dish, dry, and, with an old tooth or nailbrush, which has not lost its stiffness, brush the shoes hard, but always the same way as the grain of the leather or it will make them rough. Another way is to rub with deodorized benzine first, and then put on a coat of pipe clay and it remain over night.

The Laces of Ireland.

The revival of lace-making in Ireland will, no doubt, give Irish point again the preference. Much of the Irish point sold here is but a coarse crochetwork, and not to be admired. The real pillow lace of Ireland is fine, beautiful in design and workmanship. This is made by basting cards of varying sizes in designs upon stiff linen. The rings are formed by winding a cord about the finger or a large needle, holding them to ring form by a stitch or two, and then basting them into place. All cords are closely buttonholed with fine linen thread, only used for this purpose, and by catching the designs together with slender, hard-twisted cords. Sometimes the whole design is in closely buttonholed stitch, like old point, but having more piquets.

White Lady-Fingers.

A Boston cooking school receipt for white lady-fingers is as follows; Beat the whites of four eggs to a froth, add half a level teaspoonful of cream of tartar and beat until stiff; sift in gradually half a cupful of fine granulated sugar and beat without reversing the motion. Remove the beater and with a wooden spoon fold in a little at a time half a cupful of pastry flour that has been sifted four times, add half a teaspoonful of any desired flavor, press through a pastry bag and bake in the small tins used for lady-fingers. Sift powdered sugar lightly over the fingers and bake slowly twenty minutes.

Big Lynching Bee in A Kentucky Town.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 16. — Another lynching was added to the unusually large fall series of Bluegrass lynching bees to-day. At the close of the Beattyville fair Oscar Morton, a prominent citizen of Stanton, Powell county, went on the warpath. Only two weeks ago Morton killed his man at Stanton and was out on $5,000 bond to appear next week at the Powell circuit court. When Morton arrived at the fair he proceeded to get drunk and then went to hunt for Sheriff William Simms, who was his deadly enemy, a feud of long standing existing between the two men. Simms and Morton met near the entrance of the fair grounds, and after a few words both of them drew guns and a quick exchange of shots followed, Morton using two guns. His first shot broke the sheriff's right arm at the elbow, and John Hogg, a friend of Simms, whipped out his gun and joined in the battle. When the smoke had cleared away it was found that Sheriff Simms was dead, having a shot through his breast, one in his abdomen and another through his arm. Morton was shot through the neck, while Hogg was unhurt. Before a crowd could collect Morton was hustled to the county jail and placed under guard. The people became infuriated and a big meeting was at once held on the public square. Col. John Drummond mounted a barrel and made a speech in which he said that the murderer must be hanged, but that the work must be done quietly and with perfect order; Morton had killed two men in less than two weeks' time and he must die by the rope. A mob was quickly formed and marched to the jail. The jailer was overpowered and the keys to Morton's cell obtained. He was found lying in his shirt sleeves on the floor of his cell, and after a bitter struggle was seized and dragged out. He then became very impudent and told the mob he did not care what they did with him provided they did their work quickly. After a short parley he was taken to a little bridge some distance from town and the rope was placed around his neck. The leaders drew their guns and told him to jump or else he would be riddled with bullets. Turning around the doomed man cursed his captors and uttering a wild imprecation leaped into space. The jump broke his neck, and after dangling in the air for some minutes he became still and a volley of shots were fired into him. The murderer was a wealthy man who lived at Stanton.

AFTER HIS MONEY.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 16.—The police of this city believe that the murderer of Montgomery Gibbs of Buffalo has been run down at last. The woman, Sadie Robinson, who was taken to Buffalo last night after confessing that it was she who killed Gibbs, is believed to have told the truth in part at least.

Her husband is in jail here, charged with burglary, and a cousin of her's named Bert Snyder, is also under arrest on the same charge. A detective said to-day that Snyder had made a statement to the police which threw a flood of light on the Gibbs murder. Snyder said that Robinson had confessed the murder to him. According to the story Robinson and his wife arrived in Buffalo early last spring. They were penniless and decided to commit a robbery to get money. The woman donned men's clothing and she and her husband went to a lonely place on Delaware avenue to wait for a victim. Gibbs was the first well dressed man who happened along. He was told to throw up his hands, and when he resisted Robinson shot him. The couple then fled and the next morning they came to Cleveland. A dispatch from Buffalo says that Assistant Chief of Police Cusack of that city started for Cleveland again last night, and it is believed he will make a demand for Robinson on the strength of Snyder's story, which may have been corroborated by the woman who is closely guarded in the Buffalo city prison.

SUSPECTED TRAIN WRECKERS.

Four Men Arrested for Causing the Battle Creek Horror.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16.—The parties suspected of wrecking the Chicago & Grand Trunk train here on the morning of July 16 during the strike excitement, and who were the means of killing Fireman Crow and injuring about twenty other persons, have at last been arrested. To-day Stanley Knowles, Joseph Bodwig, George W. Johnson and E. M. Jewett are in confinement as the result of the efforts of five Chicago detectives. Knowles had been given positions on the road as part of the plan for the capture. Finally the detectives cornered him and extorted a confession, which is to the effect that the crime was committed while the men were desperate over the strike and their failure to prevent trains from running. Jewett and Bodwig are held in Chicago and will be brought here. The other two are held in hiding here by the detectives.

Fitch Is Receiver.

St. Paul, Special—Judge Sanborn, in the United States circuit court this morning signed an order appointing William F. Fitch, superintendent of the Duluth South Shore road, receiver of the Duluth & Winnipeg road, pending the foreclosure of the mortgage. The action was brought by the Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Company of Philadelphia, trustee under the mortgage, which secures bonds to the amount of $2,000,000. The total amount of bonds authorized was $7,000,000, and the issue of a further amount is enjoined.

A Glass Wedding.

All the glass that one can conjure up is the proper setting for a crystal wedding. The flowers arranged in all sorts of glass vessels and reflected in as many mirrors as possible, both through the house and on the table, and the use of glass as far as possible in serving the food, for the candlesticks, and even for the shades, are the possibilities of such a feast. If one's closet holds much cut-glass, it is particularly beautiful with yellow chrysanthemums, or scarlet gladiolus, or even with the scarlet geranium.

Alas! a Lass.

She—So you do not love me well enough to marry me, after all?

ASSIST NATURE a little now and then in removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels and you thereby avoid a multitude of distressing derangements and diseases, and will have less frequent need of your doctor's service.

Of all known agents for this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best. Once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and their attendant discomfort and manifold derangements. The "Pellets" are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. No care is required while using them; they do not interfere with the diet, habits or occupation, and produce no pain, griping or shock to the system. They act in a mild, easy and natural way and there is no reaction afterward. Their help lasts.

The Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. In proof of their superior excellence, it can be truthfully said, that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial. Put up in sealed, glass vials, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, or to relieve distress from over-eating, take one after dinner. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules; any child will readily take them.

Accept no substitute that may be recommended to be "just as good." It may be better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY

A Conservative Estimate of the Amount of Stealage of and Off From Federal and State Lands Reaches the Enormous Total of Nearly $700,000,000.

YET GOV. NELSON IGNORES THE ISSUE.

From the Representative.

Gov. Nelson and his supporters continue to ignore the real issue of the campaign, i. e. the perpetuation of the pine land ring by the re election of Nelson or its overthrow by his defeat.

The governor has not even deigned to notice the disclosures made by this paper. Copies of the paper have been sent to his confidential adviser and campaign manager, Tams Bixby, so that it is hardly possible "his excellency" has not heard of the expose.

There are then but two suppositions upon which to explain his silence: One is that he is afraid to meet the issue; the other that he is seeking by reticence to belittle it.

In either event Town Talk proposes to smoke the executive out of his hole. If he is afraid to meet the issue we will make it so hot with additional disclosures that he will be compelled to meet it or at least to notice it. On the supposition that the governor is seeking by silence to belittle the issue, we beg leave to call his attention and the attention of readers, to the fact that a conservative estimate of the stealings during the past 35 years from school, educational and United States lands, the fraudulent disposition of swamp lands fraudulently or collusively acquired from the United States, in this state, amounts to the appalling total of $657,131,817.

A careful perusal of the subjoined computation is respectfully commended to Gov. Nelson in the hope that he will appreciate the importance to the people of terminating the rule of the ring which has perpetrated these frauds.

It was in evidence before the pine lands investigating committee last session that the appraisers for the state had returned but 700,000 feet of timber on one of the school sections that C. A. Smith & Co—John S. Pillsbury & Co.—had a contract to cut, and yet it was proven that there was actually on that section 5,500,000 feet, or nearly eight times the state estimate.

It was also shown that C. A. Smith & Co, bought this timber at $2 per thousand, when later developments showed it to be worth $4.

Now if you will turn to the auditor's report for 1892 it will be found that the state has received from stumpage on state lands for a series of years the following:

On University lands, $270,727.14.
Internal Improvement lands, $66,979.03.
Total, $1,576,382.55.

Assuming that the difference between the price paid for the timber and the actual value of the stumpage was the same as in the Smith case referred to and the state should have received for same $3,153,765.10 and if the same fraudulent rule of estimates by the state prevailed in each case as in the Smith case the state should have received not less than $25,230,120.80.

Should have received, $25,230,120.80.

The state in defiance of the grant made by congress and without authority of law has given to certain railroads and other companies about 3,500,000 acres of land alleged to be swamp, most of which was in fact valuable timber or iron land and which will average in value $30 an acre, or showing a total steal therein of $105,000,000.

According to the World Almanac Minnesota has within her borders:

Surveyed lands, 43,684,161 acres.
Unsurveyed, 8,463,595 acres.

It has been shown by a report of C. D. Davison that the timber lands of the state amounted to 32,000,000 acres in 1869 and from that we will deduct the 8,463,595 acres of unsurveyed land leaving 23,536,405 acres of timber and worth $30 per acre, as per public documents, and making a total value of say $706,092,150.

It is a patent fact that of all the timber and iron lands surveyed, but little, if any, has failed to fall into the hands of private parties by fraudulent entries of some kind or by collusion if not illegal offerings at public proclamation.

The General Land Office in a report for 86 87 finds that out of 305 surveyed townships in Duluth District 217 have been offered at public sale, an unusual percentage, and affording a chance for the Pine Land Ring to buy the land in unlimited quantities at $1.25 an acre. When, then, this statement is considered and the numberless fraudulent, perjured and forged entries of all classes are added thereto, it is not unfair to assume that two thirds of the surveyed timber lands have been stolen; say, 15,690,936 acres, worth at $30, $460,728,080.

Again in 1877 the United States seized $1,650,000 worth of logs in the Minneapolis booms, and that was only a mere bagatelle to what had been stolen and reported that one year alone—hence when we consider that but a small percentage of stealing can be discovered and that the plunder has been going on for thirty-five years it is not unfair to say that the annual average will be at least that much, and we have $57,750,000, as the steal from the United States on stumpage alone.

Recapitulation.

Value of lands fraudulently or collusively acquired from the United States, $460,728,080.

Stolen from United States lands, estimated, $57,750,000.

Grand total $657,131,817.

Can you not see why the Republican State Central Committee and the timber land men are so anxious to elect Nelson? Almost without exception the timber thieves are supporting Nelson.

JOHN H. BURKE.

State Capital.

From the Representative.

The projected new capitol building at St. Paul is one of the questions which will occupy the attention of the state legislature next winter. The capitol commission has already contracted for a site at a cost, we believe, of $600,000, which is absolutely money thrown away, since property owners at Merriam Park, Midway district, have offered to donate the necessary land. The plans for the building have been submitted, and it is said that they call for not less than an outlay of at least $9,000,000 for a completed building. This, no doubt, means twice that sum before the work is finished. That has been the experience of other states, and there seems to be no reason why Minnesota should be an exception to the rule so well established.

The right way to do is to put the capitol in the Midway district and build a capital at a cost not exceeding $1,000,000. Such a building, honestly erected, would answer all the requirements of this state for years to come. See to it that your candidates for the legislature are not committed to the scheme to build a capitol at St. Paul at a cost of many millions of dollars.

PASSES FOR JUDGES.

They All Get Them From the Railroads as Soon as They are Elected.

Judge Willis Promptly Returns His and Pays His Own Fare.

From the Representative.

A country correspondent last week wrote to the REPRESENTATIVE that the charge was being circulated in his locality that Judge John W. Willis, the People's party candidate for associate justice of the supreme court, traveled on railway passes. The REPRESENTATIVE promptly saw Judge Willis and received from him this statement in regard to the matter:

"When I entered upon the duties of my present office in January, 1893, I received a large supply of annual passes over the various railway lines of Minnesota and the Northwest generally. I deemed it improper for a judicial officer to be under any obligation, no matter how slight, to any corporation, and I promptly returned EVERY PASS, without making use of any one of them. Since that time I have not been the recipient of any such 'courtesies.'"

There can be no doubt that this statement is exactly true. It discloses an important fact: That the railroad companies of this state make a practice of sending passes to the judges of our courts as soon as they are elected. How many of these judges do you suppose return their passes as Judge Willis did? It is safe to say that very few have done so. These corporations have more cases in court before the judges than any other. Scarcely a calendar is printed in the state which does not contain such cases. Is it proper, then, that the judges should hear those cases with their pockets full of passes? Is there any essential difference between the acceptance of those passes and the receipt of money? Not a particle. No man fit to sit on the bench would accept a railroad pass while occupying that position!

The REPRESENTATIVE is informed that Judge Collins, the competitor of Judge Willis, rides on passes. It is informed that most, if not all of the Republican candidates for re-election to the bench in this judicial district have accepted like favors. If this is so they should be defeated for that reason if for no other.

LOWEST EVER KNOWN.

Wheat Makes a New Low Record in the Market at New York.

From the Representative.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—Wheat made a low record on the first sale this morning, which was at 56¾c. for December and at mid-day beat even this figure, selling off at 56⅜c., which price has never before been reached in the New York market. With its unparalled record of steady declines wheat goes down just as easily now as it did when 20 cents a bushel higher, and the bulls stand around afraid to touch the market for fear that if any long interest accumulates it will go to 50 cents. There is too much wheat, and although the bulls claim that the state reports are verifying the government estimate of a crop under 450,000,000 bushels, there is such a heavy surplus from previous years and Europe is buying wheat so slowly that the market simply drops of its own weight, being assisted occasionally, as was the case today, by a bear raid. Fifty cents is an absurdly low price for December wheat in New York, but the bears say they will put it there before they get through.—Associated Press Dispatch.

Think of it! Fifty cents per bushel for wheat in New York! How much does this leave for the farmer in the Northwest? Not over 30 cents per bushel! The profits go to the middle man and the transportation companies. The price of wheat goes down—down, but the commission of the middleman and the cost of transportation to the seaboard remains unchanged.

The price of flour to the consumer is not lowered because of the existing combine of the Minneapolis millers. Let us look into the matter a little. It takes 4 bushel and 20 pounds of No. 1 northern wheat to make a barrel of patent flour. Last Tuesday this amount of wheat in the Minneapolis market was worth $2.35, while the price of the flour in car lots was, as per quotations in the daily papers, $3.35, or a clear profit of $1.00 per barrel, to say nothing of the second and third grades of flour and the bran and shorts obtained, which pay the cost of milling. At retail in 50 and 100 pound sacks the price is much higher. Here is where the millers' combine gets in its deadly work and robs the laboring man of not less than $1.50 per barrel on all of the flour he uses. Make some figures on this for a population of 400,000 in Minneapolis and St. Paul and see where you are at.

"My agency in procuring the passage of the national bank act was the greatest financial mistake of my life. It has built up a monopoly that affects every interest in the country. It should be repealed. But before this can be accomplished the people will be arrayed on one side and the banks on the other in a contest such as we have never seen in this country."—Salmon P. Chase.

GLORIOUS NEWS.

VICTORY CERTAIN.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY WILL CARRY THE STATE.

PROBABLY ELECT SEVEN CONGRESSMEN.

Take Off Your Coats, and Work Like Beavers.

We are not bragging but speak words of sober seriousness, when we assure our readers that Mr. Owen's election is a certainty! We base this conclusion on a multitude of facts, on our own observations, and, more than all, upon the unwilling admissions of our adversaries.

Mr. Owen will carry Hennepin county, St. Louis county, Dakota county, Kandiyohi county, and even Winona county, while the whole southwest and northwest portions of the state will be practically solid for him, and for all the rest of our ticket. Even such counties as Wabasha and Washington are almost certain. From all parts of the state the same news reaches us. With the exception of Goodhue and Chisago there is not a county in the state that may not give our ticket its vote; and even the carrying of those strong Swedish counties is not impossible since ten out of the eleven Scandinavian papers in the state,—with 70,000 circulation,—have come out for the People's Party! We have a fighting chance to carry Ramsey county. A gentleman, a republican, employed where 600 railroad men are at work, in St. Paul, told us, the other day, that the men were not saying much out loud, for fear of losing their jobs, but, from scraps of conversation he had over-heard among them, he was positive the whole 600 would vote the Populist ticket! Even Le Sueur county, which used to give 1,000 democratic majority, has, under the splendid leadership of F. C. Gibbs, become debateable ground; and Scott county, which used to be "the darkest Africa" of reform, has got an independent ticket in the field, making a fierce fight with a strong probability of victory. The truth is the bottom is out of the two old parties, and the contents of their kettles are running headlong into the Populist vat.

Two weeks only are left! Let there be a general charge all along the line, and triumph is ours. Let every man who can talk in public start out and speak in every school house in his county. And let those who cannot talk in public fill their pockets with copies of the REPRESENTATIVE, and button-hole every friend and neighbor and never let go of him until he promises to vote the People's party ticket!

But the election of our state ticket is but part of the glorious results before us. There is a brilliant prospect of sending seven Populist congressmen from Minnesota. Boen, of course, has a walk over; Kittle Halvorson will astonish the politicians as much as he did in 1890; Dr. Clarke will carry Hennepin county, and will do honor to it when elected; Francis H. Clarke will be borne, on the shoulders of the aroused workingmen, to Washington; Major Bowler is leading a united and steadily increasing host against distracted and divided opponents; L. C. Long, has a brilliant show for victory; and in the First District T. J. Meighen will receive besides the Populist support, the almost solid vote of the Democrats and be elected. Think of it! So strong is Mr. Meighen that he came within three votes of obtaining the endorsement of the Democratic congressional convention, and he was not present, and his own county was represented! If it had been he would have been endorsed. But the Democrats are going to vote for him anyhow,—Moonan or no Moonan. On the cars we met a man who had been traveling all over the Second district, collecting for a machine house; he was a Republican; but he told us that he scarcely met a farmer who was not a Populist, and most of them red-hot for the cause.

The Legislature will certainly be anti-Republican; and Washburn will be retired to private life; and he will have ample opportunity to make his peace with God, before he dies, for the incalculable evil he has done his country, by demoralizing, degrading and corrupting his fellow men, through the horrible example of his public career. The evil he has done will live after him, to curse this commonwealth for a hundred years to come. He has made conscience a mockery and the ballot box a jest. He has ridden, for years, on the tidal-wave of a rotten and fictitious prosperity, rolling over the ruins of the virtuous and the industrious, and crested with crime and sin and shame: and now it has collapsed, subsided, and left him floundering in the mud, amid the half-submerged corpse of monsters of peculation and fraud, like Menage and his fellows. The great Age of Sham has ended; and, as a mighty voice sounded, along the shores of the Mediterranean, when Christ was born, the cry, "the great God Pan is dead;" so the people rise up, today, and proclaim the end of the dynasty of rottenness and ruin moral and material death. The Republic must live—and the Washburn breed of shallow, cunning perverters of justice and manglers of righteousness must perish. Away with them!

"Trough the dark valley wide and far,
The mighty force was spread;
Up rose the glorious morning star,
The ghastly host had fled."

Work, brethren, as you never worked before, for the redemption of mankind. Work to drive the vultures from the liver of Prometheus—chained and tortured because he was the light-bearer! Work to free industry from its oppressors. Work to give to toil its own fruits. Work to crush fraud and lying and robbery.

"Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
For those that here we see no more;
Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler forms of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;

Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the Christ that is to be."

HERE YOU HAVE IT.

Knute Nelson Now Defends the Demonetization of Silver in 1873.

But Three Years After It Was Found Out He Voted in Favor of Remonetizing Silver.

NOW HE IS FIGHTING IT.

When Was He Honest? Why Did He Change?

From the Representative.

Silver had been one of the money metals of the world for thousands of years. In 1873—on Feb. 12—the Congress of the United States was corrupted, by $500,000 sent over by the Bank of England, in the hands of a banker, named Ernest Seyd, and induced to demonetize silver. This was done so secretly that the President of the United States, Ulyses S. Grant, protested two years afterward that he did not know that anything of the kind was in the bill when he signed it. When it was discovered an universal outcry went up for the repeal of the bill demonetizing silver. At the present time both the Republican and Democratic parties are opposed to such repeal, because the money powers of the whole world demands that money be rendered more valuable, by reducing its amount; thereby reducing the value of all kinds of property belonging to the people. And Hon. Knute Nelson defends Plutocracy's scheme to impoverish the people, by arguing that that law of 1873, demonetizing silver, was all right and should stand, and that silver must not be remonetized, and cannot be without ruin to the country.

Our readers will, therefore, be astonished to learn that, in 1878, 16 years ago, and five years after silver had been stricken down in Congress, and three years after the villainy was discovered, not only Knute Nelson, but all the Republican and Democratic members of the state senate, (except one Democrat and two Republicans), voted in favor of the repeal of the act of Congress of 1873, demonetizing silver.

Here is the record:—it will be found on page 8, of the Senate Journal of 1878—Wednesday, Jan. 9, 1878:—

Mr. Donnelly offered the following resolution:

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Minnesota (the House of Representatives concurring), that our Senators in the Congress of the United States are hereby instructed to support by their votes and influence, the bill now pending in the United States Senate, known as the 'Bland Silver Bill,' and that they are requested to oppose all amendments to that bill, which will prevent silver coin, of the standards used in 1870, becoming again full legal tender for all debts public and private, in the United States."

Mr. Nelson gave notice of debate.

Mr. Nelson was opposed to this resolution, but the party leaders caucused together and agreed that that they could not defend anything so outrageous as the demonetization of one of the money-metals named in the constitution of the nation; and when the resolution came up again, nine days later, Jan. 17, 1878, (page 26 of Journal), Senator Edgerton, Republican, now a judge of the United States Court in South Dakota, appointed by a Republican president, offered a substitute for Mr. Donnelly's resolution. Here is the record:

Mr. Edgerton offered the following substitute for the resolution of Mr. Donnelly:

Resolved, That our Senators in Congress be instructed, and our Representatives requested, to vote for a bill repealing the act of Feb. 12, 1873, demonetizing silver.

The question being on the adoption of the substitute submitted by Mr. Edgerton, and the roll being called, there were yeas 34 and nays 3, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative were: Messrs. Ahrens, Armstrong, Bailey, Clement, Clough, Deuel, Donnelly, Doran, Drew, Edgerton, Edwards, Finseth, Goodrich, Hall, Henry, Hersey, Houlton, Langdon, Lienau, Macdonald, McHench, McNelly, Mealey, Morehouse, Morrison, Nelson, Page, Pillsbury, Rice, Shaleen, Swanstrom, Waite, Waldron and Wheat.

Those who voted in the negative were: Messrs. Gilfillan, C. D., Morton and Remore."

Senators Gilfillan and Remore were Republicans, while Senator Morton was a Democrat.

With what face can Mr. Nelson now declare against the full remonetization of silver, when, 16 years ago, he voted for the repeal of the act of 1873? Does it not show that he is now subordinating his honest judgment to the demands of Wall Street? What has occurred since 1878, to change the merits of this controversy? Is not the popular demand and necessity for the remonetization of silver greater in 1894 than it was in 1878? And if Mr. Nelson is ready to yield his conscience for party success to the Plutocrats, on the the silver question, what assurance have the people that he will not be the mere slave of the corporations and money-power if elected governor?

Nothing in It.

From the Representative.

The fact that some Scandinavian papers have declared for Owen and Biermann has given rise to talk that Mr. Owen has made a deal to throw overboard Mr. Stromberg, our candidate for state auditor. The REPRESENTATIVE is in a position to say that there is nothing whatever in this rumor. Mr. Owen is supporting the entire People's party state ticket in good faith. Every People's party man in the state should vote for Mr. Stromberg and the entire ticket. If they do it will be elected.

Pay no attention to roarbacks circulated by the old party papers. They are false in each and every particular.

Elastic Currency.

From the Representative.

The American Association of Bankers, at its annual meeting last week, concluded that the country needs a more elastic currency. It will accordingly petition Congress to pass a bill which it has prepared, from which the following is an extract:

All the banks to issue circulating notes to the amount of 50 per cent of their paid up, unimpaired capital, subject to a tax of ½ of 1 per cent upon the average amount of circulation; of 25 per cent of their paid up, unimpaired capital, subject to both the tax of ½ of 1 per cent and to an additional tax per annum upon the average amount of such circulation outstanding for the year, said additional 25 per cent to be known as "emergency circulation."

This is "inflation" of the rankest kind. Minneapolis National banks now have not to exceed $45,000 each of notes in circulation. If this bill passes it would enable them to vastly increase their circulation. Would it not be safer and better to let Uncle Sam issue this money and be responsible for it? Past experience shows that it is sometimes difficult to ascertain how much unimpaired capital a bank has. Some of these institutions which were supposed to be sound have suddenly been discovered to have been looted by dishonest officials.

Let us have more money by all means, but let Uncle Sam stand sponsor for it. Then it will always be good no matter what happens to the banks.

The Issue.

From the Representative.

The issue, so far as our state election is concerned, is not the tariff nor silver coinage. It is the Pine Land ring and nothing else. Recent developments show that this ring, which, by the way, is composed almost wholly of leading Republicans, has robbed this state of millions of dollars. These frauds would never have been unearthed but for the efforts of the People's party. They will not now be stopped unless that party is given control of the state government, nor will a tithe of the whole number of the thieves be brought to the bar of justice, punished for their crimes and made to refund their ill-gotten gains. This is the issue involved in the state election. If the Republicans carry the legislature and the state Gov. Nelson will be the next senator and Dave Clough will be governor. All indications point to this result. Washburn cannot be re-elected, and when this fact is established Gov. Nelson will be the candidate of the party. Outside of Hennepin county he has four times as many friends running for the legislature as has Mr. Washburn. It is a noticeable fact that only about four counties have instructed for Washburn. That shows his weakness.

The duty of the voters of Minnesota is plain. It is to elect the entire People's party state ticket and a majority in the legislature. By that means, and that only, can the wholesale robbery of our children's school fund be stopped.

Recollect this when you go cast your ballot and vote accordingly.

Powers and Prosperity

From the Representative.

Labor Commissioner, Rev. Powers, holding office under Gov. Nelson, is trying hard to prove that the farmers of Minnesota are not in debt, and that the workmen of the cities are the most prosperous set of jubilant and jovial cusses in the world. It is something like trying to convince a fellow who has not had anything to eat for forty-eight hours that his stomach is actually uncomfortable with fullness. The logic may be superb—but "it is a condition and not a theory that confronts him," as Cleveland says.

Knute a Goner.

From the Representative.

The Minneapolis Times of Oct. 12 contains the following special telegram from Washington.

The Washington Post in its political gossip column, today stated that information had been received at the headquarters of the congressional committee here to the effect that Gov. Nelson would probably be defeated in the present campaign by S. M. Owen, the Populist candidate for governor. The Post adds that on account of fusion in the state there was a possibility that the Republicans would not control the next legislature and this meant the defeat of Senator Washburn for re-election.

READ AND REMEMBER.

Mighty Utterances of Mighty Men.

"As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless."—Abraham Lincoln, just before the close of the war.

"It (the United States Bank) asserted the power to make money scarce or plenty at its pleasure, at any time and in any quarter of the Union, by permitting an expansion or compelling a contraction of the circulating medium according to its own will. * * The distress and alarm which pervaded and agitated the whole country when the Bank of the United States waged war upon the people in order to compel them to submit to its demands, cannot yet be forgotten."—Andrew Jackson's Farewell Message, March 3, 1837.

For President—Geo. M. Pullman, of Italy.

For Vice-President—Andrew Carnegie of Scotland.

The Great Northern Railway have inaugurated a chang in their freight business which will be of interest to our merchants, The road has put on a fast freight train between St. Paul and Devils Lake. The train is scheduled to reach here at 5 o'clock each day which is less than twenty hours from St Paul so that goods shipped this evening will here tomorrow. —Crookston Times.

A careful perusal of the St. Paul and Minneapolis daily papers clearly shows that they are badly scared and fully believe that S. M. Owen will be the next governor. The democratic papers are using all manner of means to try and stampede the old democratic votes back to the ranks but in vain. The victory is assured and you have but to read the papers of the enemy to prove it beyond doubt.

An Illinoise newspaper recently sued forty-three men who did not pay their suscriptions. He got judgements against each of them. Of the forty-three twenty-eight swore that they owned no more than the law exempts from judgements. They were thereupon arrested for petit larceny and bound over in the sum of $300 each. All but six gave bonds. The postal laws make the taking of a newspaper out of the post office with refusal to pay for it petit larceny. It is a mean sort of law but then taking a paper and refusing to pay for it is mean enough to justify anything.

As an evidence of the truth of Gov, Nelson's assertion that there was not enough Owen voters left in southern Minnesota for seed, the Albert Lea Standard, published in Freeborn county says: "S. M. Owen is everywhere holding large and enthusiastic meetings, none more so were ever held in the state There seems to be a tidal wave of populism like that in 1890, and this is especially true in the central and northern sections; in many townships where before there has not been a populist vote every man has declared for the Owen ticket, Mr. Owen's election is predicted as a certainty by men who best understand the situation and that certainty is daily becoming stronger."

Modesty is not generally considered as a ruling passion in politics, yet from this cause or some other a number of candidates on both the republican and democratic tickets failed to file certificates of nomination with the county auditor and their names will be omitted from the ballots. Among the democrats who did not qualify are Geo. A. Raphael, clerk of court, M. W. Jensen, register of deeds, Edward Garceau, auditor, and Otto Kankel, treasurer, and the candidate for surveyor, while Chas. Robbecke, whom the committee selected as a legislative candidate and whose nomination had been filed, notified the committee that he would not run, and forbade the county auditor to accept the certificate. The republican are not so modest and the only failures are W. F. Arnold, county surveyor, G, H. Palmer, court commissioner, and N. K. Anderson, fourth district commissioner. The populist candidates show their entire disregard of modesty by qualifying unanimously.—Crookston Times.

A Chapter of Interesting Information About Some Egyptian Customs.

When a member of an Egyptian family died, all the relatives put on mourning and abstained from baths, wine and delicacies of all kinds from 40 to 60 days, according to the rank of the person deceased. Death in one respect put an end to all distinctions that had prevailed in life, and king and slave were subject to the same law.

The record of the life of the deceased had to be examined by a tribunal of 42 judges before he could be given burial with his ancestors. If the deeds of his life, proved that he was worthy of burial, his body was carried across the sacred lake, of which each province had one, and was there permitted to rest. If the judges found him unworthy, even though he belonged to the highest rank, he could not be buried with his ancestors. The body was returned to his relatives and was buried on the side of the lake opposite to the burial place of the inst.

The republicans have commenced to circulate their literature of abuse, a circular having been issued to distribute among the laboring men of the cities and towns which makes no arguments promises no legislation, but is simply a tirade of abuse and vilification from the first line to the last How low has the great republican party decended that it must needs make abuse its weapon? The issuing of such literature is a frank admission that it no longer has any principles to contend for, nothing to appeal to the good sence and intelligence of the people, When a party has reached this point it is time to retire it once for all, and the majority of the voters will certainly realize this and do their duty. The last two weeks of the campaign will see Minnesota flooded with a slanderous and defamatory literature against both the people's party and it candidates and all should knew how to properly estimate it. By taking this method of campaigning the republican party acknowledges that it has no arguments in its favor and is literally in the last ditch and is thus throwing slime to defend itself, it follows the example of the devilfish and other loathsome animals when hard pressed.—Farm Stock and Home,

A Table Taken From The State Auditor's Report Showing Cost of Running the Counties of the State.

It Proves Conclusively That Large Counties Are Conducted at Much Less Expense Than Small.

And Shows Polk County's Expenses Per Capita and Per Township Among the Lowest in the State.

The Statements of the County Division Schemers and Real Estate Boomers Knocked Into a Cocked Hat.

STATE AUDITOR'S REPORT.

The law requires the state auditor to submit to each legislature of the state a report showing the transactions of the state treasury and the business of the auditor's department for the preceding year. The last report issued was in 1892. Another will be made before the legislature meets in January next, but at present we have nothing authoritative from the state officers giving the transactions of the several counties for any year later than A. D. 1891. In that year Polk county did not erect county buildings, and had its ordinary expenditure only, so, though we wish we could give the cost of carrying on the several counties of the state for years later than 1891, certified to by the state officers, no doubt the figures for that year as well as any, and we give them from the last report of the state auditor.

All the counties in the state are given in their order as to area, that being the most prominent consideration. The counties of Beltrami, Cass and Itasca not being then organized, no returns are given in the report as to them, and where a county is partly in an Indian reservation, that part is excluded. The area, population, assessed valuation and amount of tax levy as we have given them are all

The amounts under the head of cost per township are computations of our own, for convenience of reference, and as they are based on the other figures given, any one can readily find out their correctness.

NORMAN MORE COSTLY THAN POLK.

In Norman county in that year the cost for county purposes was $653.21 per township and $1.48 per capita.

The proposed counties of Nash, Red Lake and Columbia are small; very much smaller than Norman county. There is in each just about seventeen townships or 612 square miles. How does the cost of running such small counties compare with the large counties? There are thirty-five counties in the state (exclusive of Ramsey and Hennepin) that have area from 355 to 612 square miles, and the cost to them in 1891 for county purposes was $1,213.12 per township, and $1.55 per capita. The average of the fifteen counties nearest the size of the proposed counties and having an area from 575 to 650 square miles was $1,119.60 per township and $1.51½ per capita.

It will be observed that in the old and thickly settled counties that the cost is less in proportion to population than in the newer and more thinly settled counties. Of the fifteen nearly equal in size to the proposed counties, the four old counties of Dakota, Sibley, Winona and Olmsted pay a county tax of only $1.26 per capita, while Yellow Medicine, Mille Lac, Stevens, Chippewa and Hubbard, five newer counties of that size, have a county tax of $2.64 per capita, which is very nearly Double That of Polk County.

The five counties last named, though the newest of that size, are still older and more populous than the proposed counties of Nash, Red Lake and Columbia. If any person wishes to get at the truth in regard to the comparative cost of large and small counties under similar conditions, he can find it from these figures. Do not compare the proposed counties with Norman, which is nearly one-half larger than they are, nor with the old counties of Douglas, Grant and Pope, but compare them with the other counties of the state about their size, density of population and degree of development, and we submit it will be apparent to any person who desires to know the truth that a division of the county would be injurious to all the sections in which it is proposed to divide it.

RELATIVE COST OF RUNNING SMALL AND LARGE COUNTIES.

In view of the county division controversy it will be interesting to make comparisons from the official figures of the relative cost of running small and large counties in the state. In doing this it will be only fair to leave the small counties of Ramsey and Hennepin out of the calculation, as they are made up for the most part of the large cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and for that reason have costly management. Leaving out these and the unorganized counties of the state we find that the average cost for county purposes was in 1891 the sum of $912.28 for each township, and $1.60½ per capita of the population of the whole state. In Polk county it was $552.52 for each township, and $1.40⅔ per capita of the population.

An English "Water Witch."

A young man of the name of Rodwell, in the employ of the Grinton Coal company in north England, has shown wonderful powers in his occupation as professional "water finder" or "water witch." Professor E. R. Lankester, the great English scientist, stated very plainly in one of the journals that he doubted the attributed powers of either the "witch" or the "divining rod," with which he is armed in all professional operations. This evoked the following from Dr. McClure, the chairman of the Grinton company: "I deny emphatically that the lad is an imposter! He has been tested time and again and has never failed to locate veins of either mineral or water, depending upon what the search was being conducted for. The 'divining rod' which he holds only moves in obedience to the muscular contractions of his hands and arms, and he can use a rod of any kind of wood or material, providing it be what is known as a 'good conductor of electricity.' Another oddity about the lad, and one of which I have never heard in connection with 'water witching,' is this: The lad habitually walks with his hands clasped behind him, and as soon as he steps upon the ground directly over a mineral or water he is powerless to unclasp them until he moves away from the region of the lode or conduit."—St Louis Republic.

Fifty Feet of Rainfall Annually.

There is always more or less guesswork concerning the amount of rain that falls during any storm period. Throughout the United States the amount that falls on any one day rarely exceeds one inch. There are certain portions of the globe, however, that are frequently, and others only occasionally, deluged with water. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, at an altitude of 4,500 feet, 610 inches of rainfall have been registered in a single year, of which amount 147 inches (12 feet 3 inches) fell in the month of June. At a meteorological station in latitude 18 degrees, near the western boundary of Hindustan, the average rainfall for the 15 years ending with 1893 was 254 inches. In the northwestern part of England, at an altitude of 1,800 feet, the average annual rainfall is 146 inches, 111 inches in excess of the mean for St. Louis, which is but 37 inches and a fraction.

The wonderful record given above is still more phenomenal when we consider the fact that all the moisture the atmosphere is capable of holding at any one time would cover the entire surface of the globe to a depth of less than four inches should it all be instantly precipitated.—St. Louis Republic.

Could Wait Too.

"Yes, sir," retorted the middle aged matron fiercely. "I reckon they're waitin to see if I won't go away without stayin fur the 17 cents in change that's a-comin to me!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Oldest Trees In the World.

The bo tree of Anuradapura was planted 288 (should be 245, Davids) years before Christ. Its age is matter of record, its conservancy has been an object of solicitude to several dynasties, and the story of its vicissitudes has been preserved in a series of continuous chronicles among the most authentic that have been handed down by mankind. The yew trees of Fountains abbey are believed to have flourished there 1,200 years ago. The olives in the garden of Gethsemane were full grown when the Saracens were expelled from Jerusalem, and the cypress of Sorna, in Lombardy, is said to have been a tree in the time of Julius Cæsar, yet the bo tree is older than the oldest of these by a century, and would almost seem to verify the prophecy pronounced when it was planted—that it would "flourish and be green forever."—Rhys Davis' "Buddhism."

NASH'S LETTER

A Tissue of Misrepresentations From Beginning to End.

Some of His Statements Stripped of Their Coating of Falsehood.

We observe that W. C. Nash, one of the East Grand Forks boomers, has taken his pen in hand to write on county division for the Review of that city, and a person who signs himself "Tax Payer" seems highly pleased with the effort of Mr. Nash, characterizing it as "a good, common sense article, in which every point bore the imprint of perfect truth so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein," and giving to the voters the valuable information that "the law gives to the new board of commissioners the power of not only appointing the new officers, but fixing their salaries also," and congratulates the people on the assumption that the salaries will be placed very low. Now, whether "Taxpayer" got his information from Mr. Nash or some one else the fact remains as plain and certain as anything can be that the commissioners have nothing to do with fixing the salaries of the officers they appoint, excepting county attorney subject to appeal to district judge and county superintendent of schools. The last not to be less than $10.00 for each school district in the county. All the officers will come under the General Laws of the state as to salaries and everything to the contrary is "bosh" Mr. Nash and "Taxpayer" to the contrary notwithstanding. If any person has doubt about it let him look it up and he will find there is nothing in the law that gives any color to that statement. But Mr. Nash goes on serenely and says "there will be no necessity of paying salaries larger than $700 to $800" to auditor and treasurer when the law gives them at least one half more than that.

One office, that of sheriff, is more costly in large than small counties but not to the extent supposed. Reference to the financial statement for 1893 shows that of the expenses of sheriff's office $1285.47 was for boarding prisoners and $2246.06 for the services of the sheriff. If the figures given by Mr. Nash for the other counties are correct they must have been fortunate enough to have no prisoners to board. It needs no argument to show that no amount of county division can lessen the cost of boarding prisoners, unless the new counties on the score of economy place their prisoners in a jail from which they can escape whenever they wish and so save all further expense. We suspect Mr. Nash's home city furnishes its full proportion of the boarders at the "Hotel Grundysen" and the county he aspires to give his name to will not be the gainer by the privilege of keeping all that class they furnish to such institutions.

In regard to the office of clerk of court, Mr. Nash is mistaken when he says that officer in Polk county gets a fixed salary in addition to an allowance of fees and that he was paid $3,531.53 in 1893. He gets a fixed salary of $1,500 and is allowed a deputy at $600, and that is all he should have. He got no more in 1893, as he returned the extra $4.25 clerk hire to the treasury. The impression abroad that he received the larger sum is quite excusable from the way the thing is mixed up in the financial report for 1893. Those who attended the last county convention of the people's party at Crookston will remember that Mr. Muus asked that a committee be appointed to examine and report on this matter, but there was not time taken for it then. The last item in the financial statement under head of clerk of courts office of $1,495.20 should not have been there at all. It was a bill or statement made by the clerk of the amount of work he had done by the county in the year 1893, and was the work and the fees for the same the county would have been obliged to pay for if the clerk had been paid by fees and not by salary, but as it is the clerk did not get a cent of it and the proper purpose of the statement is only to show what would have been the earnings of the clerk for the county under the old system. Though people in general may have been misled by this, we submit those like Mr. Nash who pose as instructors are not excusable for failure to ascertain the truth.

Again he assumes that the expenses of running Polk county is $1,122.45 per township, and Norman $517.18 is correct. We are informed that he is one of the persons who got up that widely circulated "comparative statement." If so it is scarcely possible that he does not know it is false as to Polk county, and false as to all the other counties named in it. We give in another place the correct figures from the Norman county financial statement for 1893.

But it is needless to go further in discussing any article or statement that is based on assumptions so wide of the truth. As those who wish to divide the county cannot make a good showing for their pet scheme on the existing state of things, we should perhaps not be too hard on them for drawing on their imagination for their facts. All that we ask is that others do not allow themselves to be deceived by such fabrications.

A BIG LIE NAILED

How the County Divisionists Expect to Win the Farmers' Votes.

They Deliberately Falsify the Figures in Norman County's Statement.

The Correct Statement and Their False Statement Given Below.

We give below the expenses of Norman county for the year 1893, as given in the "comparative statement" of the county divisionists, and the correct statement of the expenses of that county as taken from its official financial statement of expenses for that year. The reader will please to observe the difference, and form his opinion of the people who have made so transparent an attempt to deceive. They no doubt had this Norman county financial statement. If they had not they can have no excuse for giving figures without it as it can be obtained very easily. We have given in this the payment of interest on bonds and to sinking fund of Norman county, $4,136.71. It is not properly chargeable to current county expenses as it represents a debt incurred in the past, but in the "comparative statement" Polk county is charged up on those items $10,340.67, while no mention is made or account taken of the expenditure of Norman county for the same items in that year. This makes the cost to each township of Norman county for 1893 $771.62, or if we exclude what they paid to sinking fund and interest the sum of $599.26.

NELSON COUNTY.

Crookston People Favor Its Establishment For Reasons Below Enumerated.

A proposition is before the people to establish a county consisting of the Thirteen Towns, with Fosston as the county seat. That section is thickly settled away off between the Indian reservations, and far from the present county seat, and if there is reason for making any division it would be to set that off as a new county. It would still leave Polk a large county, and when the reservation is opened up, which will not be long, the county of Nelson can have attached to it ample territory to make a large county and have all the advantages that a large county gives. There are many things to be said in favor of this division on that line, but the people of the proposed county of Nelson are wide awake in presenting them to the people, and space need not be taken here to elaborate them. Suffice to say that the people of Crookston strongly favor the organization of Nelson county at the present election, and at some future time will vote in favor of establishing a county from territory in the northeastern part as well, when the opening of the reservation will make a large settlement in that direction. There is plenty of territory in the east to make large counties there and leave Polk a large county also. Be sure and vote for Nelson county.

THE COMPARISON

With All Its Extravagance of First Class County Buildings,

With Its Expensive Iron Bridges, County Roads and Ditches,

Polk County is Run Cheaper Than Norman That Has Not Any of These.

On comparing cost of different counties we should always bear in mind the different conditions. It is an old saying that there is no two things alike under the sun. No two counties are just alike. Polk County has a large river over which she has built seven costly iron bridges. Not only does it cost much money to build these bridges but keeping them in repair is expensive. But few counties in the State are at so great a disadvantage in this respect. Again we have erected fine county buildings all that can be require for many years to come.

The difference in these respects with the counties to the south with whom we are so often compared is so great. Douglas, Grant and Pope have no rivers, and Norman but narrow ones to bridge, and when it comes to county buildings. Norman Grant and Pope have hardly anything worthy of the name, while the old County of Douglas has done but little in this line. We may say also that Grant and Pope are old counties as compared with Polk, and the rate of taxation should be less in an old settled region than in a newer one.

The county of Norman has been much commented upon. Excluding the Indian Reservation, it is a nearly square county of twenty four towns, or a little more, with the county seat very near the middle. As we have said its rivers are narrow, and compared with the Red Lake, cheaply bridged, and all its county buildings have cost less than three thousand dollars. Its inhabitants are a very peaceable people, and there is probably less crime or litigation among them than in any other part of the northwest, and has only one term of court in each year. There is we believe more expense made in these respects by the city of East Grand Forks in a year than in all that county. Moreover Norman can scarcely be classed among the small counties. It is nearly one half larger than the proposed counties of Nash Red Lake or Columbia, and has less waste land, we think. Still with all these advantages and very close economy on the part of those who have conducted its affairs the statistics show its management to be more expensive than that of Polk county. This we think can only be explained by the fact that Polk is the larger, and furnishes the strongest argument in favor of large counties. If Norman is at a disadvantage with Polk on that score how much more would be any of the proposed counties only two-thirds the size of Norman and Nash and Red Lake with the large river to bridge.

COUNTY BUILDINGS.

The Red Lake Falls, McIntosh and East Grand Forks people, in their anxiety to divide the county are trying to make the people believe that $2,000 will furnish all the buildings required for a new county. This is about as near as they seem to be able to get at anything. The safes they will require to keep the records secure will alone cost that much. The people of the Thirteen Towns might be willing to get along for a time like the people of Norman county, with a shack for a court house that is only fit for a horse barn, but in case of division we are much mistaken in the people of East Grand Forks and Red Lake Falls if they would not continually scheme and plan until they had a court house and jail that would cost each county $25,000 or $30,000.

A small county requires a court house as large as a big county, just as much as a small woman needs a house as extensive as her large neighbor, and if our friends in the county flatter themselves that they will not be called upon to pay their share for fine county buildings in these cities if they are made county seats, we opine they do not know the people they are dealing with. If it be said Crookston has manifested the same spirit, that is true. Human nature averages up pretty much the same all over, and Crookston may be as eager to see fine buildings erected within her border as East Grand Forks or Red Lake Falls. But Polk county has all the buildings now in Crookston, that the law authorizes a county to build, and they are fully furnished and equipped and all that can be asked for many years to come, so whatever anyone may wish there is no further chance to expend money on new county buildings in Polk county, for a score of years to come at least.

'TWAS DONE TO DECEIVE

The Statements Published by the County Divisionists Are Fraudulent and They Knew It.

Can They be Trusted After This Bare-Faced Attempt to Deceive the Taxpayers of The County.

Sworn Proof That the Expenses of Running Polk County Are Only $43,794 Instead of $84.183, as Stated.

And That the Average Per Township is Only $584 as Against $650 for Norman, Douglas, Pope and Grant.

So much has been published in the newspapers of McIntosh, Red Lake Falls and East Grand Forks about the cost of carrying on small as compared with large counties that is erroneous and misleading that we think it well to give the facts in a connected form, so that those who desire it may the more easily ascertain the real situation.

This will require us to go quite extensively into figures, which are proverbially dry reading, but we hope all will be sufficiently interested in the question of county division to give them careful attention.

The papers named have selected for comparison with the large county of Polk for the year 1893, the four small counties of Norman, Douglas, Grant and Pope, where among the small counties of the state the expenditure has been the least; where scarcely anything has been laid out on county improvements, and where such officers as register of deeds and clerk of court retain the fees they collect as their compensation and receive no salary from the county, while in Polk county, under special law, these officers are paid a salary by the county which is charged up as county expenses, and the fees they receive are all turned into the county treasury.

Besides this, none of the small counties named have any charge for county hospital, as they have no such institution, and a large charge is made against Polk county on that score and no account is made of the fact that this expense is paid back to the county by individual patients or by the towns, villages and cities that send the patients there because it is less expensive than caring for them at home.

The most important omission of the "comparative statement, "however, is the failure to mention that in "expenses for all other purposes" for Polk county is included the sum of $17,863.38, paid for building the county jail and putting steel cells and heating apparatus in the same; something the other counties have nothing like, but will, no doubt, some time build. This, of course, is not a charge that will have to be incurred again by Polk county. It is also incorrect in some other things.

We give here a full statement of the expenses of the county of Polk for the year A. D. 1893:

County Auditor's office..	$ 3,980.80
County Treasurer's office	3,184.95
Register of Deed's office	2,966.85
Clerk of Court's office	2,100.00
Sheriff's office	3,531.53
County Attorney's office	1,484.20
Judge of Probate's office	1,658 92
Co. Superintendent of School's office..	2,300.00
County Surveyor's office	179.27
County Jailer's salary	600.00
Janitor's salary	540.00
Co. Comr's salary and expenses	1,843.62
Examining, insane and conveying to asylum	1,256.30
Light, Fuel & repairs on Co. buildings	849.40
Books, stationery and advertising	4,129.15
County roads and bridges	6,246.41
Postage, express and freight charges	838 17
District Court expenses, including juror's fees, mileage, etc.	6,440.61
Justice Court expenses	1,055.47
County Jail expenses	2,102.56
County Hospital expenses	3,504.08
Building new county jail with steel cells and heating apparatus	17,863.38
Miscellaneous, including coroner's fees	4,323.21
Total	$72,978.88

Besides the above amount there was paid interest on bonds $6,100.21, and to the sinking fund to pay the bonds of the county $4,230.46, which should not be charged up to running expenses of the county in making comparisons with other counties for the reason that the debt it pays was incurred in former years, for county buildings and bridges which are assets of the county, and we may say in passing, that in case of county division each county will have to pay its proportion of this debt and interest.

To make the comparison fair between the counties named, it must be taken into account that there has been refunded to Polk county of the expenses above stated the following sums:

Board furnished U. S. prisoners	$ 67.83
Collected from Co. hospital patients	614.11
From city of Crookston for hospital patients adjusted and will be paid before Nov. 1st, 1894	2,300.00
Monies refunded by city of East Grand Forks for repairs on bridge	325.00
State of Minn. bridge appropriation	450 00
Fees of register of deeds paid to county treasurer	4,470.25
Fees of clerk of court paid to county treasurer	3,093.35
Total	$11,320.54

Taking the total amount refunded from expenses leaves the sum of $61,658.34 as the amount of expenses of Polk county for the year 1893, and deducting from this the extraordinary expense caused by the erection of the county jail leaves the sum of $43,794.96 as the ordinary expenses of the year, and the sum it should have been placed at instead of the sum of $84,183.69, as given in the widely distributed "comparative statement" published by the advocates of division.

This makes the average expense per township $534.37 as against $650.92, the average for the counties of Norman, Douglas, Pope and Grant, if the figures given for these counties by the divisionists are correct, which we will show is not the case.

All the foregoing that relates to Polk county is taken from the financial statement of the county auditor for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1893, except as to amount owing by the city of Crookston for hospital expenses which has since been adjusted, and board of Norman county prisoners, and is undoubtedly correct.

We apprehend no one will believe that the compilers of the statement published by the papers we mention were ignorant of the fact that under a special law the register of deeds and clerk of district court of Polk county are required to turn the fees they collect into the county treasury, and that they and their clerks are paid salaries by the county, which is not the case in any of the counties of Norman, Douglas, Pope or Grant. Nor were they ignorant of the fact that the county hospital is nearly self supporting, nor that a large part of what they held out as ordinary county expenses was incurred in erecting the new jail, or that the counties they name for comparison have no rivers that require costly bridges, and the amounts spent for county improvements is nearly nothing.

But to have dealt fairly with the matter would not serve their purpose, and they have been willing to lend their aid to deceive the people by publishing a partial statement only when a full one would show the unwisdom of the cause they advocate.

EXPENSES OF A NEW COUNTY.

It is amusing, indeed, to look over the estimates made by writers in the East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls and McIntosh papers as to the cost of running a new county. Those people do not seem to know that the salaries and fees of their officers are fixed by the general laws of the state, and that the county commissioners will have nothing to do with it, except as to salary of county attorney. That they fix in the first place, but the attorney, if not satisfied can appeal to the judge of district court. We think it is hardly too much to say that a county attorney worth having will not be got for less than $600 per annum. However it may be as to attorney, section 880, Kelley's Statutes of Minnesota fixes the salary of auditor, and and section 896 of same that of treasurer and any fairly intelligent school boy will figure out that the salaries of auditors will be, according to the assessment of 1893:

For Nash	$1,200.00
Columbia	1,033.50

instead of $720 for each as given in these estimates. For treasurer it cannot be so accurately estimated, as his salary depends upon moneys he collects or receives, but it will be nearly if not quite double the estimate of $600 per annum. The assessment for 1894 has been considerably raised by the state board, we have not the exact figures, but it will raise the salaries somewhat above what we have here given. Judge of probate is paid according to population, $100 for first one thousand inhabitants, and fifty dollars for each additional thousand or major fraction thereof. This will make for Nash, $450, Red Lake, $450 and Columbia $550, instead of $300 for each as estimated.

They estimate for books and stationery, $410, when any person of experience in these matters knows it will be at least $4,000 the first year, as the records relating to the new county will have to be transcribed, and new books bought in which to enter them. And so it is all along the line.

The people who got up those statements know well enough the commissioners cannot fix the salaries of the officers named, and that their estimates are a humbug, but they think the greater part of people who read their papers will not take time to find the facts, but swallow whole all that is given them.

We apprehend they will find the people know more about the situation than these townsite boomers give them credit for.

Though it will not benefit them as much as they seem to think, it is to be expected that most of the people who reside and own property in East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls or McIntosh would desire to make their place a county seat. Any village would no doubt wish that. But as to the farmers, about all that would result to them from county division would be increased taxation. First would be the greater expense in proportion for county officers; next an expense of from $4,000 to $5,000 per county for procuring the necessary books and transcribing the records, which will be a necessity, and then a new court house and jail to ornament the ambitious city. You need not doubt that this would come. Most of it would be necessary, and all would be proper. The talk about a school district giving their building for a court house should receive no consideration, for no school district or village, or city for that matter, can legally give anything for such a purpose. The county could be made to give it up at any time, and the officers of the municipality who so used its property would be liable to a civil and criminal action for the same. Don't allow yourself to be fooled by that kind of chaff, but vote against the scheme of making four small, ill-shaped counties out of Polk, with a county seat in each of them away off to one side. If you think a division at all best, make one on common sense lines, leaving in each sufficient for a good sized county.

START IN DEBT

The Burden of Debt Under Which the New Counties Will Labor.

As a Result of Division Taxes Will be Almost Doubled.

Each of the Counties Must Pay Their Share of the Present Debt.

Some people seem to have the impression that in case of county division the new county will not be liable for any part of the debt created before its organization. This is a mistake. All such indebtedness is to be paid by the old and new counties in proportion to their assessed valuation. This will be apparent from a reading of the law. Section 14, Chapter 143 of General Laws of 1893 providing for the creation of new counties is as follows.

"Sec. 14. When there is any bonded or other floating county indebtedness outstanding against any county out of which any such new county has been wholly or in part created, the same shall be paid by such old and new counties in proportion to their respective valuations (as shown by the last general assessment) of the portions of the property of the county or counties out of which such new county was created. Provided: That in case any such county, out of which any new county has been in whole or in part created, possesses county buildings erected by the county, the same shall be appraised and the present value thereof to the county in which such buildings are situated shall be ascertained as hereinafter provided, and such appraised value of said buildings shall be deducted from the amount of said bonded or floating indebtedness to be so apportioned, and the remainder of such indebtedness shall only be so apportioned between the several counties; and the amount of said remaining indebtedness (and which equals and represents the said appraised value of said county buildings) shall not be so apportioned among such several counties, but shall be wholly paid by the county which has and retains such county buildings. Such county buildings shall be appraised and their present value fixed and determined by three wholly disinterested persons, who shall be appointed by the governor; neither of whom shall be residents of or owners of taxable property in either of the counties interested and who shall take an oath to honestly and impartially appraise and determine the present value of such county buildings, and they shall file their oath with the secretary of state; and when they have made their appraisal they shall state and certify to the same in writing over their respective signatures, and make and sign and file with the auditor of each of such counties one of said certificates of appraisal; and such appraisal, when so made and certified to, shall be final and conclusive and such certificate shall be such evidence of the same. In making such appraisal said appraisers shall consider the cost of such county buildings and allow for subsequent wear and depreciation thereof and determine the present value thereof to the county."

The present value of the county buildings to the county retaining then is to be deducted from the indebtedness and the, balance apportioned among the several counties. What the present county buildings consisting of court house and jail would be worth to a small county is not easy to estimate. The jail anyway is three times the size that would be required.

The bonded indebtedness incurred principally for court house and bridges amounts to $104,500.00 $40,000.00 issued in the year 1883 the balance at various times between the years 1881 and 1889. As no county property but buildings is to be deducted and those we have now would hardly be considered worth more than $25,000.00 to a small county the balance to be apportioned among the several counties would be at least $79,500.00 of the present indebtedness of Polk county. The equalized assessment for 1893 shows the proposed counties would have

Nash,	2,096,710
Red Lake,	1,453,887
Columbia,	1,200,740

Polk,	$30,523
Nash,	21,613
Red Lake,	14,987
Columbia,	12,377

So it is unforunately true that none can start with a clean sheet.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, this 8th day of October, 1894.

C. U. WEBSTER,
County Auditor.

We have given in this sheet the latest official figures as to cost for county purposes of all the counties of the state, their area, population and assessed valuation. We have given from the official financial statements the cost to Polk county for the year 1893 and also of Norman county for that year, and also the statement of expenses of Polk certified to by the county auditor, C. U. Webster. We have pointed out the errors in the "comparative statement" issued by the county division people. We have shown that their estimates of the cost of running the proposed counties is very wide of the mark, and the proportions of the indebtedness of Polk county that each will have to assume; and we have further given some arguments that seemed to us pertinent to the question under consideration.

As to the arguments and comments we have made, each person can of course judge for himself what bearing they have on the case, and we only ask a fair consideration of them.

As to the figures and statistics and statements of the law we give under the present circumstances we feel warranted in making a particular appeal to the voters of the county. So much has been issued in the way of statements and statistics by the advocates of county division that we say is false, that the fair-minded man who desires to get the truth but has not the official statistics and statements and laws at to and from which to inform himself may well say I do not know which of your statements to believe; I may as well believe one as the other.

To all such we would say, if you cannot find time yourself to look up the truth, go to your neighbors who are in the same position and agree on some one of them on whom you can rely to find out what are the real facts..

We have in this statement been very particular to give the figures and law correctly and we positively assert that they will not be found to vary from the official statistics and laws. We invite your most diligent search and criticism and submit the matter to you, confident that whether or not you think division of the county on some lines would be beneficial, your better judgment will tell you that the proposed division, making the counties as small and ill-shaped as this scheme proposes, can only be injurious to all of them and would benefit the proposed county seats much less than they imagine.

Farm produce is gradually going up and soon all the products of the farm will bring a fair price. If the farmers would look at the way pork is going up it is safe to say that more of them will feed wheat to hogs next season.

CROOKSTON PAYS

As Much Taxes as Either the Counties of Columbia or Red Lake.

This City as Well Able to Support a County as They Would Be.

The City of Crookston pays nearly one-seventh of all the taxes of Polk county. Its assessed valuation in 1893 as finally fixed by the state board of equalization was $1,067,818 while that of the whole county was $7,712,292. Outside of county buildings scarcely anything has been expended by the county within the city in improvements in recent years and but little has been asked, so it will be seen that Crookston pays large sums for roads and bridges outside her borders beyond her proportion. We do not hear that any ojection is made to this but it may not be out of place to call attention to the fact.

We have heard many expressions of surprise that the people of Crookston do not bestir themselves in the county division matter. While the proposed county seats are all alive raising money, issuing literature and sending out canvassers to gain votes, Crookston has remained passive not not even doing anything to correct the false statements that have been so industriously circulated by the boomers of East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls, and McIntosh.

They expect the people of these towns to be active for division, but they expect the farmers of the county who will have to pay the cost and who have the decision of the matter in their hands, to look into it and learn where the truth lies. They may have been too ready to believe that the tables as to cost of running large and small counties that have been issued and are so incredible in themselves would not be accepted as true until inquiry was made and the truth learned; and that the trouble of contradicting them is superfluous. However that may be it is the farmers who have the votes that will decide the matter and who have the cost to pay and they should take interest in the matter as much or nearly as much as the City of Crookston.

HOW IT WORKS.

The claim is made that in case of county division district court expenses would be less, as jurors would have less distance to travel to the county seat. It is a fact that as it is proposed to divide the county the jurors would not have to travel on an average more than half the distance they now do, but it should also be remembered that four times as many jurors will have to travel and receive mileage. They will, of course only have one fourth as long to stay as now, but they will have the travelling to do each term just the same. This would be a considerable item of additional expense. As to sheriff's fees it should be remembered that the sheriff of Polk county under special law of 1891 is only allowed 75 per cent as much for his services as sheriffs generally receive, and is doing work for the county, he receives pay only for miles actually and necessarily travelled. Witnesses and parties to suits have to travel farther now, but it is a great advantage to have a long term of court at one place rather than four short terms at various places, for the reason that in a term of few cases all parties and witnesses will find they must be in readiness for their case all the time, as the cases cannot well be set for a day certain, but where there is a large number of cases for trial, an arrangement can generally be made so a party knows the day his case will come on and need not be waiting around for it. So it will be seen there is something on both sides of this feature of the case.

Voters should remember to vote on each proposition for county division. There are four propositions, and voting on one has no effect upon the others. A cross opposite "Yes" is a vote in favor of establishing that county, a cross opposite "No" is a vote against that division. A majority of all the votes cast upon a proposition determines whether the county named in it shall be established.

One vote in favor of a proposition will establish the county if no one takes the trouble to vote "No." Let every one keep this in mind, express his wishes whichever way they are on every proposition for the establishment of a new county. This is by far the most important matter to the people of this county as a whole that is to be decided at the coming election. Don't fail to vote on each and every proposition with a sense of the fact that you are registering your judgment on a matter of great importance.

HOT CAMPAIGN IN MILWAUKEE.

Workingmen Going Into Politics In Earnest—Old Parties Worried.

There are strong indications that what is known as the "labor vote" is going to cut a big figure here this fall. For the first time the labor unions are taking united action, with the object in view of forming into a solid body for political purposes. While Robert Schilling still remains at the front there is any amount of new blood being infused into the Populist party here, and it will only be a short time before these new men will be heard from. Most of them are officers of the various unions, and they are all genuine workingmen—men who really work for a living and have the confidence of their followers and fellow workmen.

At the big meeting held Sunday the unions were united for political action by the formation of ward clubs in every ward in the city. There is a strong feeling among the workingmen that the time for united action has arrived, and that they can accomplish by the ballot what they failed to accomplish by strikes.

There are among these unionists men who are closely allied to the old parties, and from them come reports that are greatly worrying the Republican and Democratic managers.

"I came very near being thrown down two flight of stairs for just hinting that we ought to vote the Republican ticket this fall," said one of these men in making a report to a Republican leader. "The boys are in earnest, and they believe they will carry the county over both the Democrats and Republicans. The big strike of Chicago and the calling in of the federal troops and the federal court injunctions have aroused them. The developments of the present investigation are stirring them up, and there is going to be a big labor vote here and a good organization. You know I am 'all right,' and that it is a Republican victory that will be to my interest, but I am afraid of the outlook."

A Democratic union man who is doing some work for the county committee made a report that was almost identical.

"If you want to win out," said he, "you want to declare yourselves in with the labor party this fall."

But the labor men are somewhat foxy and do not propose to have the Democrats indorse them, and to prevent such a contingency they will not hold their convention until after the Democrats have placed a ticket in the field.

Eight years ago the labor party swept this county, with the Democrats and Republicans making a great fight against each other, and it was only by a combination of the Democrats and Republicans that the new party was defeated and disrupted. This year there is absolutely no chance of the two old enemies forming an alliance.—Special to Chicago Record.

POPULISM UP TO DATE.

Wonderful Growth of the Party Which Offers the People Salvation.

In 1890 the Populists elected five congressmen in Kansas, two in Nebraska and one in Minnesota. In the south the Alliance elected some 25 members, all of whom turned traitor excepting Watson and Winn. A Populist senator was also chosen from Kansas and South Dakota.

In 1892 the Populists elected five members from Kansas, two from Nebraska, one from Minnesota, two from Colorado, one from California and one from Nevada; also one senator each from Nevada and Nebraska. In the south there were at least 30 members elected, but counted out. Aside from this there were a large number of half breeds, like Bryan, Bland and Sibley, who were elected because of their Populistic tendencies and promises. Since then one congressman from California has proved traitor, and one from Nevada declared he was not a Populist. To make up for this loss Senator Jones has declared himself with us. The present status in congress, therefore, is five senators and ten congressmen.

There are Populist governors in Oregon, Kansas, Colorado and North Dakota, with North Carolina and Illinois very much in doubt and no mention of the governor of Virginia, who holds his office by theft and fraud. All over the country minor offices are held by Populists, as well as judges and members of legislatures.

In 1890, as near as could be calculated, there were only 850,000 votes cast for Populists, while in 1892 on congressmen there were nearly 2,000,000. In 1890 there were not to exceed 200 reform papers in the country, while now there are fully 1,800 weeklies and 12 dailies. At the present time there are over 275 candidates nominated for congress on the Populist ticket, and the chances are that not more than 10 or 20 districts will be omitted. There will be full state tickets in every state where such elections are held, and nearly every county office will be contested for.

Can any one read the above and not conclude that the People's Party is growing? And why not? It is the only political party that holds out even a promise for a change of conditions. It is the only party that declares for a more equitable distribution of the fruits of labor. Such a party, with such a growth, cannot be eliminated by ridicule or abuse. It has, however, just begun to grow, as the near future will disclose.—National Watchman.

Learn That You May Teach.

There is not, we believe, a single man on God's green earth but who desires to be right, and if you can reach his reason and conscience through a rational presentation of facts you will make a convert. To gain a friend for reform, one who will stay, present your case in a reasonable and intelligent manner that will appeal to his reason and sense of right and justice. But to do this you must understand the question yourself, and you cannot understand it unless you study it.—Fort Pierre (S. D.) Review.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The People Could Remove the Ills They Complain of if They Would Try.

Is it not about time to stop blaming capital and capitalist, monopoly and monopolists for the ills which afflict labor and commerce to charge the blame home where it belongs—to labor itself?

Really the suffering people are alone to blame for their condition.

If they have not made their own condition, they have permitted it, they have, and continue to acquiesce in measures and politics and to give support to men and parties which have reduced them to poverty and serfdom.

We all remember how eloquently John A. Logan started out in defense of the people against the financial schemes of Wall street which resulted in the panic of 1873 and the long period of unparalleled suffering and labor depression which has followed in its wake.

But his words fell on deaf ears.

The people deified the Republican party, and believed it, like the pope, was infallible.

They heeded not its warnings nor cared for the calamities he predicted.

He saw that he was sowing on stony ground and on sandy barrens, where no harvest could be hoped for during his day at least.

When a few years subsequent he was asked why he had turned his back upon the people and was lending his support to their enemies, he replied:

"The masses don't hold state and national conventions.

They know how zealously the masses will vindicate and defend all measures of public policy, no matter how damaging or dangerous to the public weal, provided it receives the indorsement of party conventions and the sanction of party leaders.

Farmers stand with folded arms and see corporations destroy the value of their lands and products, rob them of markets, destroy their medium of exchange, force them into debt and their lands under irredeemable mortgages, extort ruinous rates for transportation, levy burdensome taxes, while millions upon millions, robbed from honest toil, are being accumulated and piled up in the great cities. Society is suffering from the effects of unjust class legislation.

We are alarmed at the growth of land monopoly. It is fostered by legal encouragement and protection.

We complain of the extortions of the coal monopolies that refuse to employ men to dig coal whose families are starving for want of employment and at the same time deprive thousands of poor families of coal who are freezing for want of it.

We complain of low wages, low prices and scarcity of money when the people have it in their power to reverse these conditions had they the courage of a mouse to demand and the independence of manhood to act, and these evils will continue and intensify until men cease to be partisan slaves and assert their manhood and God given rights.

Until then let them suffer, for of suffering comes wisdom.—Chicago Sentinel.

Figures That Talk.

The assertions of the Republicans that the last, or Populist, state senate cost the people more than the previous, or Republican, state senate has brought out the following facts from Dr. Zercher, the assistant secretary of state. He says that it is impossible to arrive at the exact figures in either case, but the records in his office show that the only difference in the number of employees of the two bodies was that the Populist senate had one more assistant journal clerk than the Republican senate. But it had 15 less enrolling clerks, one less doorkeeper, two less janitors and one less stenographer.

The secretary and his assistant of the Republican senate of 1891 cost the state $1,221, while the same officers of the Populist senate of 1893 cost only $750.

The impeachment of Judge Botkin by the senate of 1891 was a Republican job to whitewash a Republican official and cost the state $38,857.58.

The journal of the Republican senate of 1891 cost $5,111.34, while the journal of the Populist senate of 1893 cost only $3,310.01. The session laws of 1891 cost $6,619.36, while those of 1893 cost only $5,735.20. The legislative printing for 1891 cost $44,519.32, while for 1893 it cost only $17,167.07. While the last item includes all the printing ordered by both the senate and the house, it also includes $10,131.61, which was for the Botkin impeachment trial, and which, strictly speaking, should be charged up to the senate printing expense for 1891. However, after deducting that amount from the cost for 1891, there still remains more than double the cost of the work for 1893.—Topeka Press Dispatch.

The Spirit of Reform.

Many people indulge the opinion that Populist ideas and measures are strictly local and of American origin. Nothing is further from the truth. The spirit of reform sweeping this nation is simply the tail end of a social cyclone that is twisting its way around the world. It had its beginning in faraway New Zealand, and in 20 years' time it has rescued that fertile island completely from the hands of the usury gang. While nominally under the protection of Great Britain, its inhabitants are far freer from misrule and oppression than any people on earth.—Denver Road.

Incongruous.

A clerical correspondent of one of the church papers relates that a certain prelate had great difficulty in suppressing his laughter at the consecration of a church the other day owing to the device on one of the school banners which was carried in the procession before the service. This banner was adorned with a very fierce looking lion, with terrible claws and teeth, while underneath him was the legend, "Suffer little children to come unto me."—London Truth.

A MOVING MOUNTAIN.

It Is Travelling Slowly but Surely Down the Columbia River.

A traveling mountain is found at the Cascades of the Columbia. It is a triple-peaked mass of dark brown bassalt, six or eight miles in length where it fronts the river, and rises to the height of almost 2,000 feet above the water. That it is in motion is the last thought that would be likely to suggest itself to the mind of any one passing it, yet it is a well established fact that this entire mountain is moving slowly but steadily down to the river, as if it had a deliberate purpose some time in the future to dam the Columbia and form a great lake from the Cascades to the Dalles. In its forward and downward movement the forest along the base of the ridge has become submerged in the river. Large tree stumps can be seen standing dead in the water on this shore.

The railway engineers and brakemen find that the line of railway which skirts the foot of the mountain is being continually forced out of place. At certain points the permanent way and rails have been pushed eight or ten feet out of line in a few years. Geologists attribute this strange phenomenon to the fact that the bassalt, which constitute the bulk of the mountain, rests on a substratum of conglomerate or soft sandstone, which the deep, swift current of the mighty river is constantly wearing away, or that this softer subrock is of itself yielding at great depths to the enormous weight of the harder mineral above.—Goldthwait's Geographical Magazine.

RUBIES AND SAPPHIRES.

The Same Stones, Only Differently Colored.

The finest "pigeon blood" rubies come from Burma, those from Siam or Ceylon being too dark or too pale, and the Montana stones being cloudy and brown. A perfect one carat specimen may cost $600 while a diamond of the finest water of the same size can be bought for $125, says the Houston Post. The rich color of the ruby, a color which does not blacken like the blue of a sapphire by night, is supposed to be due to a trace of oxide of chromium but this is still a moot point with chemists, and all are not even agreed as to the sapphire's velvet tinge.

This latter stone is much less valuable than ruby, being found larger and more abundantly. Sapphires really present all colors, the pure white variety, when skillfully cut, being difficult to tell from a diamond. This deception honest jewelers frequently practice to catch the unwary. Both rubies and sapphires are occasionally met with as "star stones"—that is, opoque cabochon cut gems showing the perfect steely rays of a star. A star ruby is excessively rare, but the sapphire star is fairly common.

The Morphine Habit in France.

Dr. Jules Rochard, in the Union Medicale, draws a gloomy picture of the increase of the morphine habit in France and elsewhere. The habit, he finds, becomes incurable at the end of six months of indulgence. The fair sex and the doctors are, in his opinion, the most deeply addicted to morphine. He draws an unpleasant comparison between the behavior of each kind of delinquent. Women, he says, delight in declaring how they indulge in this vice, and show ornamental hypodermic syringes to their friends. Dr. Notet states that a lady, having broken the needle of her syringe in a remote country village, wounded her skin with scissors and thrust the stump of the needle into the wound, injecting in this manner till a new syringe arrived from Paris.—London Public Opinion.

HOW STOUT GOT STOUT

THE REARKABLE EXPERIENCE OF A RHEUMATIC SUFFERER.

All But Paralyzed—Lost His Flesh and Expected to Die—How He Got Well and Strong.

(From the Mt. Sterling, Ill., Republican)

Few men are held in higher esteem by their fellow townspeople than Jas. W. Stout of Ripley, Ill., and it is due no doubt partly to this popularity that the record of the case has created such wide-spread interest. While his experience is not without an equal, yet, it has been sufficiently remarkable to demand the attention of thousands of people in Illinois, among whom are numbered some of the most eminent physicians.

In January, 1893, Mr. Stout was stricken with what was then believed to be sciatic rheumatism, and in a short time was barely able to hobble around on crutches, and it seemed to his friends that his days were numbered. To-day he is a strong, hearty looking man of 160 pounds.

How this wonderful change was brought about is most interesting as told to a representative of the Republican by Mr. Stout himself:

"I was afflicted with sciatic rheumatism and lumbago in January, 1893. The sciatic nerve on the right side became affected in the hip, running down to the ankle and across the small of the back to the left side, and soon my whole system became afflicted, causing me the most excruciating pain. In a very short time I became totally unable to attend to any business whatever, and the disease rapidly growing worse I had to take to my bed, where I lay suffering almost continuously for months the most agonizing torture, scarcely being able to move or be moved. At one time I lay for six weeks flat on my back, the slightest movement causing me such pain as almost to throw me into convulsions. I cannot begin to express to you the intense pain I suffered. I was drawn by the severeness of the malady, over to the left side; lost my appetite, had no desire for food, and what little I did eat I could not digest, the digestive organs failing to perform their duty, adding greatly to my already precarious condition. For weeks at a time I was unable to eat or sleep, suffering all the time most intensely and at times fearing I would lose my reason, and would have welcomed death to relieve me of my sufferings.

I consulted with local physicians and some of the most eminent specialists of the larger cities throughout the country, some treating me for one thing and some for another, but without effect, and I received no relief whatever. One physician told me that I had double curvature of the spine and would eventually become paralyzed. I spent hundreds of dollars in the short time I was afflicted without receiving the least benefit. My friends all thought that there was no hope for me whatever and said that I must die, and I, myself, had almost given up in despair, when in September, 1893, about eight months after I was first afflicted, my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Without much hope I at once sent to C. F. Rickey & Co., Druggists, Mt. Sterling, Ill., and procured some of the pills and immediately began taking them. Before long I became aware of a great change for the better in my almost hopeless condition. My appetite came back and my digestive organs performed their usual functions properly. I took some more and grew rapidly better—could sit up in a chair and my body began to straighten out; continued the treatment and in a short time was able to be about on crutches. My recovery from that time on was very rapid and assured. My right leg, which before I commenced this treatment, was numb and dead, now experienced a prickling tingling sensation. I was enabled to throw away my crutches and walk upright once more among my fellows, a better man physically than ever before. When first taken by the disease I weighed 160 pounds, was reduced to 115; I now weigh 166, more than I ever weighed at any time in my life. Yes, sir, I lay my recovery entirely to Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100—by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

It frequently happens that those who are most ingenious in devising plans of economy for others are themselves extremely extravagant.

COMPOSITION OF MORTAR.

Experiments by the Austrian Society of Engineers.

The Australian Society of Engineers recently conducted experiments with a view to determining the composition of mortar best adapted to work, and to remain in permanent and effective condition when mixed and laid during freezing weather. The experiments were made first with brick masonry, two kinds of stone being used for the purpose; everything was dry and free from snow and ice, and the mortar was mixed as tiff as possible; the limes and cements were all tested in the municipal experimental station, according to the established and reliable system of the society. The conclusions of the investigating committee, as briefly summarized, are, that in brick masonry laid in frosty weather mortars into any part of lime enters should not be used: Roman cement mortars behave fairly well under such conditions, and Portland cement mortars give good results; the use of warm water showed somewhat more satisfactory work, and salt materially increased resistance to frost. With rubber masonry, using either sandstone or limestone, lime mortar was entirely out of place, and Roman cement gave unsatisfactory work unless mixed with salt. Under all the circumstances presented by these various tests and the character of the results obtained, the final recommendation of the committee is that, in laying brick or rubble masonry in winter, to use only Portland cement mortar, mixed with salt if possible.

Good Clothes and Invalids.

"One of the things that helped my recovery," said a woman recently, who has just regained her health after a serious iliness, "was a pretty red jacket which my sister brought me one day in lieu of jellies and fruit. It was becoming, and I enjoyed it. The doctor, when he first saw me in it, said I looked 20 per cent. better than the day before; man-like, he didn't appreciate the reason, and my spirits, and, consequently my condition, bettered in proportion. Too often invalids are wrapped in any old thing that is handy. I remember laughing once when a friend in robust health showed me a dainty lace-trimmed sick gown. 'For me,' she explained, 'if I ever need it.' The notion struck me as absurd, when she was never ill, but after my experience with that bed jacket I appreciate better the value of attractive environment under depressing circumstances."—New York Times.

Manuring Virgin Soil.

An experiment station has been established in Oklahoma, and its first recorded experiment shows the advantage of manure for wheat on the soil of that heretofore uncultivated land. Without manure the soil yielded thirteen bushels per acre. With commercial fertilizers the yield was increased to thirty-two bushels per acre. This indicates that Oklahoma soil lacks phosphate, and, possibly, also potash. We suspect that the lack of phosphate is more often the cause of wheat failure in the Northwest than is generally supposed. The hot, dry winds do not quickly sap the vitality of grain that has been fertilized with mineral manures. There is more substance in the stalk, and even in times of drought this will fill out the grain. We have noticed in Eastern-grown grain fields that the crops fertilized with mineral manures stood the drought better than those not manured. Stable manure, on the other hand, often dries in the soil and makes the drought worse.

Big Rings for Women.

The latest fashionable freak among women who are blessed with pretty hands is to wear an immense ring, like a Roman Catholic bishops on the first finger of the right hand. It used to be considered the height of vulgarity to place a ring on the index finger, but now this decoration is the dernier cri. The ring must be a superb one, and must partake of the slender and graceful daintiness of the "Marquise" circle. It must be solid, big and respectably ecclesiastic in its appearance. The feminine mind, always desirous of presenting contrasted effects to poor humanity, sees the delicately sarcastic anomaly of a little, white, frivolous-looking hand wearing a big, aggressively solid sort of ring.—Manufacturing Jeweler.

CAUSE OF DIPHTHERIA.

The Remedy Is the Destruction of the Odorous Substances by Fire.

Seeing that it has been proved beyond dispute that there has been an enormous increase of diphtheria in large towns during the last twenty years, and that it is equally obvious there ought to have been a diminution of the science of medicine be so progressive as we are constantly affirming and hoping that is, we ought, as the natural custodians of the public health to put ourselves upon new inquiries and fresh action. The massing together of children in the elementary schools may be, and probably is, accountable for a portion of the increase. But are there no other contributing factors? It has been suggested that the free opening and ventilation of sewer drainage into the streets of towns, which has been so extensively developed during the last two or three decades, may be one of the causes of the enormous multiplication of the diphtheria bacillus in the air and on exposed surfaces in streets and houses. This seems highly probable, and, if it should prove to be the case, there would appear to be no difficulty in reducing such danger to a minimum, except, of course, the difficulty of cost. The remedy for such a state of things is the destruction of the odorous substances which are given off by the drains into the atmosphere. This may easily be accomplished by fire or other methods. Some experiments in destruction have, we believe been quite recently made in Tottenham, and the successful destruction of vile odors, with the resultant sweetening of the atmosphere, has been quite remarkable. As yet no facts have been published, but the experiments have demonstrated that sewer gas can very easily be destroyed, and it is highly probable that with its extensive destruction one cause of the alarming increase of diphtheria in our large towns would be removed.—London Hospital.

Only Six Tons of Platinum Available

There are only six tons of platinum commercially in existence. It is indispensable for glow electric lamps, for no other metal as good an electric conductor can be fused into the glass. Therefore, its price has increased within recent years many hundred times, and threatens to go yet higher. Either a substitute conductor will have to be discovered or a new variety of glass made with a coefficient of expansion nearer that of ordinary metal. There is a big bonanga here for some inventor.—Baltimore American.

COOK'S GANG AT WORK

AN EXPRESS TRAIN HELD UP IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

The Gang of Desperadoes Headed by the Bandit Cook Renew Operations—A Train Robbed and Two Passengers Injured.

Wagoner, Ind. T., Oct. 23.—The Kansas City & Memphis express, which left here at 9:30 Saturday night, was wrecked and robbed by the Cook gang of desperadoes at Correta, a blind siding five miles south of here. The train was running twenty miles an hour, and when within 100 feet of the switch a man came out from behind an embankment and threw the switch for the side track, running the train into a string of empty box cars. Engineer James Harris applied the air brakes and reversed the engine. The robbers commenced firing at the engine and coaches. As soon as the train stopped two of the robbers commanded the engineer and fireman to come down and as soon as they had dismounted, marched them in front of them to the baggage and express cars. Here they forced Express Messenger Ford to open the doors by perforating the side of the car with bullets. Meanwhile two of the robbers had taken up a position at the rear end of the sleeper to prevent any one escaping. Two others mounted the platform between the smoker and baggage car and two more the platform between the first and second coaches, all keeping up a continual firing. The two robbers in the express car were meanwhile ransacking the car, securing all the money in the local safe. They commanded Messenger Ford to open the through safe, but when he explained that the safe was locked at the main office and not opened until it reached its destination, they left it. The two on the front platform then started through the coach, demanding money and valuables. As soon as they reached the rear end of the coach the two men on that platform started through the second coach. When they were about half-way through a freight train following close behind, whistled, and Bill Cook, the leader, who had all the time remained outside issuing commands, swearing at the passengers and shooting, called for all hands to come out. The men on the cars jumped out, and when all were on the ground they fired a last volley at the train and disappeared in the darkness. There were eight or ten men in the party. Two of them were white and the others were half-breeds.

Jack Mabar, an advance agent for Mabar's minstrels, was hit in the forehead by a bullet and dangerously, if not fatally, wounded. Walter Barnes of Van Buren, Ark., was also slightly injured by a bullet striking him in the cheek. Special Officers Helmack and Dickson, of the Missouri Pacific, were on the train, also United States Deputy Marshals Brunner and Casaver, but they were covered by Winchesters in the hands of bandits before they had time to make a move. Casaver lost a watch and a six-shooter. The train was backed up to this place to give the injured medical attendance. The train was completely riddled with bullets, every window being broken. The engineer's cab was shot all to pieces, even the steam gauge and gauge lamp being shot away. It was a miracle that many lives were not lost. Fully 200 shots were fired. The Missouri Pacific immediately started a special train from Little Rock carrying Supt. W. J. Kees and deputy marshals. United States Indian Agent Wisdom of Muckogee has ordered all the Indian police to report for duty and will take the trail immediately.

WOULD KILL HARRISON.

Reported Attempt Upon the Life of the Ex-President.

New York, Oct. 23.—A special to the World from Logansport says that much excitement was caused there by a rumor that an attempt had been made on ex-President Harrison's life. According to the World's dispatch, shortly after the Harrison party arrived, two men, both heavily bearded and apparently disguised, were seen swinging themselves down from a rear window of an undertaking establishment into an open yard in the rear of the rink, where Gen. Harrison was speaking. Both men were seen by several spectators, who were seated on a porch near by. Each had a revolver in his hand, and as one man sprang into the open space he was heard to say: "When he comes out shoot him." Then they went across the street on a run. The police were notified and made a thorough but vain search. They say that the two men were pickpockets, who were pursued.

Ardmore, Ind. T., Oct. 23. — Near here last night Terry and Fannie Cox, nine and eleven years old respectively, were burned to death, and C. M. Cox, their father, was so badly burned that no hopes of his recovery are entertained. They were trying to fill a lamp with coal oil while the wick was burning.

All other selections, about 80,000 acres, will be made in the northwest corner of the state, practically in one body.

SOWED WITH ARTILLERY.

How Gunpowder Helped to Plant Trees on a Rocky Crag.

Alexander Hasmyth, the landscape painter, was a man fruitful in expedients. To his mind, the fact that a thing could not be done in the ordinary manner was no reason why it should be given up. His son relates the following interesting example of his ingenuity.

The Duke of Athol, says he, consulted him as to some improvements which he desired to make in his woodland scenery near Dunkeld. Among other things, a certain rocky crag needed to be planted with trees, to relieve the grim barrenness of its appearance. The question was how to do it, as it was impossible for any man to climb the crag, in order to set seed or plants in the cleft of the rocks.

A happy idea struck my father. Having observed in front of the castle a pair of small cannons, used for firing salutes on great days, it occurred to him to turn them to account. A tinsmith in the village was ordered to make a number of canisters with covers. The canisters were filled with all sorts of suitable tree seeds. The cannons were loaded and the canisters were fired up against the high face of the rock. They burst and scattered the seed in all directions. Some years after, when my father revisited the place he was delighted to see that his scheme of planting by artillery had proved successful; the trees were flourishing in all the recesses of the rock.—London Answers.

Origin of Cosmetics.

A learned German writer, recently deceased, Herr Schultz, wrote shortly before his death a history of cosmetics. Herr Schultz traced the fashion, said to survive to this day among certain members of the female sex, of artificially reddening the face. It was not in order to appear beautiful that the primevil savage smeared his countenance with red ochre, but to inspire terror to the breasts of his enemies. This artful device probably had the desired effect, for we are told that as the raddled ones prevailed in war they became the favorites of the opposite sex and by degrees a red face came to be considered as a beauty in itself. In the course of his treatise Herr Schultze seriously affirmed that in Fiji the people used to paint their bodies on the day their taxes had to be paid, and that that day was observed as a day of general rejoicing.—London Daily News.

Japanese Pockets.

Japanese folks have six or eight pockets cunningly inserted in the cuffs of their wide sleeves. These pockets are always filled with a curious miscellany peculiar to the droll little people. As common as twine in Young America's pocket is the prayer amulet written on delicate sheets of rice paper and composed by the bonzes. In accordance with the abiding and funny faith of the Japanese women these prayers are swallowed, paper and all, like a pill in cases of mental and physical distress. Another essential, never missing, is a number of small squares of silky paper, which is put to the most unexpected purpose—to hold the stem of a lotus or lily, to dry a teacup, wipe away a tear or blow the almond little nose of the doll-like little woman. The very tenderest people in Japan use this style of handkerchief for practical purposes.

TO PUT ON needed flesh, no matter how you've lost it, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works wonders. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it builds the flesh up to a safe and healthy standard—promptly, pleasantly and naturally. The weak, emaciated, thin, pale and puny are made strong, plump, round and rosy. Nothing so effective as a strength restorer and flesh maker is known to medical science; this puts on healthy flesh not the fat of cod liver oil and its filthy compounds. It rouses every organ of the body to activity, purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood so that the body feels refreshed and strengthened. If you are too thin, too weak, too nervous, it may be that the food assimilation is at fault. A certain amount of bile is necessary for the reception of the fat foods in the blood. Too often the liver holds back this element which would help digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stimulates, tones up and invigorates the liver, nourishes the blood, and the muscles, stomach and nerves get the rich blood they require.

Spent Hundreds of Dollars with no Benefit.

M. J. COLEMAN, of 11 Sargent St., Roxbury, Mass., writes: "After suffering from dyspepsia and constipation with untold agony for at least 18 months, I am more than pleased to say that after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' for one month, I was entirely cured, and from that day to this I do not know, thank God, what even a slight headache is. I paid a doctor on Tremont St., Boston, in one day (for his advice only,) the sum of $1.00 with $3.50 for medicine, and derived no benefit. I got more relief in one hour from your medicines, as far as my stomach was concerned, than from all the other medicine I used.

THE RAILROAD QUESTION.

It has been freely charged, for years past, by the public press and public speakers, that Gov. Nelson was and is a tool of the railroads, and a sympathizer with the corporations against the people. Does his record, during his four years in the state senate, sustain that claim, or disprove it? We assert that it sustains it.

FAVORS THE RAILROAD COMPANIES.

The first test vote that occurred in the senate during Nelson's term as senator, was on the first day of February, 1875. We find on page 56 of the senate journal, that Senator E. F. Drake, of St. Paul, (president of the Sioux City railroad company) had introduced a bill to extend the time in which the railroad companies should pay their taxes, due the state, on their gross earnings. This was the grasshopper era. If the railroads did not pay up their taxes the people would have to pay for them. The railroads might be poor, but the people were a hundred times poorer. The bill was introduced Jan. 22; referred to the committee on finance, of which John S. Pillsbury (the Minneapolis miller), was chairman, who, six days afterwards, reported it back with the recommendation that it pass; the same day it was rushed through the committee of the whole, read the second time and passed, with only one dissenting vote, without discussion of any kind; everybody but one voted for it, without understanding it. It went to the house. The senators however, began to get the thing through their heads, and three days thereafter Mr. Coggswell made a motion that the house be requested to return that bill to the senate, so that the senate could reconsider the vote whereby the bill passed.

"Senate File No. 71. A bill to extend the time of payment of taxes due the state on gross earnings of railroad corporations."

"The question being taken on the adoption of the resolution, [Mr. Coggswell's resolution to recall the bill from the house], the roll being called there were 16 yeas and 23 nays."

Knute Nelson voted NAY. So the resolution was lost. But the bill was subsequently lost in the house.

A BATTLE BETWEEN CITIZENS AND A RAILROAD COMPANY.

On the 24th of February, 1875, (p. 272) Mr. Nelson introduced S. F. 313: "a bill to extend the time for the completion of the St. Paul and Pacific railroad."

There was a great battle over this bill. A number of poor men, actual settlers, had helped to grade the roadbed and furnished ties, etc., and the company refused to pay them, and a scheme was formed to get the road into the hands of new men, free from these old claims. We read on page 390 of the Journal, that it was moved to commit the bill to a committee of one to amend it, so as to provide that before any lands were conveyed to the company the state should reserve 600,000 acres "For the purpose of securing the payment of debts contracted and due for the construction of said lines of railroad or any part thereof, the same being the debts contracted in the building of said railroad, and secured in the act approved Feb. 21, 1874, etc., and further providing, that before any conveyance of land should be made to said company, the company shall execute an assent to the payment of said debts, so that the company should not afterwards set up a claim against the state. This latter proviso was the hub of the whole matter. If the company was not forced to assent to the payment of the debts due to the citizens, for the construction of the road; in other words, if they were not allowed to swindle poor men out of their pay, while keeping the work for which the money was due, they might fall back on legal quibbles, that the state only held the land in trust for the company and must hand it over, etc., and thus defeat the creditors.

And consequently on this last proviso the fight was red hot, and the friends of the settlers were on one side and the friends of the railroad company on the other. The Journal, page 392, says:

The question being taken on the last proviso of the amendment, and the roll being called, there were yeas 24, nays 14. Among the yeas were Mr. Donnelly Macdonald, Michal Doran, Wm. Meighan, Thos. S. Buckam, Morton S. Wilkinson, (ex-United States senator, Judge Wells, Milo White (afterwards congressman), Gen. Berry of Winona county (formerly attorney general), Benedict, Blake, Butler, Child, Clark, Conkey, even Drake (the railroad president), Hill, Gen. Hubbard, (afterwards governor, Lineau, McGovern, Mealey, Bill Murray of St. Paul, and even John S. Pillsbury of the wheat ring, afterwards governor of the state.

On the other side there were 14 votes, and

ONE OF THEM WAS THAT OF KNUTE NELSON.

So the proviso was adopted.

But Mr. Donnelly was not only determined that the lands should be reserved for the protection of men who had done the work, but he wanted it put beyond question that the land should be sold in order to pay them; and so we read, on page 396 of the Senate Journal, March 3rd, 1875:

Mr. Donnelly offered the following resolution:

Whereas, it is known that many poor men, actual settlers in the counties along the line of said road, have performed work in grading or clearing the unfinished roadbed of the same, or in furnishing ties or doing other work upon the same, and have not been paid for such work, and that they have through ignorance, neglected to file their claims with the state auditor within 60 days from the 21st of February, 1874, as provided in the act of that date chapter CV of the special laws of this state, for the year 1874:

And Whereas, The said railroad company have, by reason of their default in the construction of said road as required by law, lost all claim to or interest in said unfinished portions of the road and the same is now the property of the state, therefore,

Resolved, That the bill be referred to a committee of one with instructions to add to it a provision that 50,000 acres of the lands which have already accrued to the said company, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be sold by the governor, in accordance with the provisions of said act of February 21, 1874, and the proceeds applied to the payment to said citizens of the state, of their said claims. under such regulations as the governor may prescribe..

This resolution was lost; yeas 11, and nays 25; Mr. Donnelly voted aye; Knute Nelson dodged. He had just made a motion to indefinitely postpone the whole bill. He was mad, because the previous resolution had been adopted to protect the creditors of the railroad company, and of reserving certain lands, and on the next page of the Journal, page 397, he is shown to be present and voting.

And then the vote came on Mr. Nelson's motion to indefinitely postpone the bill; and it was carried, yeas 20, nays 16. Mr. Donnelly voted no; and Mr. Nelson dodged again on his own motion. So the bill was indefinitely postponed.

But the railroad company finally concluded that it was better to have the bill anyhow, even if they could not get clear of their creditors, and so the same day, the vote by which it was indefinitely postponed was reconsidered, and the bill passed. And Mr. Donnelly voted yea, and Mr. Nelson dodged again. He was mad all through.

THE PEOPLE AGAINST THE RAILROADS

Hon. Amos Coggswell, of Steele, was a prominent anti-monopolist. A bill (H. F. No. 280) being up, "for the appointment of a railroad commissioner, defining his duties, and to prevent extortion and unjust discrimination, by railroad corporations," we read in the Journal of 1885, March 3d, page 407-3, that the following took place:

"Mr. Coggswell moved to amend the report of the committee of the whole by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the following: *

Sec. 3. That section (9) nine of said act be amended to read as follows:

No railroad corporation shall charge, collect or receive, for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description upon it railroad for any distance within this state, the same or a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received for the transportation in the same direction of any passenger or like quantity of freight of the same class, over a greater distance of the same railroad, nor shall any such railroad corporation charge, demand or receive from any person, company or corporation, for the transportation of persons or property, a greater sum than it shall at the same time charge, demand or receive from any other person, company or corporation for a like service from the same place and upon like conditions and similar circumstances; and all concessions of rates, drawbacks and contracts for special rates shall be open to all persons, companies or corporations alike under similar circumstances:

Sec. 4. That section seventeen (17) of said act be amended to read as follows: The fines mentioned in the last preceding section may be recovered in a civil action in the name of the state of Minnesota, and there may be several causes of action joined in the same complaint, as to extortion and unjust discrimination, and as to passenger and freight rates, and rates for the use and transportation of railroad cars, and for receiving, handling or delivering freights, or for the violation of any other of the provisions of this act. Provided that in all cases under the provisions of this act, a preponderance of evidence in favor of the state shall be sufficient to authorize a verdict and judgment for the state.

The question being taken on the adoption of the amendment and the roll being called there were 12 yeas and 28 nays."

The yeas were Judge Buckham, Clark, Coggswell, Conkey, Donnelly, Finseth, Hill, McGovern, Meighen, Wells, Westfall and White.

Among the nays were Drake, Pillsbury and Knute Nelson.

Here the issue was squarely joined between the people, the producers on the one side and the railroad companies on the other. All the amendment asked for was that a railroad company should not charge as much or more for carrying freight or passengers ten mile that it did for carrying the same freight or passengers 100 miles. Could anything be more reasonable? It was like saying that a farmer should not ask or receive as much for 50 pounds of wheat as he did for 500 pounds of wheat. And yet Knute Nelson voted against this very reasonable proposition, in the interest of railroad companies and against the people. And now he asks the people to re-elect him governor, to appoint a railroad commission that is to make the railroad companies obey the laws which stand on the statute books, and break up the railroad and elevator rings that have combined together and are robbing the people.

But this is not all.

"Mr. Meighen moved to strike out section seven of H. F. No. 280, and insert in lieu thereof the following.

Section 7. No railroad corporation shall charge, collect or receive for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description upon its railroad for any distance within this state, the same or a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received for the transportation in the same direction of any passenger or like quantity of freight, of the same class, over a greater distance of the same railroad, nor shall any such railroad corporation charge, demand or receive from any person, company or corporation for the transportation of persons or property, a greater sum than it shall at the same time charge, demand or receive from any other person, company or corporation for a like service from the same place upon like conditions and similar circumstances; and all concessions of rates, drawbacks and contracts for special rates shall be open to all persons, companies or corporations alike under similar circumstances."

The question being taken upon the amendment, and the roll being called, there were 15 yeas and 26 nays.

Among the nays was Knute Nelson. So the amendment was lost.

The purpose of Mr. Meighen was this: Mr. Coggswell's amendment included three sections, and it might be claimed that senators were favorable to the third section, but had to vote against it because it was linked with other sections alone; and it was voted down, 15 to 26, and Mr. Nelson voted against it. Thus the issue was squarely drawn and again Mr. Nelson took the side of the railroads against the people.

THE TAXATION OF RAILROAD LANDS.

One of the grievous burdens laid upon the people has been the fact that vast quantities of land owned by the railroad companies escape their just share of taxation, not only while in the hands of the companies, but even after they have been sold to third parties, or to other corporations, as in the case of the old Sioux City Railroad company, which sold its railroad to the Chicago, Northwestern & Omaha line, and then the lands remained the property of E. F. Drake and others, who held them for years free from taxation, under the pretence that the old company was a railroad company, although it owned no railroad and carried no passengers or freight. All this tended to throw heavier burdens on the actual settlers, who not only had to pay their own taxes, but the taxes which the railroad lands should have borne. Great popular extitement had followed, particularly in Southern Minnesota, on this question. Mr. Donnelly, as far back as 1876, tried to secure legislation which would have prevented all this trouble.

On Feb. 3rd, 1876 (107 of Journal) Hon. James Smith, Jr., of St. Paul, (president of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad), introduced S. F. 181, a bill to amend the general statute as to corporations, so as to provide for the mortgaging, foreclosure and sale of railroad companies. On the 26th of February, 1876, (page 320), Mr. Wilkinson introduced an amendment, to this bill. The Journal (322) says:

"Mr. Donnelly moved to amend to add to line 43 of the printed bill as follows:

Provided, that whenever any land-grant railroad company is foreclosed upon, as provided in this act, and the property of the same passes into the hands of purchasers thereunder, that all the lands of the said company, so sold, shall thereafter be subject to taxation, and shall be assessed and listed therefor as other real property in this state now is, by the officers whose duty it is to assess and list such real property.

Provided, however, that this provision shall not apply to the lands belonging to those portions of any road which, at the date of such foreclosure proceedings are unbuilt, but that the same shall remain free from taxation, as if no such foreclosure proceedings had been had; provided that the said lands shall be continue to be owned and possessed by the same corporation that owns and operates the said railroad company, to which they were originally granted.

Mr. Donnelly moved that this amendment to S. F. 181 be ordered printed, which motion prevailed."

The meaning of this was that as long as a railroad corporation really owned the land, then the agreements with them, in their charters, that their lands should be free from taxation, should hold good: but if the property of the company was foreclosed upon and sold then the lands became subject to taxation. And the second provision covered the very subterfuge afterwards resorted to by the Sioux City railroad company, and provided that the lands held by the original company should not escape taxation unless the company operated the railroad, to build which the lands were given.

Two days afterwards, Feb. 28, 1876, (page 342) Mr. James Smith, Jr., in the absence of Mr. Donnelly, had the bill, S. F. 181, taken up, and without waiting to have it engrossed, and without any vote on Mr. Donnelly's amendment, which was smothered and never heard of again, the "printed bill being taken as the engrossed bill," rushed the bill through by a vote of 26 yeas and nays none. Mr. Nelson did not vote, although he had voted on the last roll call. But Mr. Donnelly deserves credit for raising the question; and Mr. Nelson should have helped him, and demanded, in his absence, a vote on his very important amendment.

THE RED RIVER LAND GRANT.

On March 2, 1879, H. F. 392, came up in the senate. This was a bill to enable the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company to give up its line from Melrose to Glyndon, and build in lieu thereof a road north of Glyndon, up the Red River Valley. It is by virtue of this bill that the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad, or the Great Northern as it is now, claims the homes of thousands of settlers in the Red River Valley, and has compelled them to pay extortionate prices for the same, or be driven off and sacrifice their improvements. And this wrong has been carried through, in spite of a strong fight made by Mr. Donnelly, to protect the settlers, by means of a lot of decisions of the courts, in every one of which the law was twisted and perverted shamefully, to protect the railroads and impoverish the people. The supreme court of the United States has actually gone so far as to declare that a settler can not bring a suit to defend his title to these lands, but only the state or railroad company can have a hearing in a court of the United States.

When this bill came up in 1876 Mr. Donnelly mode a fight against it but Knute Nelson (see page 408 of Journal) moved to suspend the rules to put it through. Here is the Journal record:

"Mr. Nelson K. moved that the rules be suspended and H. F. 392 be read the second time and placed on file for the third reading. Carried—yeas 30, nays 8." Among the yeas was Knute Nelson; among the nays was Ignatius Donnelly. And the same day the bill passed, (see p. 428), by vote of 25 yeas and 11 nays. Knute Nelson voted yea, Mr. Donnelly voted nay.

Mr. Nelson all through those four years voted for every bill demanded by the railroads. He was the especial champion of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company, now the Great Northern, of which Mr. James J. Hill is president. The foregoing record shows that he not only voted for the railroad companies, but he made the motions in many instances, to secure them what they asked.

THE DOUBLE TAXATION OF MORTGAGED LANDS.

Another grievance that the farmer complained of bitterly, and for which they could obtain no relief, the Republican legislatures turning a deaf ear to them for 20 years past, has been the double taxation of mortgaged land.

For instance, A. B., a farmer, owns a farm worth $2,000 and there is a mortgage on it held by C. D. for $1,500. Now it is clear that A. B. has but $500 in that farm; in fact, if he cannot pay off the $1,500 he has no interest whatever. Under our laws C. D. usually pays no interest at all on his $1,500 in that farm, while A. B. pays the taxes on the whole $2,000, while he owns but $500. This is favoritism to the rich man at the expense of the poor man. Seventeen years ago Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, as a member of the state senate, tried to remedy this evil. Here is the record, taken from page 380 of the Senate Journal, March 2, 1875:

"Mr. Donnelly moved to refer S. F. No. 324 to a special committee of one, and to insert the following amendment:

"Amend section 2 of chapter 1, laws of 1874: Whenever it appears that the amount of money secured by any mortgage conveyance upon any real estate has been assessed, and that taxes thereon have been paid by the owner or owners of said mortgage, a reduction shall be made by the county auditor in the tax due upon such real estate by the owner of the same, equal to the amount of said tax, so assessed and paid upon the mortgage debt by the owner of the same."

Now nothing could have been fairer than this. It did not go so far as to say that the money-lender must pay his tax on the mortgage, but it provided that if he HAD paid it, the farm should be released from that much taxation. For instance, if A. B., the farmer, paid taxes on $2,000 (the farm) and C. D., the money lender, paid taxes on $1,500 (the mortgage on the farm), then the property embraced in that farm really paid taxes on $3,500, while it was worth but $2,000. And yet so plain and reasonable a proposition as this could not be passed in that Republican senate, and the Republican candidate for governor, Hon. Knute Nelson, voted against it! There is the record of the vote, p. 381,—17 for Mr. Donnelly's motion and 17 against it, and there not being a majority the motion was lost. If Knute Nelson had voted with Mr. Donnelly, the vote would have stood 18 to 16; it would have carried, and hundreds of thousands of dollars would have been saved to the debtor-roll of this state. For if the farmers knew that by the mortgage-holder paying the tax which he was really bound in law to pay, it would relieve them of so much tax, they would have seen that the tax was collected in thousands of cases.

HELPING THE FARMERS.

Those were sad times for farmers in those days when Nelson was in the state senate. The grasshoppers had fallen upon the people's crops and devoured them; hail had in many instances leveled what the grasshoppers could not eat; and what both grasshoppers and hail spared the Wheat Rings and Railoads had stolen. A great cry of distress went up from all parts of the state and especially the western and southwestern counties; the Red River Valley was but little settled then. Mr. Donnelly's feelings were warmly enlisted and we read, on page 83 of Senate Journal, Jan. 29, 1875, the following:

"Mr. Donnelly offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the committee on judiciary are hereby instructed to report a bill, to provide that in all cases where citizens of this state have been actually unable to pay their taxes, through damage by grasshoppers, or hailstorms, or failure of crops, or high rates of transportation, or low prices of their production, or any other cause whatever, that all interest, fines and penalties be remitted, and a reasonable time given wherein to pay the principal sum of such taxes."

The roll being called, there were yeas 17, and nays 23, so the resolution was lost.

It may be urged that this resolution was too sweeping; but it will be noted that it did not propose to release the unpaid taxes, but only the "interest, fines and penalties," which amounted to nearly one-half of the original taxes. And the next day the governor of the state, C. K. Davis, sent in a message to the legislature, in which he showed that over $20,000 had been paid in by counties and individuals to feed the starving people of the western and southwestern counties. The governor said in a message to the commissioners of the several counties of the state:

"These people and the very existence of their property, and all their beneficial relations to the state, have been imperiled by a succession of calamities, which dictate now the stern alternative, either to aid these sufferers, or to permit them to abandon this country to the reclamation of the wilderness, cancelling all of this value as absolutely as if it were burned up, and to lose the far more important, the vital, human element of our prosperity. * * * Whole communities have been reduced to a common destitution. Actual want reigns supreme in many houses. We cannot afford to let this country lapse into a wilderness."

In the face of this condition Mr. Donnelly thought the fines, penalties and interest should be remitted and the settlers given additional time to pay their taxes where they had been actually unable to do so. And the candidate of the Republican party for governor voted no; he wanted the tax sharps to get their "shent per shent." He had no bowels of compassion for the very class of men who had just elected him to the state senate. The United States by act of Congress of Feb. 10, 1875, ordered the officers of the army to distribute free supplies of food among the starving, but Knute Nelson wanted the taxes paid up at once, fines, penalties and 36 per cent interest.

And yet, the day before, Jan. 28, 1876, (p. 77 of Journal), Mr. Knute Nelson had voted for S. F. No. 71, introduced by the President of the Sioux City Railroad Company "to extend the time for the payment of taxes due the state on gross earning of railroad companies!" And, the next day after he had voted against giving the settlers any time on their taxes, he (p. 92), voted against calling back S. F. No. 71, (which extended the railroads time to pay taxes) from the house so that it could be defeated. The vote stood to bring back the bill 19 against 23; and the Republican candidate for governor was one of those who voted against calling it back!

Within the space of 24 hours the issue was squarely drawn by these different votes; and Mr. Nelson opposed giving the people the same relief he was ready to give the railroad corporations!

There was a great uproar over this unjust and cruel favoritism, and the senate was compelled by the force of public opinion to pass a bill giving partial relief, as to the taxes due for one year, and one year alone. It was passed 12 days afterward by nearly a unanimous vote, Mr. Nelson voting for it.

Mr. Donnelly's zeal in behalf of the farmers who had suffered by the grasshoppers showed itself in many ways.

Very True.

From the Representative.

The Pioneer Press says that if the People's party prevails in this state it will change "the existing order of things." Yes, that charge is true.

There will be a stop put to the stealings of the pine land rings.

There will be a bank examiner appointed who will examine.

There will be judges elected who will not be controlled by corporations and plutocrats.

There will be a stop put to the promotion of trusts and combines.

The water will be squeezed out of railway stocks.

Corporations will be taught that they are the creatures of the law—not its makers.

Bank wreckers will be brought to justice.

Taxes will be assessed upon the people who have the property.

The government will be made a government by the people for the people.

Yes, a People's party will change "the existing order of things" in many respects.

An Owen Meeting.

From the Representative.

It would have done our friends in the country good had they been able to have witnessed the meeting held in Minneapolis on Thursday night. Turner hall, one of the largest in the city, was packed to the doors with an interested and enthusiastic audience. Mr. Owen made the closing speech, of an hour and a half's duration. It was a masterly presentation of the issues of the campaign and made many votes for the entire ticket.

Minneapolis and Hennepin county will do their full duty by the People's party ticket on election day. If the country does as well we will win a great and glorious victory.

False.

From the Representative.

The Pioneer Press is running in black type the following as the tenth plank of the People's Party platform:

"We demand the nationalization of the liquor traffic and its management by the State with profit."

Here is the portion of the platform to which the Pioneer Press refers. Notice the difference:

Tenth—We demand the nationalization of the liquor traffic and its management by the state without profit.

OBSERVE THE TRICK.

Those Reduced Grain Rates.

From the Representative.

The farmers will remember that when General Becker and his associates reduced the freight rates on the Great Northern Railway 15 per cent, we pronounced it a sham and a trick. We said (1) that it never would go into effect. And it has not. We said (2) that the Railroad Company would appeal. It has appealed. And we said (3) that the Railroad Commissioner, Becker and the other two, had purposely made their decision so that it would not stand the test of litigation, by reducing rates to and from points that were not named in the complaint. And now the Railroad Company in their appeal make that the principal ground of their opposition to the order. They say:

Second—That the commission had no jurisdiction to make an order concerning rates from any stations other than Fisher, East Grand Forks and Crookston, the stations named in the complaint.

You see the trap and the stick holding it up, and a long string reaching into the railroad company's office, and you know that when the string is pulled down comes the trap. Is it not a pretty game?

Tax the Farmers.

From the Representative.

The Preston National Republican says "the way Gov. Nelson helps the farmers is very well illustrated by his state board of equalization. It reduced the assessment made on property owned by Minneapolis bankers, millers, real estate brokers and other wealthy men of that city, in the sum of $3,000,000 and added the burden to taxpayers in the country districts." This is an actual fact, and it is the first reference to to the outrage that has appeared in the country press. It is true Gov. Nelson did not personally reduce the city assessments named, but he appointed a class of men on the board of equalization whose sympathies and disposition he must have known would lead them to do it. And yet there are men so bound to party that they will vote to continue in power a state administration that is guilty of such things, and who apparently would prefer to exempt the wealth of the cities from taxation altogether, and thus impose all the burdens of taxes on the country, rather than to have their party or Knute Nelson defeated.—Albert Lea Standard.

County division, county division only one week more and we are glad of it. Of all the senseless schemes that were ever concocted by brain of man, the dividing of Polk county into four is about the worst. Men of all sizes' nations, creeds and political beliefs are trotting all over this county telling the cussedest lies ever invented in the interest of county division. Men who never paid over a dollar of taxes in all their lives are screeching about the heavy tax burden of Polk county. Little they care how much it will be increased, it will make more offices, and they are looking for a job. Taxpayers if you vote for the best interests of your property you will vote NO.

A vote for General Becker is equivalent to half a vote for Nelson. Don't adopt half way measures. Any democrat who endorses the trade made by J. J. Hill and Knute Nelson and wants to see the latter elected should vote directly for him, This would be more effective and less cowardly than going half way and voting for Becker There are two candidates and a hired man in the field. Vote for either of the candidates but shun the toolpigeon—Crookston Times.

There seems to be a wide-spread opinion in all of the political parties throughout the state that the outlook for the re-election of Governor Nelson is a gloomy one. The democrats insist that the republicans are deserting him and will vote for Becker and the republican papers are equally positive that the democrats are deserting Becker and will vote for Owen. The fact is that the independent ones in both of the old parties who are opposed to the political job put up by Nelson and Hill will vote for the populist candidate as a protest against that kind of dirty work.—Crookston Times.

One of the arguments used by Gov. Nelson to prove that the farmers are easily fooled was that they buy costly stallions. While such animals are desirable in many respects we wish to call attention to the fact that the stallion fiends were most successful in this county while the populists had not yet cast their blighting influence on our affairs, The peoples party was never stronger among us than today but no stallion peddler need apply now, One of the last men to get fooled on a deal of that kind lives at Perley and he is a gilt edged republican.—Norman County Herald.

We clip the following from the leading democratic daily in the state—the St. Paul Globe. It clearly indicates that in the opinion of both the democrats and republicans, Owen is sure of being elected our next governor:

"When the republican committeemen talk for publication they are confident that Nelson will have 15,000 to 20,000 plurality. But on the dead quiet you know, and not to be lisped, because we don't want to cause a panic you know, and set capital to fidgiting, your man, my dear democrat, isn't in it; he's third in the race; and our man is second. The pop is way ahead. Fact; our poll shows it, Do? Well that's for you business democrats to say for yourselves; but, confidentially, don't you think the word had better be passed around, quietly you know, among your people that the only way to beat Owen is to vote for Nelson?

And there appears actually to be a lot of democratic gudgeons snapping at this thin bait Dreadful sorry you know, to have to scratch Becker; he's a grand old man, and we'd awfully like to see him governor, but b-u-s-i-n-e-s-s i-n-t-e-r-e-s-t-s, you know, and c-a-p-i-t-a-l; 'twould never do to have a pop goverdoncher know and we have it on the square—from the inside—that—why, here I have the figures; one of their central committee gave them to me in confidence. Look there: Owen, 102,000. Nelson, 92,000; Becker, 48,000. Awful ain't it? Poor Becker; never felt so sorry in my life, but s-o-c-i-e-t-y is in danger, b-u-s-i-n-e-s-s is threatened and c-a-p-i-t-a-l will desert us and—well we've got to vote for Nelson this time and' there,s no use in talking.

And as we see these democrats so cleverly hooked by the anglers of the other party we can understand Barnum's reliance on the fondness of our people for being humbugged and the aptness of Puck, motto; What fools these mortals be.

THE BUNKO BANKERS

THEIR NEW SCHEME FOR USING THE GOVERNMENT AS A CATSPAW.

Forced to an Admission That the Nation's Credit Is All the Backing Our Currency Needs—The "Baltimore Plan" Would Be Ridiculous if It Wasn't Dangerous.

The national bankers have spoken once more, and surely the patriot is under great obligations to them, for in their excitement they have blurted out some important truths. The twentieth annual convention of the American Bankers' association, held recently at Baltimore, deserves this praise above all the preceding 19—there was no disguise, and no soft phrases were used. The people were told in so many words that they were unfit for self government in all that concerns money, and laboring men especially were notified that they should stop talking about the matter, as it "must be kept out of politics." And having thus declared the convention immediately proceeded to take measures for getting it into politics by drafting a law for congress to pass.

Along with a vast mass of nonsense, however, the bankers did admit and emphasize one important truth—that the money must rest on the credit of the government. Of course they insisted that the banker's credit must be added to that of the government, as if one should add zero to infinity to make it a little more infinite, but their candid admission that without the government backing their money would be worthless is a great gain. Their scheme in brief is this: There is to be no more deposit of government bonds. Each bank is to issue notes to the amount of one-half its capital at all times and three-fourths in emergencies, and government is to guarantee the money thus created. As thus stated the proposition seems too preposterous for belief, so let us follow the proceedings in some detail and note how arrogant these men have grown by 30 years' pampering.

The session opened, says the press report, with 1,200 bankers assembled, men who are jointly worth $150,000,000 and represent a banking capital of $700,000,000. There was a prayer that the convention might "act in unselfishness," the usual welcoming speech, and then United States Comptroller Eckels told what a good system we have and why it ought not to be and must not be brought into politics. The much advertised "Baltimore plan," to be detailed presently, was then introduced for debate. Much stress was laid upon the fact that what we need is "elasticity." The bankers had evidently forgotten their old time jokes about the "elastic yardstick" and "india rubber money," with which they used to gibe the Greenbackers. President A. B. Hepburn of the Third National bank of New York then showed how the panic of 1893 was aggravated by "want of elasticity." He deplored the selfishness of silver mine owners, who want to furnish the money instead of allowing the bankers to do it. He thought the "Baltimore plan" would take the wind out of their sails.

The gem of the collection was presented on the second day. Banker White of New York said: "The masses do not understand the financial system and are no more capable of taking charge of the fiscal arrangements of the country than a landlubber is of directing the management of an ocean greyhound in a storm at sea. It is a well known fact that the charters of some of the old New York state banks were obtained by bribing the legislature." He did not draw the logical conclusion that these bribe givers can more safely be trusted to manage the finances than the "masses" before mentioned. Successive speakers indorsed his statement that the bankers only could be trusted, and one worked himself into a really tearful state over the obstinacy and selfishness of the silver men—men who want to furnish a dollar "with only 50 cents intrinsic value," while the bankers stand ready to furnish millions with no intrinsic value at all.

Pause at this point and consider the insulting arrogance of these fellows. They coolly assume that the nature of money is known only to those who furnish it and handle it only for usury; that all who handle it in productive business are necessarily ignorant. They never weary in denouncing the selfishness of the silver mine owner, and their logic on that point reduces to this: The silver dollar is worth but 50 cents and is therefore dangerous. Our dollar is worth nothing, but with government backing it is perfectly safe. Government can make a paper nothing worth a dollar, but it cannot do that with a silver something. A dollar with only government credit behind it is safe, but a dollar with government credit and 50 cents' worth of silver is not. Government credit equals 100 cents. Government credit plus 50 cents equals nothing. Therefore, algebraically figured out, plus 50 cents equals minus 100. Adding to a plus quantity reduces it to zero, and things which are equal to the same thing are not equal to each other.

And what is this "Baltimore plan" which the convention so warmly indorsed? The Clearing House association of that city has been kind enough to write it out in the form of a bill all ready to be passed by congress, and Mr. Charles C. Homer, in presenting it on their behalf, said in a sublime burst of confidence that it might not be perfect in all its details. Stripped of legislative verbiage the provisions of the bill are these:

Section 1. No more bonds to be deposited as security. They cost too much.

Sec. 2. Each bank can issue notes to the amount of 50 per cent of its paid up capital and in emergencies 25 per cent more.

Sec. 3. A tax of one-half of 1 per cent on the circulation to pay the cost of printing notes and national supervision.

Sec. 4. Each bank to deposit with the United States treasurer a sum equal to 5 per cent of its circulation as a guarantee fund.

Sec. 5. Notes of all banks to be redeemed by the government as now.

Other clauses provide for an extra tax on the emergency circulation sufficient to cause it to be retired when the emergency has passed—that is, when the rate of interest falls so low that the circulation becomes unprofitable. This "emergency" business has a curious resemblance to the "interconvertible bond" of which so much was heard 20 years ago.

Now, isn't that a beautiful scheme for looting the public credit? Here is a plain proposition that on a deposit of $5 the government shall guarantee a circulation of $100, the dishonest bankers in each case of insolvency to have the first innings on the rest. And would it be "elastic?" Verily it would. In an emergency like that of 1893, when interest rates stood for some time at 20 per cent, the bankers would have a harvest indeed. When a bank got caught, like those Indiana concerns, for instance, and the guilty bankers had made their escape, the note holders could only lose 95 per cent by the shrinkage of the money in their hands, and wouldn't that be "elastic?" Of course the bankers would see to it that "emergencies" came with tolerable regularity.

Absurd and impudent as the "plan" is, many of the speeches made in support of it were laughable in their candid simplicity, in the faith they showed that the people can be humbugged ad infinitum. One man grew quite pathetic over the "doubtful constitutionality of the greenback" and the great harm it had done and a little later let out the fact that the evil feature of it was that the bankers could not control the volume. They make no per cent on it. One principle must be borne in mind—when government takes from one to give to another, a thief always comes between. To rob Peter to pay Paul would be bad enough if Paul got all that Peter lost, but he never does. The banker takes his percentage of the money in transit.

It was assumed by all the speakers as a self evident truth that if the silver men had their way they would arrange the finances to profit themselves as much as possible. And with equal truth it might have been assumed that if the landowners were given the power to issue currency they would base it on land values. Similarly a body of manufacturers would no doubt base it on values in their line, and the transportation lords would of course base it on railroad bonds. All this would be selfish, very selfish indeed. Yet these bankers were weighed down with sorrow because the wretched Populists suspect them of "a selfish desire to profit at the expense of their fellow citizens." Near the close one gentleman capped the climax by demonstrating that government ought to guarantee the bankers' money and then digressing into a savage onslaught on socialism.

Through all the fustian and nonsense, however, two great truths were acknowledged and emphasized—one that government credit alone can make any currency good; the other, that we have now had in this country over 200 years of experiments with paper money, colonial, continental, confederation, United States bank, state bank, greenback and national bank, and that in all that time only such paper as was based upon the credit of a solvent government has proved safe and reliable. Yet the Populist doctrine to that effect was denounced as theory. "Two beans and two beans make four beans," says the Populist. "Yes, in theory," says the national banker, "but let us put the beans into a little machine of our contrivance and rattle them around awhile, and you will get five beans and perhaps two or three peas." The chief merit of the little machine is that the banker gets a percentage for its use.

There are in this country perhaps $300,000,000 in greenbacks and in the treasury at this writing $60,000,000 in gold to redeem them. They are good, says the banker, because each dollar is supported by 20 cents in gold. Each national bank dollar is supported by 20 cents of "reserve" in greenbacks—that is, 20 per cent of 20 per cent, or 4 cents in metal. They are all good, says the banker, because of the 4 cents' worth of metal, but the silver dollar is bad because there is but 50 cents' worth of metal. What nonsense! How long will the people be deceived by it? The silver man retorts, If your 4 cents will float a dollar, why not our 50 cents? The Populist has his answer ready for both—government credit, and government credit alone, makes either of your dollars good, so let us dispense with middlemen, save the percentage and go to the fountain head direct.

JOS. R. BUCHANAN.

POPULISTIC PICKINGS

In a nutshell, the political situation from a Populist standpoint in Minnesota is about this: The party expects to elect the governor, one congressman and possibly two, secure control of the legislature and defeat Washburn and make a big showing on county and city officers. The chances appear good for the realization of their hopes—at least to a considerable extent.

It is largely a question of the rights of money as against the rights of men, and the cheers at the Central Music hall meeting showed well enough that many people agree with Judge Trumbull in thinking that under our present legislation the former is considered too much and the latter too little.—Chicago Record.

The Republicans assured the farmers that the McKinley law would increase the price of wheat, but it failed to do so. Instead of rising, wheat fell in price. Grandma Democracy told the farmer that Democratic victory, followed by Democratic laws, would send wheat up a-flying. The farmer voted for Grover, and he and his party ascended into power and passed some laws, and now the price of wheat is the lowest in the history of the known world!—Nonconformist.

Incongruous.

A clerical correspondent of one of the church papers relates that a certain prelate had great difficulty in suppressing his laughter at the consecration of a church the other day owing to the device on one of the school banners which was carried in the procession before the service. This banner was adorned with a very fierce looking lion, with terrible claws and teeth, while underneath him was the legend, "Suffer little children to come unto me."—London Truth.

Richard Cole, the eight-year-old son of Albert Cole, 1523 Walnut street, did not go to Sunday school yesterday afternoon. It was not his fault, for, with the assistance of his mother, he was getting ready to go as fast as he could when Providence, or somebody, or something else, interfered and all at once stopped Richard and plans. The lad was bending over a trunk, getting out a pair of shoes, when a bolt of lightning struck the house, entered the room, and struck him in the small of the back and ran downward. Richard set up a yell and his very much frightened mother rushed in and picked him up. The first thing the lad did was to ask who it was "that shot him." The lad's trousers were a complete wreck, having been torn to pieces at the place which was to have occupied the bench at Sunday school, but, strange to say, he himself was not very much hurt.—Helena Independent.

Where Washington Took the Oath.

At the foot of Ward's heroic statue of Washington, on the high steps of the the subtreasury building is a broad piece of stone carefully covered with a wire grating. It is so placed that should the image of the immortal father of his country come to life and step down from his lofty pedestal he would stand on the same spot where occurred the crowning triumph of his career. Through the protecting grating can be read the following dim inscription: "Standing on this stone in the balcony of Federal Hall, April 30, 1789, George Washington took the oath as first president of the United States of America." When old Federal Hall was demolished the sacred stone was carefully preserved and it now occupies as nearly as possible the same position as before. Very few people have ever noticed it on the high base of the statue, where it is fittingly placed as one of the relics of the nation's birth.—New York World.

One careful mother teaches her children never to fold their arms across their chests. She says it must of necessity tend to contract what should on the contrary, have everything done to broaden it. Instead of the common practice, she insists that the growing children shall, in standing, contract the habit of crossing the arms, behind the back, alleging that as much good will come from this habit as harm from the other.

LIGHTNING SAVED THE TRAIN.

Engineer Edward Schaffer, on train No. 9, running between Buffalo and Rochester, on the Falls road, says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, had an experience last summer that made his hair stand on end.

The train left Buffalo about 7 o'clock, in charge of Conductor Knickerbocker, with Engineer Schaffer at the throttle. The train had a clear track, as was supposed, between Buffalo and Rockport, and was running at a high rate of speed. Black Rock was reached without any mishap. After leaving that station behind the engineer sent the train ahead at the rate of over thirty miles an hour. The night was dark as pitch, and the rain beat against the cab windows unceasingly. Engineer Schaffer sat in his seat by the cab window. The headlight was of little use in the blinding rain, and the engineer could see only a few yards in advance of the engine. The train sped on through the darkness, and soon the up grade, about five miles south of the Tonawanda, was reached. The engineer opened the throttle wider, the fireman shoveled coal faster. The hill was passed and the train rumbled on through the storm.

Suddenly a flash of lightning, followed by a terrific peal of thunder, lit up the track a half a mile ahead. Schaffer was looking ahead just at that moment, and a sight met his gaze that sent the blood to his cheeks. Twenty yards ahead four freight cars were standing on the track. Grasping the reverse lever he pulled it back to the last notch and shouted to the fireman to put on the airbrakes. The fireman's blood seemed to freeze in his veins, and, seizing the brake lever, he sent the air through the pipes full force. At the same moment Schaffer set the emergency brakes. The strong locomotive creaked and groaned. The engineer and fireman, with blanched cheeks, stood looking into each other's faces, while the perspiration trickled from their foreheads in large drops. But only for a moment, for the engine tottered and both of them were thrown to the floor of the cab.

The shock was so sudden that the passengers in the coaches were thrown from their seats, the chandeliers swung from the ceiling and two of them fell to the floor. One man was thrown completely over the seat in front of him, landing with his head shoved under the second seat in front and his feet propped up against the breast of an elderly gentleman behind in such a manner as to hold him firmly in his seat. One young lady was, by the force of the shock, lifted from her seat, carried into the aisle and deposited in the lap of a man who was lying on his back in the aisle.

The baggageman was at the time engaged in checking a trunk. He did not check it just then, however, for when the shock came the trunk eluded his grasp and started with the other baggage for the other end of the car. The baggageman was found a few minutes later covered up with sachels in one corner of the car. After the excitement had subsided the conductor and engineer got off the train to investigate the situation. They found the pilot of the engine shoved a foot beneath the caboose of the freight train ahead. As they were but a few miles from Lockport, the freight was pushed into the yard limits and sidetracked, the train proceeding on its way to Lockport.

Old engineers on the Central Hudson pronounce it the most wonderful stop they had ever heard of. The flash of lightning was all that saved the lives of over 200 passengers on board the train.

Just a Trifle Mixed.

In a little New England village, not very many miles from Boston, either, there is a circulating library which generously and hospitably offers its privileges to the stranger within its gates. One such strolled into the room lately, on its only open day of the week, commenting upon the privileges of the towns-people, and admiring the reading instinct which made the library possible in a place so small. A dignified looking woman, a "leader" in village society, was looking over the catalogue, helping a friend to select a book.

"Here is 'The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table,' by Holmes," she said, holding up the book. "I've never read this one, but everything that Mary J. Holmes writes is sure to be good."

Making Voices.

A French savant, one Dr. Sandras, will go down to posterity as a discoverer of a method of modifying and improving the quality of the human voice. He has made a number of experiments, and finds that the voice may be changed by the inhalation of various substances. Some of these, such as benzine, caffeine, cloroform and curacoa, augment the sonority of the high notes and make the voice higher in range, while others, such as Norwegian tar, make the base notes more powerful. Thus, as one of the French papers remarks, we have a simple and effective method for converting a mediocre baritone into that rare bird, a high tenor. All he has to do is to inhale curacoa.

Only a Deadhead.

Box Office Clerk—That sugary notice by Mr. Blank, the critic of the Daily Civilizer, has brought us in a big crowd to night.

Theatrical Manager—Yes, there's $900 in the house if there is a cent.

Later—Rich Patron, pointing to Blank—Who is that intelligent-looking gentleman? Do you know him?

The Family Disgraced.

"Fwat," asked Mr. Hooghlighan, "is the matty wid your head?"

"Mickey Dolan knocked me down wif a half brick," responded his son.

"Yez hov disgraced th' family. It is the foorst toime thot a Hooghlighan was iver knocked down wid less than a whole wan."

Singular.

Mr. Toots—What do you mean?

Paul—I heard sister tell you last night that it tickled her half to death.

OUR WILDEST INDIANS.

The Papagoes of Arizona Who Are Not Bloodthirsty, but Are Great Wanderers.

The chief of the bureau of ethnology in Washington has sent two scouts into Arizona to look over the homes of the Papago Indians and to investigate their race characteristics. They are the most vagrant of American Indians. They live in Southern Arizona. Often they make foraging expeditions into Mexico, and in the sense of settled habitation they cannot be said to live anywhere.

They are the most nomadic of all the Indian tribes at present. The Papagoes were once a tribe of from 4,000 to 7,000. The exact number is not known. They are scattered over so wide a range of territory that it is doubtful if even one of their own number could form a clear idea of how many there now are in the tribe.

The Papagoes are wild in the sense that they are uncivilized, but not in the sense that they are bloodthirsty. They are a very peaceful people and many of them assist their Indian neighbors in harvesting their grain. They take their pay in supplies, which they lay up for the winter season. But in the summer they live chiefly on the fruit of the cactus plant and wild berries. It is a wonder how they live at all. Some of those who lead a roving life own a few horses and cattle. But the entire number of cattle owned by those who are not on reservations is only 2,000 and the number of domestic fowls is 1,150.

The Papago Indians receive no rations from the government. They are actually self-supporting, asking nothing of the government and receiving very little. There are from 300 to 500 Indians gathered on two reservations, one near Tucson and one near Gila Bend on the Southern Pacific railroad. These communities are not models of their kind. In fact they are described as having each about thirty miserable squalid adobe houses, with not a drop of water within many miles, except what is caught in pools during the uncertain Arizona rainy season, and in a short time this water becomes thick and vile, because the pools are the common resort of the Indians, the cattle and the swine. What the Papagoes need most is irrigation to make their barren land fertile, for that land now will not furnish subsistance for a coyote or a gopher.

The Woman of It.

He glared at his wife with hatred and aversion in his eyes.

"Our marriage," he bitterly exclaimed, "was a bargain."

The coldness in her face seemed to soften as she heard his words.

"What a man you are." She mused, "to look on the bright side of things."

Yes, it was a bargain, and, to her way of thinking, that was one comfort.

To Save Time.

Clerkets—Shall I send this bundle?

Mrs. Hicks—N-no, I can just as well carry it; you can send the change, though, if you will.

A man who had his attention drawn said it was not half as painful as drawing a tooth.

Held by the Enemy.

Tackle them at once with this pain soothing, nerve quieting, blood depurating specific, and you will experience speedy relief. Biliousness, malarial, dyspeptic, liver and neuralgic complaints yield to it.

A Reapportionment.

Mrs. Slimdiet—Jane, Mr. Stardoarder was expaining the new tariff to me last evening, and I find some of the changes are very important.

Cook—Are they, mum?

Mrs. Slimdiet—Vitally. Hereafter you must put less sugar in the pudding, but you can't make up for it by putting more salt in the soup. Salt is free now.—New York Weekly.

Not Very Graceful.

Little Ethel—At the circus I saw a monkey riding a dog, but he didn't sit up like a man on a horse.

Mother—How did he ride?

Little Ethel—Oh, he screwed up his legs and stooped way over so his head 'most touched the dog's ears. He looked 'most as funny as a boy on a bicycle.—Street & Smith's Good News.

HER EYES NOT GOOD.

But She Could Tell Honest People Across the Street.

One of the smartest, shrewdest business women in New York able to push her trade at a minimum of effort, is the old newspaper woman at the corner of Forty-second street and Seventh avenue, and the thriving stand is situated at the Seventh avenue corner.

It is a bleak unprotected corner, and the old woman finding it too exposed, has taken her stool under the shelter of an opposite Broadway store. This is far enough off not to know where to look for her, if needs be, and affords an apparently good opportunity for dishonest persons to cheat, yet the old woman never loses a cent. She has learned from her distant niche to size people up pretty well, and is on hand pretty promptly if she suspects unfair play.

A lady last Sunday wanted to buy a paper, and had nothing less than 25c. Looking up and down and around about, and seeing nobody in charge of the stand, she decided after some moments' waiting that she would have to let the paper go. As she turned away without it, she heard a loud call from the cubby hole niche at the opposite corner, and saw the old woman bidding her in pantomine to take the paper along. In pantomime also she replied indicating that she couldn't as she hadn't got the money. Then the old woman hobbled forward in haste and began to give the conscientious lady a good sound rating.

"Ain't you foolish," she said, "and bothersome, to bring me over here when you might have just as well take that paper along."

"But I had no change," said the lady.

"Well, what of that?" Couldn't you leave it the next time you were passing?"

"But, I'm a stranger. Why should you trust me to do any such thing?"

"That's all right. I know why. Don't you think I can tell honest folks from over there? I know the other kind, too, right quick. Next time pick up your paper and pay whenever you come past again. Don't drag me over here for nothing. It's enough, with my rheumatism, to scramble over here after the cheats."—New York Herald.

The First Marital Kiss.

If, as seems to be the case, it is to be considered the correct thing for bride and bridegroom to exchange their first marital kiss at the altar, it would be a wise thing to announce the fact through the papers beforehand, along with the number of attendants, list of presents &c. That would at least prepare the wedding friends for this very beautiful observance. A largely attended wedding last week, when the bridegroom at the conclusion of the ceremony kissed the bride, from all quarters of the crowded church came a snicker, which was the more surprising on account of the well-bred looks of the gathering. On another occasion the bride herself was taken by surprise and started back in alarm when her newly made husband wished to enter upon his lately acquired privileges on the spot.—Washington Post.

It is wrong to speak of a convicted police captain as "a good man gone wrong." He is a bad man found out.

TRIFLES THAT MAKE HISTORY

Christopher Columbus' Fate Said to Have Hung on a Game of Chess.

It is a Spanish tradition that the fate of Columbus once hung on a game of chess, says the New York Ledger. For years the schemer had haunted the Spanish court, trying to interest some one in his cause, but at last, despairing, he determined to leave and go to France. The night before his intended departure he sought an audience of the queen to communicate his intention and to take his leave. The queen asked him to wait while she made one more effort to interest the king, and left the room for that purpose. She found Ferdinand engaged in a game of chess, and; disturbing him by her entrance, and thus causing him to lose a piece, he let fly a volley of oaths at seamen generally and at Columbus in particular and then informed Isabella that the result of her petition would depend on the result of the game. It grew worse, and things looked blue for the discoverer of America, but Isabella, overlooking the board, whispered to his majesty a suggestion as to a move that could be made; the king adopted the suggestion, and America was saved.

It is a queer story, but no stranger than the one told in Rome at the time the divorce of Henry VIII. was under discussion that the negotiations were broken off by the earl of Wiltshire's dog. This unmannerly cur had followed his master into the court, and when the pontiff, at the close of the audience, put out his foot to be kissed by the earl, the dog bit it and so angered the pope and horrified the court that the negotiations were suspended.

The story may be true or false, but in either case is an excellent demonstration of the value of the trifle, when the trifle occurs in the life of an exalted personage, and gives point to the remark made by Paschal along the same line, that if the nose of Cleopatra had been an inch longer or shorter the course of the world's history might have been materially changed.

Women Guides in London.

In London they say that the lady guide has come to stay. She supplies a want—not only one, but several. People find her useful. They ask her to meet their children at stations, escort them to dentists and support them when there. They beg her to recommend them to dressmakers, as well as to take their country cousins for an instructive tour of the sights. The lady guide is the woman to take the domestic help at a crisis, and as in the turmoil of London life there are many crises, there are now, it is delightful to learn, many guides. There are so many guides, indeed, and so many persons asking for them, that a West end branch of the office has been opened at 105 Regent street. The opening was attended by a little ceremony. Countess Grossvenor gracefully played the part of leading lady on the occasion, declaring the premises open, and wishing all success to the venture. Thereafter came an address from the energetic proprietor, Miss Edith A. Davis, who traced the history of the movement from the humble opening of the office to its removal to the existing central premises at 352 Strand, and now this added branch.

Unsound Teeth Among Americans.

The French nation has recently been put in possession of some remarkable information in regard to American "teeth factories." United States Commercial Agent Murphy, at Luxembourg, has sent to the department of state the following translation of a report on artificial teeth: "It is in America that the worst teeth are found, which accounts for the multitude of dentists, more or less American, scattered over the globe, and especially for the importance of American fabrication of everything appertaining to the art of the dentist. If it is possible to believe authentic documents the cost of an artificial tooth at the factory in the United States should not exceed 20 or 25 cents. One of these factories in New York sells not less than 3,000,000 of these teeth per annum. The teeth are porcelain, covered with a special enamel, the application of which is so delicate that there are not two teeth which are tinted exactly alike. Moreover, there are about fifty different tints which are artificially obtained, corresponding to the color variations of natural teeth. The imitation is carried so far as to simulate defects, which render the illusion more complete. If these dispatches are credible the factory stocks ought to be quickly exhausted."—Washington Post.

Parental Solicitude.

Daughter—But, ma, I don't like him.

Mother—He is an only son, and his father is very rich.

"Well, as to that, his father is a widower, and may marry again."

"True. I did not think of that. Perhaps you'd better marry the father."—New York Weekly.

The Way He Put It.

Van Pelt—Waiter, take away those oysters.

Waiter—Aren't they jes' right, sah?

Van Pelt—No; I struck one without the "R" in it.

JAPS ARE NO JAYS.

THEY HAVE LOTS OF FUN WITH THE PIGTAILS.

The Victorious March of the Japanese Soldiers on Chinese Soil Continues and Several Important Cities Have Been Captured.

Yokohama, Nov. 6.—Advices received here from the front show that there has been heavy fighting in the country just north of Port Arthur.

The dispatches received are brief and are silent on some important points. It appears that Field Marshal Oyama divided his forces. While one division landed on the east coast of the peninsula north of Talienwan, another division was detached with orders to effect a landing near Kin Chow, and to proceed thence and join the main body of the army. This operation was a complete success. The Japanese encountered no Chinese warships, and the transports reached Kayenko and disembarked troops, guns, horses and munitions in safety. Kin Chow, which is a walled town, and which was believed to be held by a large garrison, was immediately attacked. The outer defenses were carried by the Japanese after a few hours fighting. The Chinese made little further resistance and the Japanese were soon masters of the place. In the meantime the Japanese fleet which had convoyed the transports, opened a heavy fire on Talienwan and Kayenko. The firing scarcely ceased for many hours. Covered by the fire from the ships the land force attacked and captured Talienwan in a brilliant fashion. The dispatch states that the losses were heavy. They also mention that an important naval engagement occurred Saturday, but give no details. Yesterday was the forty-second anniversary of the birth of the mikado. There will be great public rejoicing to-morrow over the victories thus far won by the Japanese armies. Up to the time of sending this dispatch there has been no confirmation of the report of the capture of Port Arthur.

Field Marshal Yamagata's army continues its victorious march. The division under Gen. Tatsumi pushed forward and captured Fung Wang Ching as already cabled to the Associated Press. The enemy was scattered and fled in the direction of Takusan, Kaljoa and Ho-Tenfu. No fighting is mentioned as having occurred at Fung Wang Ching, but it is alleged that 300 Chinese were killed at Taikai. Field Marshal Yamagata's official dispatch says that the detachment under Gen. Tatsumi has occupied Fung Wang Ching, a fort which ranks in importance next to Moukden. The principal portion of the Chinese army fled toward Moukden and the remainder in the direction of Haichen and Takusan.

The Chinese inhabitants who have been plundered by the Chinese soldiers welcomed the Japanese army. The Japanese captures to the present are 55 cannon, 1,500 small arms, 20,000 rounds of artillery ammunition, 2,500 000 rounds for small arms and a quantity of other material.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6. — The Press says: In April last M. M. Browning and a young man whose name is not known, opened a store for the sale of butter at 137 Margaretta street, in this city. Browning watched the business here and sent the young man to the West to negotiate with farmers for the sale of the product. He returned to this city with a number of names on his list, and consignments of butter thereafter arrived from the West to be paid for upon delivery. Three weeks ago Browning suddenly left town and last Tuesday the young man followed, after closing the shop. Since their disappearance information has been received from farmers in Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, particularly Jefferson county, to the effect that Browning had failed to pay for consignments aggregating over $25,000 in value. Steps have been taken to capture the fugitives.

Just as the firemen had the fire under control the rear wall of the Singer building fell and five firemen were caught under it and badly hurt. Two of them, Valentine Riehl and James Mannix, may die.

MAY HAVE PERISHED.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 6.—The Neal, Goff & Inglis building, 428 to 432 main street, was burned, with a total loss of about $150,000; partially covered by insurance. At 7:30 the flames were seen bursting through the first floor at the front of the store, and soon the entire front of the large five-story brick building was enveloped in flames. A general alarm brought all the apparatus and the flames were soon beaten back into the interior. Many of the guests of O. H. Miner's boarding house, 432 Main street, had narrow escapes. Several of the twenty-five boarders were aged persons, and it is feared some of them did not escape. An aged couple, were seen calling for help at a window, but soon disappeared. One of the old men fell on the way down stairs on the third floor, and was not seen to rise. F. A. Crum seized his sleeping child and rushed down stairs barely in time, followed by his wife. The cause of the fire is unknown. At 7:30 Fred Grosbeck, a clerk in the furnishing store, entered the building and lighted the gas. Neither he nor the policeman who had just made his rounds, found any signs of a fire, but it is thought by some that he dropped a burning match. The bursting out of the heavy glass windows of the store gave rise to a theory of explosion of gas meter or oil barrels.

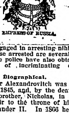
THE CZAR IS NO MORE

RUSSIA'S RULER DIES IN HIS CASTLE AT LIVADIA.

The Czarevitch Will Issue a Proclamation Declaring Himself Czar—Reports of a Plot Against the Life of the New Czar.

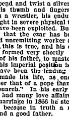
Livadia, Nov. 3.—The czar died at 3 p. m. The body was laid upon an inclined table preliminary to being placed in a temporary coffin. The priests then entered the bed room and chanted a requiem. This will be repeated three times daily until the burial takes place. All the members of the imperial family will be present at these ceremonies. It is expected that the body of the czar will be removed to-morrow to the private chapel, where special prayers for the repose of the emperor's soul will be offered, and where, once a day, the litany will be sung in addition to chanting a requiem, as previously stated. When the priests enter the death room they first cense the body and then commence the service.



CZAR OF RUSSIA.

It is understood that the czarewitch will immediately issue a proclamation declaring himself czar, and the Russian officials throughout the world will take the oath of allegiance as soon as possible.

According to a special dispatch from St. Petersburg a conspiracy against the life of the czarewitch has been discovered there. It is added that for several days past the police have been actively engaged in arresting nihilists. Among those arrested are several students. The police have also obtained possession of incriminating documents.



EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.

Biographical.

Alexander Alexandrovitch was born March 10, 1845, and, by the death of his elder brother, Nicholas, in 1865, became heir to the throne of his father, Alexander II. In 1866 he was married to Maria Sophia Frederika Dagmar, daughter of Christian IX. of Denmark. Alexander participated in the Turkish war of 1877-78, and ascended the throne March 13, 1881, on the assassination of his father. He was not crowned until May, 1883, in consequence of the threats of the nihilistic conspirators, and he has more than once come very near meeting his doom since then. Personally his majesty was unaffected by fear, so that the terrorists have never attained their object—that of frightening him into accession to their demands. There has not been a day, probably, since his accession that plans were not in progress for his taking off. There certainly has been no day, since that on which the father was killed, when the world at large would have been surprised by the news that a like gory fate had befallen the son. Of Alexander's surpassing physical strength the world has often been told. His ability to bend and twist a silver coin between his thumb and fingers, his prowess as a wrestler, his endurance at and delight in severe physical tasks, all these have been exploited. But few are aware that the czar has been a tireless and unremitting worker at his desk. Yet, this is true, and his determination, formed very shortly after the death of his father, to master the details of his imperial position is supposed to have been the leading cause that has made his life, as one has said, "rather that of a pope than of a secular monarch." In his early days Alexander had many love affairs, but after his marriage in 1866 he steadied down and became in truth a model husband and a good father.

Nicholas Alexandrovitch, who ascends the imperial throne of Russia as successor to the dead Alexander, is a young man of whom but little is known. He was born in 1868, is short in stature, insignificant in appearance, and has generally been considered as little short of an idiot. But this is a mistake, as he has many amiable and gentle qualities, as well as a strong will of his own. He is not entirely unprepared for the responsibilities of his new position, having, for the past two years, presided over the council of state, at whose meetings the young man discharged his duties with surprising ability and tact, much more tact, in fact, than his father ever exhibited. His engagement to the Princess Alix of Hesse has been the talk of the world for some time past.

The New Czar.

Livadia, Nov. 3.—When all was over the czarewitch, Grand Duchess Xenia and the other imperial relatives approached the bedside in turn to take a last farewell. The court officials and members of his majesty's suite were afterward admitted. The flag over the palace was placed at half-mast and a salute was fired by the vessels in the port. Shortly after 4 o'clock the members of the palace guard were marshaled in the square in front of the palace chapel for the ceremony of swearing allegiance to the new czar. They were the first to take the oath. The grand dukes were the next to swear allegiance, and they were followed in the order of precedence by the high court functionaries, court officials, military officers and civil officials.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

A Nebraska Politician Is Killed While Visiting in Iowa.

Atlantic, Iowa, Nov. 4.—Benjamin Merritt of Sawyer, Neb., Democratic candidate for representative of Fillmore county, Neb., was killed at or near Atlantic last night. The general impression is that he was murdered. Merritt came from Nebraska on the 7 o'clock train last night and, after talking to the proprietor of one of the hotels here, with whom he was well acquainted, started for Eller's livery stable and got a team to drive to his sister-in-laws place, some fifteen miles south of here. Merritt never reached his sister-in-laws place, and there is little doubt that he was murdered, though what the object of the murderer if not robbery cannot be conjectured. Soon after leaving the hotel a stranger came and inquired for Merritt, and several persons have said that Merritt was accompanied by a stranger when he drove out of town. This morning at 5 o'clock the hostler of the livery stable found the team standing on the opposite side of the street from the livery barn. Crushed down in the buggy was the body of Merritt, cold and stiff in death. He had been killed by a bullet wound near the temple, his hair and skin being powered marked and the bullet being embedded in the buggy. His right hand was gloveless and a revolver with three cartridges exploded was found in the buggy. An examination of the head man's clothes showed them to contain a gold watch some valueless paers and $7 in loose silver. He wes reputed to be wealthy and leaves a wife and three children in good circumstances.

KICK ON THE CHARGES.

Cattle Shippers Object to Paying $2 for Switching.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—A petition of great interest to large shippers of live stock in the West was filed to-day in the United States court against the receivers of the Atchison road. For some months the large shippers who sent stock to the union stock yards in Chicago, have been compelled to pay, in regular to the regular freight charges a charge of $2 for each loaded car taken into the stock yards. Some shippers have at times made strong protests against paying this additional charge and to-day W. T. Keenan, one of the largest cattle dealers at the yards, told the court that the Atchison road had brought for him to Chicago a car of cattle which it was withholding until he paid the charge of $2, which he asserts it has no right to make, as it is not a part of the regular freight rates of the road. He asks that the road be compelled to deliver to him his catte without the $2 and will follow up the case to see of the roads have the right to add the switching charge of the regular rates and they withhold cattle until it is paid.

HORRIBLE DEED.

A Buffalo Man Shoots His Father and Mother.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Without known provocation William Gipp shot his mother to death and fatally wounded his father at their home in this city.

The patricide, who was employed as a railway car inspector, the duties of which position kept him out all night, entered the house on his return from work, and without a word to show his intentions, drew a revolver, which he fired twice at his mother. One bullet struck her in the temple, while the other took effect in her body. She died almost instantly.

The shots aroused the family. The father was the first to appear, and at him the son fired twice, one bullet striking him at the corner of the right eye, near the nose, and the other taking effect in his right breast. The other sons then entered the room and grappled with William, trying to wrest the weapon from him. After a brief struggle he got away from them and ran out into the back yard and escaped. The father is at the hospital in a critical condition.

She Probably Sank on the Afternoon of Sept. 30, Carrying Down Twenty Sailors and Four Passengers, Including Editor Grant of Seattle.

Seattle, Nov. 4.—The lumber schooner Fannie Dutard, Capt Peterson, arrived at Port Blakely, reports that the missing ship Ivanhoe, with Fred. J. Grant, ex-minister to Bolivia, on board, probably sank on the afternoon of Sept 30.

"We left Port Blakely," said Capt Peterson, "on Sept. 26, bound for Santa Barbara, for lumber. We sailed out under a light wind, arriving at the cape on the 29th. We saw a tug towing out a ship that same evening and dropping her off the cape. That night a storm came up, and on the morning of the 30th moderated. The ship was in company with us, but too far away for us to make out her name or cargo. She appeared to have a terrible list to starboard. We could see that something was wrong with her for her list was in the wrong direction That night the vessel disappeared from sight."

The Ivanhoe carried a crew of twenty, who all shipped from San Francisco, and were as follows: Capt. E. D. Griffin, Mate James Toohig, Mate C. Christensen, Carpenter William Andolin, two Chinese cooks, Sailors Hans Stevenson, M. Stewart, Frank Ziereno, H. Johnson, E. Loenrot, George Ordler, Samuel Harp, J. J. O'Hammeson, M. F. Gulderson, Lennart Holm, W. Herriman, John Anderson and Martin Jacobson.

The passengers aboard the vessel were Hon. Frederick J. Grant, editor Seattle Post-Intelligencer; Allen B. Folger and two ladies, Mrs. Mattie L. Bara and her friend, Mrs. Dr. Irene Mullen and a stowaway, Edward Allardyce, who had people living in San Francisco.

ROAST BEEF.

Bad Fire in a South Omaha Packing House.

Omaha, Nov. 4.—Fire in Hammond's packing establishment at South Omaha to-day caused a loss of $300,000; fully insured. The fire started in the big beef house. Word was at once sent to Omaha and all the available aparatus was carried to the scene, for, as a high wind prevailed, the fire threatened to spread to the house of Swift & Co., and to the stock yards. All the efforts of the firemen were confined to keeping the fire from spreading, as there was no possible show of saving the big beef house. The efforts of the firemen to confine the flames to this house proved successful, but only at the cost of two lives. Soon after the department arrived one of the walls of the burning building fell, and two firemen belonging to the private department of the packing company were buried under tons of burning timber and red hot brick. The killed were John Steele and Henry Peters. Immediately after the wall fell efforts at recovering the bodies of the two men were begun, but it was two hours before their bodies were found. When taken from the debris it was found that both men were still grasping the hose nozzle they were holding when their lives were crushed out. Steele was married last Wednesday.

WANT A CONSTITUTION.

Russian Nihilists Will Begin an Active Crusade.

London, Nov. 4.—A representative of the Associated Press had an interview to-day with Stepniak, the Russian nihilist. He utterly repudiated the nihilist manifesto recently published. Speaking of the present situation, he said:

"The future cannot be foretold, but I am firmly persuaded that the new czar will follow a more liberal policy than his father. Mind, I have no illusions regarding the new czar. He may not be superior to his father. In any case he cannot be worse. His father's only good point was his foreign policy, and he has done a kind thing in dying, so I won't be severe on him. His death is the opportune moment for a move in a liberal direction and for constitutional changes for which the country is quite ripe. We nihilists have decided upon an immediate fresh and widespread propaganda. It may be revolutionary, but not in the name of dynamite. The reign of bombs and dynamite is ended. Although a few fools may advocate it, all thinking and responsible nihilists repudiate it. We want a powerful but legal agitation or an open revolution, which in my opinion, would be more effective than the propaganda."

Outlaws Captured.

Guthrie, O. T., Nov. 4.—Citizens of Cushing who have been hot on the chase of the Cook outlaws, brought into Stillwater to-night and jailed Joseph Beck and Patsy R. Beck. Beck has been positively identified as one of the Red Rock train robbers and one of the gang who looted the Chandler bank in August. The captured men came into Lincoln county on a horse stealing expedition to secure fresh mounts for the gang and were recognized by two citizens of Cushing, who organized a large force of men and captured the outlaws after a running fight.

Unknown Man Killed.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 4.—As freight train No. 63 of the Louisville and Nashville was approaching Springfield, Tenn., about 11 o'clock last night it parted and two sections rushing together made a bad wreck. Several cars were demolished. The track for some distance was torn up and other serious damages sustained. An unknown man supposed to be stealing a ride, was killed.

An Easy Victim.

Boston, Nov. 4.—Meyer J. Cohen, a tailor at 78 Prince street, has reported to the police the loss of $6,500 by a clever swindle. Cohen, through a friend, made a deal with a stranger to purchase forty pounds of alleged gold dust, alleged to have been secured in the Siberian mines, where the swindler said he had served thirteen years of a life sentence before he escaped. The value of the dust was said to be $10,000, but the swindler would take $6,500 for it. Cohen took the dust but it proved worthless

Notice to Farmers.

You can exchange wheat for flour and feed at Marshall& Johnson's ware house.

Conductor Murry is in charge of the train this week is again looking for some lady in distress to whom he can loan those well known rubber boots. "Spout" is fully as gallant as ever and young ladies who are susceptible to to masculine charms should abstain from visiting the depot while the train is here.

While we do not wish to advise farmers about selling their wheat, they should remember that navigation close at Duluth November 20th and the past years have shown that after that date wheat is very liable to be considerably cheaper.

The agony is over at last and in a few days we will hear the last of county division and politics and in the future our time to the hard times and the low price of wheat.

The wheat war is still on here and farmers are getting every cent their wheat is worth. For the past week this market has been only 11 cents lower than Duluth which clearly indicates that our wheat buyers are buying wheat without profit. This is fun for the farmers and makes business brisk but it must be hard on the wheat buyer.

Married at Grand Forks last Saturday J.T.Berg to Miss Julia Abrahamson. The groom is collecting agent for the Mc Cormick Machine Co. and is well and favorably known here. The bride has lived near here for the past ten years and has made a host of friends by her many good qualities The Spectator unites with their many friends in wishing the happy couple a long and prosperous life.

Now it came to pass that there was much corruption in the land of the free, and men formed new parties in an endeavor to introduce new laws, and the country became divided against itself. For one party said: "We must have high taxes." Another party said: "We must have low taxes on all the necessaries of life, flour, meat, cotton, wool and whisky."

Still another said; "We must have no drink but water, for to drink any thing stronger is damnation.

Then came another party which claimed that money should be cheap so that the poor could buy it as well as the rich, so that all men would be equal.

Even the women of the land formed a party and declared that they must have equal right with the men.

Now this last party was a disturbing element, for the women of the land already had many privileges, more than the women of any other land.

They were very often allowed to wear pants. They rode horses and wheels. Some of them even smoked like men and nobody kicked. They were even allowed to take the places of men in factories and shops, and many were allowed to split own wood make fires and do many things which men did. But still they were not happy for they wanted all the rights of men and so they banded together, and formed a so-called National party.

And it came to pass that the country divided against itself, became under the rule of powerful kings and barons, The cotton kings ruled the south the coal barons controled the east while the pine barons ruled the north, and so it came to pass that the people lost all control, through a desire of each party to rule everything or ruin.

ELECTION RETURNS!

Latest returns indicate that the Republicans have captured about every thing. Polk county has gone people's party and Texas democratic and the republicans have captured about every thing else in the country. Republicans claim the election of Nelson by 30,000 and claim seven congressmen in the state. Later returns may show the election of Boen in this district. Republicans make gains everywhere and capture nearly every state in the Union and will control the next house of congress. The peoples party have probably eleted the full county and county division is still in doubt with the result very close.

A Shower of Feathers.

The eminent surgeon, Sir Astley Cooper, was fond of a practical joke. On one occasion he ascended the church tower of a village in Norfolk, taking with him one of his mother's pillows, and finding the wind blow directly to the next town he let off handfuls of feathers until he had emptied the pillow. The local papers reported this "remarkable shower" of feathers, and offered various conjectures to account for it, and the account was copied into other papers and was probably received as a perfectly natural occurrence.—Notes and Queries.

THE REVOLUTION IS HERE.

It Is Described by a Populist Candidate For Congress From a Chicago District.

We talk about the coming revolution and hope it will be peaceful. The revolution has come. This use of the government of all for the enrichment and aggrandizement of a few is a revolution. It is a revolution which has created the railroad millionaires of this country. To maintain the highways is one of the sacredest functions of a government. Railroads are possible only by the exercise of the still more sacred governmental power of eminent domain, which, when citizens will not sell the right of way, takes their property through the forms of law by force, none the less by force because the money value is paid. These sovereign powers of the highway and of eminent domain have been given by you and me, all of us, to our government to be used only for the common and equal benefit of all. Given by all to be used for all, it is a revolution to have made them the perquisite of a few. Only a revolution could have made possible in the speech of a free people such a phrase as a railroad king.

It is a revolution which has given the best parts of the streets that belong to all the people to street railway syndicates and gas companies and telephone companies and power companies. It is a revolution which has created national bank millionaires and bond millionaires and tariff millionaires and land grant millionaires out of the powers you and I delegated to the government of the United States for the equal good of every citizen. The interstate commerce act was passed to put into prison the railroad managers who used their highway power to rob the people, to ruin the merchants and manufacturers whose business they wanted to give to favored shippers. The antitrust law was passed to put into prison the men who make commerce a conspiracy, to compel the people every day to pay a ransom for their lives. It is a revolution which is using these interstate commerce and antitrust laws to prosecute the employees of the railways for exercising their inalienable rights as free men to unite for defense against intolerable wrong.

It is a revolution which lets the presidents and managers and owners of the railroads and trusts go free of all punishment for the crimes they are committing; which sends out no process against any of the corporations or corporation men in the American Railway association, while it uses all the powers of the attorney general of the United States to prosecute and, if possible, to send to prison the members of the American Railway union. It is a revolution which is putting the attorneys of corporations into ermine on the bench to be attorneys still.

It is a revolution by which great combinations, using competition to destroy competition, have monopolized entire markets, and as the sole sellers of goods make the people buy dear, and as the sole purchasers of labor make the people sell themselves cheap. Last and deepest and greatest revolution of all is that by which the mines, machinery, factories, currency, land, intrusted to private hands as private property, only as a stewardship, to warm, feed, clothe, serve mankind, are used to make men cold, hungry, naked and destitute. Coal mines shut down to make coal scarce, mills shut down to make goods scarce, currency used to deprive people of the means of exchange, and the railways used to hinder transportation.

This is the revolution that has come. With local variation it is worldwide, and against it the people are rising worldwide in peaceful counter revolutions in People's Parties. It begins now to be seen generally, what a few have been pointing out from the beginning, that the workingmen in organizing to defend themselves have been only pioneers. The power which denied them a fair share of their production was the same power which is now attacking the consumer, the farmer and even the fellow capitalist. In organizing against modern capitalism the workingmen set the example which all the people are now driven by self preservation to follow. The trades union of the workingmen was the precursor of the Farmers' Alliance, the grange and the People's Party.—Extract From Speech of Henry D. Lloyd at Chicago.

Minnesota Is All Right.

This is a Populist year in Minnesota. There is no doubt about it. There are many evidences of the trend of affairs. The chiefest perhaps is the wholesome awe which the old party leaders entertain for the people's movement. The Democrats are nearly scared to death over the proportions which the movement has attained.

The Republicans, on the other hand, do not evince so much fear of the movement in behalf of the masses, but they are anxious just the same. Of course they claim about everything in sight, but in a great many instances are merely whistling to keep their courage up.

Minnesota has generally been counted as a Republican state, but the party leaders have carried things with such a high hand that they no longer have a cinch on the offices.

The Populists do not claim to be able to make a clean sweep this fall, but there is little doubt that they will cut a pretty big figure when the votes are counted. They are out gunning for Knute Nelson, the present Republican governor, who has been renominated, and the chances are that he will be laid out. In the first place, Nelson is in bad odor with his own party.

Ten of the [illegible] Scandinavian newspapers [illegible] recently bolted the [illegible] gubernatorial nomination [illegible] for the Po[illegible] W. Owen. The [illegible] of the dis[illegible].

Th[illegible] show great gains in [illegible] states this year. The total vote in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will be from three times to five times as large as it was two years ago.

A HEAP OF COMPANY IN GEORGIA.

Such Is the Assurance Given a People's Party Candidate For Congress.

Dr. Felton, as the nominee for congress of the People's Party from this district (Seventh, Georgia), came down from Cartersville today, and going at once to the courthouse made his first speech in this campaign.

As he was driven to the courthouse the old yells he was formerly accustomed to hear greeted his ears and brought smiles to his face.

Alighting from the carriage, he was quickly surrounded by enthusiastic supporters, among whom were many who helped him win victories in the palmy days gone by. These were all surprised to see him so active and in such good trim as he rapidly climbed the stairs and took a seat on the stand. The courthouse quickly filled up. For two solid hours he held the closest attention of the crowd by his wonderful eloquence. Rising from his seat, the doctor said:

"FELLOW CITIZENS—I want to address your intelligence. Let us reason together calmly and truthfully. You and I have never been interested in politics as we are today, because politics has never touched our pockets as it does today. Today politics is practical. It means business. It means bread and food and raiment. [Applause.] We are in an alarming condition. Panic and penury and bankruptcy and almost beggary have crept into thousands of homes. You read restlessness and discontent in the faces of men everywhere.

"They wear upon their countenances the consciousness that they are sinking into the quicksand of treachery. Where is the man who has not grown poor within the last 12 months? Show him to me, and I will venture anything he is a goldbug. Taxable values have shrunk enormously all over Georgia, and the tax values do not cover one-fourth of the shrinkage.

"Georgia, I have no doubt, is $100,000,000 poorer than she was 12 months ago. Why is this? God has done wonders for us. What more could he have done? It is not the idleness and extravagance of our people. It is not the vice or immorality of the citizenship in the aggregate. Why, then, all this? Verily all this human woe and sorrow and want is attributed to Grover Cleveland and the party that put him in power. [Immense applause.]

"Four years ago from this stand I begged you to give the Democrtic party one more chance. In the providence of God and by the chicanery of Wall street they have had that chance. [Applause and laughter.] And I now say that you knew them then, but unfortunately I did not. I was wrong then, and you were right. I was fooled then, and you were worse. [Great applause.]

"Fellow citizens, I have been a Democrat ever since the Whig party went down in 1848. I have acted from conviction ever since then, and I now repudiate that party." [Applause.]

A Voice—You have got a heap of company too.—Marietta Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

American Citizenship Attacked.

It has come. The die has been cast. Monopoly proposes to smother the rights of American citizenship. Particularly is this true of the giant railroad corporations. A few days since the Union Pacific Railroad company issued an order commanding its employees to keep out of politics. It is either keep out of politics or lose their jobs. But why this extraordinary action at this late day? Heretofore the employee of the above named corporation took a hand in politics. His politics was both Democratic and Republican. About his action of the past this company said nothing. Why, then, does the company now issue a "restraining" order? Are not the employees today as capable of "meddling in politics" as they were yesterday?

Conditions have changed since the time when the railroad boys were allowed political freedom. Then they were without effort controlled in the interest of the company. It is different now. They have since passed through a great struggle, the A. R. U. strike, and have learned that their own interests will best have been subserved if the government shall assume full control of the railroads. This is the secret of the corporation's opposition. It does not want to be gobbled up by the people. The employees almost to a man have determined to vote the Populist ticket, and with this determination comes a desire to proselyte among their neighbors. But the action of the Union Pacific will not prevent the boys from voting. Railroad tyrants are not yet big enough to deny to any man the exercise of the right of suffrage.—Nonconformist.

Poor and Comes High.

One of the reforms that are absolutely necessary in order to relieve the people of the excessive burden of taxation that bears so hard upon them is an economical national administration.

During Jefferson's administration the annual expense of national administration was about $3,500,000 with a population of about 6,000,000, making an expense of about 60 cents per capita. During the last year of Van Buren's administration a great protest was raised against the increasing cost of administration, which went up to $13,000,000, the population being about 17,000,000. This was a per capita cost of 75 cents. And that was considered extravagance.

It would naturally be inferred that the greater the population the less the government should cost per capita. But what do we find? The cost of carrying on our government today reaches the overwhelming annual total of $400,000,000, or about $7 per capita. Think of that! Instead of a decrease it has increased from 60 cents to $7.

Little wonder that the American people should complain of their burden of taxation. And when we consider the regularity with which the people vote back into power the men who are responsible for such extravagance we even wonder that it is not worse.—North Dakota Independent.

Incongruous.

A clerical correspondent of one of the church papers relates that a certain prelate had great difficulty in suppressing his laughter at the consecration of a church the other day owing to the device on one of the school banners which was carried in the procession before the service. This banner was adorned with a very fierce looking lion, with terrible claws and teeth, while underneath him was the legend, "Suffer little children to come unto me."—London Truth.

To Store Away Cabbage for Winter.

The following method for storing cabbages have been tried and found efficacious, and are worthy of adoption by all:

A portion of the crop, sufficient for a couple of months' use may be safely stored down cellar. The outer leaves should be left on and the cabbage stood on the roots, head up, first row against the wall, second row against these, and so on for as many rows as are desired. If the cellar be damp or dry they will keep fresh and green a long while. Never, in a cellar, put the heads down. Care, however, should be taken through ventilation, by chimney, door, or otherwise, that there should be air, and that the temperature should be kept just above freezing point. If the cellar be dry, and the heads are down, I have observed that there is apt to be more or less mold; if wet, they begin to rot in a short time. Always place heads up.

Fur-Lined Garments.

For midwinter are graceful long Russian coats of cloth, in golden brown, reddish-brown, black or gray cloths, covering the costume entirely, lapped to the left side with a huge shawl-collar of fur, such as jeannet, the dark whole-gray squirrel lining, or else the lighter squirrel linings.

There are also tailor-made coats of Oxford-gray, biege, or black cloth in three-quarter length with strapped seams, and lined throughout with squirrel-back skins, giving a whole gray surface. These have large revers and collar of Persian lamb fur, and cost from $75 to $125. Fur lined circulars are of two lengths, one reaching just below the knee, the other covering the dress skirt entirely.

Feeding Ensilage to Sheep.

Sheep are delicate feeders and will reject anything that is not perfectly sweet. They sniff at ensilage, and if in any large quantity they will eat very little and then reject the remainder. Only a very little at first should be given to them, and, after they have eaten it all, change the food to clover hay. In this way a habit of liking ensilage will be formed. But it is hopeless to expect sheep to eat the butts of corn stalks as a cow will when they come from the silo.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured
by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THAT BEAR.

A Very Young "Tenderfoot"—Fleetfoot and Sureshot—What "Roderick the Reckless" Bagged.

I was about fourteen years old when I began to develop that queer freak so common among boys, which manifests itself in a disposition to run away or to do something desperate and lawless.

At first I thought I would like to be a pirate, but just at that time I happened to take a trip by boat from Boston to Halifax, and was so dreadfully seasick that my piratical aspirations came to an abrupt end.

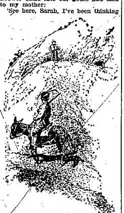
When I sadly admitted to myself that being a good boy was more enjoyable than being a seasick pirate, I turned my still surviving aspirations for an adventurous life in another direction. Should I become a highwayman or a Western cowboy?

I looked little like becoming either at that time. I was tall and pale and thin, with very little muscular development. Indeed the boys at school often addressed me as "Beanpole." My hair was so red that it was a stock joke of my boy companions that I might make my living by hiring out to the government as a lighthouse.

"Let them jeer," I said to myself. "Perchance in the years before us will come a day when, in some lonely mountain pass or on some desert plain, I will have ye at my mercy."

One day in June my Uncle Philip Brewer came into our house and said to my mother:

"See here, Sarah, I've been thinking of something. How would you like to let Jeddy go out to the mountains and spend the summer with me?"



"Rigged Out ter Kill Something."

I was Jeddy, and I listened eagerly as Uncle Phil went on:

"The boy is looking paler and thinner than usual this spring, and a summer among the hills would do him good in more ways than one. He could make himself useful to me, and he'd come home in the fall looking like another boy."

The idea was as new and unexpected to mother as to me, and she said, laughingly:

"Oh, I don't know, Philip. I'll have to think about it."

Uncle Phil was superintendent of a silver mine away out on the top of a mountain in Colorado.

He was "back East" that spring for a few days on business, and had taken a great liking to me, while I looked upon him with wonder and admiration because of the things he had seen and done while "roughing it" in the West. It thrilled my young blood to hear him tell of the bears and mountain lions he had killed, and of a scrimmage in which he had once engaged with a band of Ute Indians. Uncle Phil usually had his way, and I was not greatly surprised, although wildly delighted, when mother finally gave her consent to his suggestion.

"The boy does look ill, and Dr. Walker says he thinks the trip would do him good," she said. "So he may go if you will be sure to have him back safely in time for school, the first of September."

Uncle agreed to this, and four days later we left the quiet little Connecticut town in which my whole life had been spent and started for Colorado.

I had become an object of envy and admiration to all the other boys in the town as soon as they knew of my proposed trip, and I dare say I gave myself a good many foolish airs; but no matter about that. We all do it when we are young—some of us to continue to do it when we are old enough to be wiser.

We reached Camp Good Luck in ten days, having spent several days in Denver, where Uncle Phil had made my happiness perfect by giving me a handsome little rifle, promising to instruct me in the use of it.

Camp Good Luck consisted of a newly developed mine, with its engine and shaft-house, and two or three log cabins in which lived the men who worked at the mine. Uncle Phil had a cabin of his own some distance from the others, but we took our meals—very good ones, too—at the boarding house with the miners.

The cook was a big raw-boned Swede, and Uncle Phil said that if I wanted to make myself useful I might help him in peeling potatoes and grinding coffee. But such tasks as these did not fit in well with my cowboy aspirations.

There was a roguish-looking little black burro at the mine which was used to carry bags of ore down to the smelter, five miles distant, and provisions up to the mine. Uncle Phil said I might have it to ride around on when it was not needed.

I named the burro Fleetfoot, although he was the slowest and laziest little rascal any boy ever mounted. By dint of much prodding and belaboring on his sides I could sometimes get him to change his slow plodding for a mild and brief, as well as uncomfortable, trot. But when mounted on Fleetfoot's back I imagined myself a reckless cowboy in pursuit of Indians who were fleeing in terror before me. I would fire away recklessly at birds and ground-squirrels with my shining little rifle, but although I had named it "Sureshot," I doubt if I ever hit anything—except the trees and the rocks.

"Where's your game, boy?" Uncle Phil would ask when I returned empty-handed.

"Well," I would say, in reply, "the shooting wasn't very good."

"No, I don't s'pose it was," Uncle Phil would say dryly; and then I mentally resolved that I'd show him whether I could shoot or not.

One morning I rode down by the mine with my rifle on my shoulder and the cook's carving knife thrust into my belt by the side of one of Uncle Phil's bowie knives. The handle of a pistol with a broken lock appeared above one boot-top, and I had two long, shining rooster tail-feathers flaunting from my cap. I don't think that I ever felt or looked quite so much like a "terror of the mountains" as on that day.

"Well, sonny," called out a miner known as "Shorty" Sampson, from the top of the mine dump, "yer figged out ter kill something this time, sure, aint ye? Ye'd orter clean out all the b'ars an' lions an' cattymounts there is in the gulch, armed like that."

"You'd better go up by Big Pete's cabin," added Jack Shaw, "and put a bullet into the b'ar that come 'round last night and eat up his supper that was cooking while he'd gone down to the spring for water. He see it a-puttin' off up the mountain afterward, but he said he was too tired to put after it, an' night was comin' on, anyhow."

I supposed he was telling me this to frighten me, but a moment later I met Uncle Phil on the trail, and he said:

"See here, Jeddy, don't you go out of sight of the camp to-day, and don't go to nosing around in strange or dark places. Big Pete Brennan saw a big black bear up by his cabin last night. It may be lurking around here yet, and it wouldn't like anything better for dinner than a boy of about your size. Now, mind what I say, and keep near the camp. Shin up a tree and yell for help if you see the bear."

I was indignant at this injunction and resented it by saying loftily, "I guess old Fleetfoot and I can take care of ourselves, 'speshly when we've got old Sureshot along."

"Oh, you can, eh?" replied Uncle Phil. "I'm not at all sure of that. I think you'd want to get home a little faster than Fleetfoot could carry you if you ran across old Bruin."

This nettled me, and I said, "If I do run across him I'll bring home his hide;" whereat Uncle Phil shouted with laughter and walked on, leaving me longing for an encounter with the bear.

Fleetfoot plodded along slowly toward the cabin of Big Pete, a big, garrulous Irishman, who lived alone in a rude, hut-like cabin a mile from the mine. He was now employed at the mine and had brought the story of the bear with him when he came to work. I guided Fleetfoot toward Big Pete's cabin, determined to have a shot if perchance he should return hoping to get another meal.

I had never before felt so courageous and actually hoped for a hand-to-hand encounter with Bruin, for I felt that my victory would be all the greater if I could take his hide back to Connecticut without a rifle ball in it.

All was quiet and intensely gloomy around the cabin. Its hingeless door stood loosely against the door-frame, and all the glass was broken in the sash of the one small window. I stepped into the one little, grimy room of the cabin and glanced around. Then I led Fleetfoot to a pine tree, threw the bridle over a branch, and said:

"Now you just stand still until I come for you to lug a bear's hide home, old fellow." I patted his shaggy black sides, an attention he received with his usual indifference to either blows or caresses.

The cabin was entirely surrounded by an exceedingly dense growth of low pines, as was nearly the whole of the mountain side; but I plunged into the thicket, rifle in hand, resolved to let old Bruin know that "Roderick the Reckless," as I now styled myself, was on his trail.

I tramped around in the woods for an hour or longer, going a mile or two from the cabin and returning by another trail, finding, as I thought, traces of Bruin. I was almost within sight of the cabin, and was sitting down tightening the spur on my right boot, when I suddenly heard the snapping of dry twigs near me.

I jumped to my feet, my rifle to my shoulder and my heart in my mouth. My hands trembled so I could hardly hold the gun, and I am sure my face must have been ghastly. A desire to run for my life seized me, but I thought of Uncle Phil's jeers and of the boys at home and held my ground.

The sounds were repeated. I moved forward cautiously and turned a sharp curve in the trail. The sun had gone under a cloud and the woods were dimly lighted, but there about twenty-five feet distant I saw a part of the black body of my game as it was crossing the narrow trail to disappear in the pines beyond.

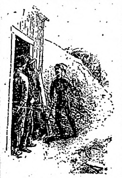
Half-crazed with excitement and with heart that went "thump, thump, thump", I lifted my gun to my shoulder and fired.

The last remnant of my courage deserted me while the echoes awakened by the report of my gun were still rolling up and down the dark gulch. Without waiting to complete my victory with my knife I turned and fled wildly down the trail, crying like a baby as I ran.

Twenty minutes later I appeared at the mine so pale and breathless and with such chattering teeth that Uncle Phil said, "Why, boy! What's the matter with you?"

He was standing in the engine-house door and near him were Big Pete, Shorty Sampson, and several of the other miners.

"I—I've—killed it!" I gasped out.



I've Kiled It.

"Killed what?" asked Uncle Phil.

"The—bear—up at Big Pete's cabin—I've killed it."

Uncle Phil looked incredulous. "It don't seem possible," he said. Was that your gunshot we heard a few minutes ago? "Tyna,ch Well, come along, Sampson, and let's see if the boy has proved himself to be a better shot than I thought he was."

Then turning to me he said: "No, you can't go; you're as white as a sheet; you go up to the boarding-house cabin and ask the cook to give you a cup of coffee, and then you go over to our cabin and lie down for an hour. Go on now and you shall have a bear steak for your dinner if you've really done old Bruin up."

"Well, I think I have," I said, proudly and with returning courage.

I got the cup of coffe and then went to our cabin and lay down as Uncle Phil wished.

About three-quarters of an hour afterward Uncle Phil stepped up to the open window of the cabin, looked at me a moment and then said, half severely and half laughingly:

"You young rascal! I ought really to come in there and warm your jacket for you, for you've gone and killed that little black burro, and it was the best one I ever owned."

I wanted to start for Connecticut by the next stage, but I could not, and for the rest of the summer Big Pete and the other men made me very unhappy by their remarks about "that bar." But one thing is certain, the rough life I lived that summer at "Camp Good Luck" fully cured me of my abused desire to become a cowboy, or a Western hunter or trapper.—J. L. Harbour, in Youth's Companion.

HISSING IN THEATERS.

It Is Not Illegal, but There Are Better Ways to Show Disapproval.

The recent decision of the New York court that a man has as much right to hiss in a theater as to applaud is common sense at least. A manager offers a certain entertainment for which people pay in advance. He encourages them to applaud if they are pleased, but objects vigorously to their expressing disapproval, if that is what they feel. Theoretically, the case is perfectly plain.

Most managers hold that the right to hiss does not exist in practice. Some of them have a rule that no hissing will be allowed, and occasionally some one is ejected for thus relieving his mind. It seems, however, that the New York managers who were interviewed after the recent decision in court did not, as a rule, contend that spectators have no right to hiss, but that hissing is disorderly, and that they have a right to return the money of the dissatisfied person and compel him to leave the room. Some of them said they would eject a man who hissed and take their chances, but more spoke temperately, and one or two said any one had a right to hiss, and could not be interfered with for it.

One thought that a man who hisses is almost always either drunk or spiteful, but this man was the manager of Koster & Bial's, where recent occurrences may have warped his judgment. Thomas Namack, Crane's manager, admits that if any one hissed Crane he would like to punch his head, but supposes he should have to rue it. All the same he considers it "mighty contemptible business." After all, it is one of those cases where the law should be for some extreme cases, and custom should govern. J. Charles Davis, chief of Harry Miner's staff, makes a pertinent suggestion when he says that hissing prevails in Germany, France and South America, but that the audiences there are more demonstrative in every way. He seems to think that an audience that can coolly restrain its applause may be made to refrain from hissing.—Hartford Courant.

COINCIDENCES.

Some Occur Though the Chances Against Them Are Millions to One.

That astonishing coincidences do occur—events against which the chances are thousands or millions to one, is a matter, we may all say, of every-day experience. Here, for example, is one which happened to myself a week or two ago. I was introduced to a gentleman named Hackstoun—I must apologize for using real names, but the point of the anecdote lies in them—and, learning that he came from Fifeshire, I asked him whether he was descended from Hackstoun of Rathillet, who was a prime mover in the murder of Archbishop Sharp, on Magus Moor. Yes, he was lineally descended from that worthy; and I was interested to find that he espoused his ancestor's cause, and even hesitated to describe the little occurrence as a murder.

Only a few days afterwards I happened to meet a friend in a railway carriage in company with a gentleman whom I had never seen before, and whose name was unknown to me. Something occurred to remind me of Mr. Hackstoun, and I mentioned having met him and spoke of the delicacy with which his ancestor had held back from the actual slaughter because he bore a personal grudge against the archbishop. "He looked on," I said, "while Balfour of Burley did the job." My friend turned to the other gentleman and asked: "Are you any relation of his, Mr. Balfour?" "Yes," was the reply. "I am lineally descended from him." Will any mathematician calculate for me the chances that, not in Fifeshire, not even in Scotland, but in London, I should meet within a few days two direct descendants of the two ringleaders in this "old, unhappy, far-off thing," this murder which occurred 430 miles away and 215 years ago?—Pall Mall Budget.

This has induced the use of the Royal Baking Powder in my home, and it is found to give most complete satisfaction.

SCOTTISH STORIES

Excerpts From James Inglis' New Book, "Oor Ain Folk."

The local jealousy between town and town is amusingly illustrated by the following anecdote: A worthy burgher of Perth and a Newburgh man had got into a rather acrimonious dispute over their toddy anent the merits of their respective towns. The Perth man vaunted the virtues of the beautiful Tay and the noble expanse of the city links. The Newburg man insisted that their water was purer and clearer, and the breezy heights about their town put the links of Perth completely in the shade. The Perth man renewed the attack by speaking of their busy streets and the volume of their trade. As Newburg happened to be a favored changing for numerous intersecting lines of mail coaches the Newburg man was able to score a point by insisting that "mair stage coaches gaed through Newburgh in a day than cam' tae Perth in a week." This put the champion of the "Fair City" on his metal, and, swelling out his chest with conscious dignity, he rather pompously delivered what he considered a clincher:

"Ah!" said he, "but oor provost gangs aboot wi' a chain."

"Dis he?" dryly responded the other. "A weel, we lat oors gang aboot loose."

It was but the third time the Rev. James Don had mounted the pulpit. The scene was in Mr. Paton's church, in the pretty village of Fettercairn. When the young preacher, after giving out the Psalm, had taken his first rapid survey of the congregation, he noticed two finely dressed gentlemen in a secluded pew, dressed in superfine broadcloth suits and adorned with white clerical neckties. One was a venerable looking old gentleman, with silvery hair; the other young, with a rather aristocratic and refined look. It then being the height of the tourist season, Mr. Don put the two gentlemen down at once as some traveling English rector and his curate; and he felt very nervous in the presence of what he took to be such critics. In the evening the same couple occupied the same seat, and the minister underwent another ordeal of inward anxiety. When he came to disrobe, however, in the vestry, he asked the beadle who the two distinguished clerics might be.

"Och, there wis nae meenister i' the kirk, sir," said the beadle.

"Yes, there was," said Mr. Don, "they were here this morning, too." Then he described them.

"Hoots, sir," said the old beadle, "they wis nae meenisters; that was jist Dancie Fettis an' his son—the twa dancin' maisters frae Brechin."

The Black Dinner Gown.

The black dinner gown, whether it be plain velvet or some of the richly-figured materials, is always in good taste, and the woman wearing a well-made black gown of suitable material is properly dressed for the most elaborate function. Elderly ladies have long ago concluded that nothing is so becoming or so suitable as black velvet, made to look even more elegant by the use of fine lace, and, so, very many of them adhere strictly to gowns of it, and very often to one style of making—the princess. Dame fashion has ordered that black satin is suitable to all ages and conditions for a dinner dress, and so combined with lace or made harmonious with color it is very generally seen. Jackets richly embroidered with gold are liked for wear over a black satin gown, and one will tend to make it look very rich. A woman who goes out a great deal, and always looks well, has had five different bodices, made to wear with her black satin skirt, and she expects to be considered a well-dressed woman at every dinner party which she attends during the season.

ARCTIC CLIMATE.

Lord Kelvin's Theory Concerning the Changes It Has Undergone

The reissue of Lord Kelvin's addresses on geology and general physics revive a discussion as to the probable cause of the warm climate once experienced in the arctic regions. That such a warm climate did prevail at one time in those regions is beyond doubt; for not only are remains of forest trees found within 15 degrees of the North Pole, with every evidence of their having grown there, but the return of the arctic expedition in 1875 brought home proofs of a very warm climate, probably as warm as the tropics, within 9 degrees of the north pole. The explanation of this condition which Lord Kelvin suggests is this:

The Arctic Ocean is a land-locked sea, and the effects of the surrounding coasts is to hem the ice in and prevent free oceanic circulation, while the land itself serves to receive and accumulate snow wherewith to load the neighboring sea with a thin surface layer of surface ice. But if the land was lowered 2,000 feet the sea would be open but for a few islands, and the water deep enough for plenty of warm currents to flow in sufficient to clear the ice away and keep it clear. Even now the ice seems to be 5 feet thick, evidently melting away underneath.

Having regard to all the defenses—the heat capacity of moist air, the formation of dew, and such like—it is suggested that the same conditions as protect a large continent in temperate zones from destructive cold during a warm night would prevent even so much as hoar frost on a small island at the very pole during its whole winter's six months' night, if it were surrounded by a deep ocean with no land to obstruct free circulation between it and tropical seas. In Lord Kelvin's judgment, glaciation is promarily due to elevation, and changes in climate principally caused by variations of elevation.

The theory that a shift in the earth's axis is responsible for such climatic changes finds no favor with Lord Kelvin, who declares that there is no evidence, either geological or astronomical, of any considerable shifting of the position of the poles. As to the warmer temperature at one time prevalent all over the earth, the simplest, and in every way the most probable, hypothesis is a warmer sun.

ELECTION SUMMARY.

THE REPUBLICANS CAPTURE ALMOST EVERYTHING.

The Election Returns Are Almost Complete and Show That the Republicans Have the Victory—Concise Resume of the Returns.

The unofficial returns on Tuesday's election are almost complete, the doubtful states will require the official canvass to determine the result. However, the Republicans have carried almost all the states by an unprecedented vote. Following is given a resume of the returns from the different states:

New York.

The Republicans carry New York state by about 150,000 plurality, electing Levi P. Morton governor over David B. Hill. The total vote for governor was considerably in excess of that cast in 1891.

The following congressmen have been elected:

First district, McCormick, Rep.; Second, Hurley, Rep.; Third, Wilson, Rep.; Fourth, Fisher, Rep.; Fifth, Bennett, Rep.; Sixth, Howell, Rep.; Seventh, Ford, Rep.; Eighth, Walsh, Dem.; Ninth, Miner, Dem.; Tenth, Campbell, Rep.; Eleventh, Erdman, Rep.; Twelfth, McClellan, Dem.; Thirteenth, Shannon, Rep.; Fourteenth, Quigg, Rep.; Fifteenth, Low, Rep.; Sixteenth, Fairchild, Rep.; Seventeenth, Odell, Rep.; Eighteenth, Lefere, Rep.; Nineteenth, Black, Rep.; Twentieth, Southwick, Rep.; Twenty-first, Wilbur, Rep.; Twenty-second, Curtis, Rep.; Twenty-third, Foote, Rep.; Twenty-fourth, Chickering, Rep.; Twenty-fifth, Sherman, Rep.; Twenty-sixth, Ray, Rep.; Twenty-seventh, Poole, Rep.; Twenty-eighth, Payne, Rep.; Twenty-ninth, Gillette, Rep.; Thirtieth, Wadsworth, Rep; Thirty-first, Brewster, Rep.; Thirty-second, Mahoney, Rep.; Thirty-third, Danield, Rep.; Thirty-fourth, Hooker, Rep. Republicans, 31; Democrats, 3. The last delegation stood, Democrats, 19; Republicans, 15.

Nebraska.

The figures received indicate the election of Holcomb, Pop.-Dem., for governor by a small plurality. The Republicans have probably elected five of the six congressmen, with the result in the sixth still in doubt. Outside of governor the Republican state ticket is elected, and the legislature will probably be Republican on joint ballot.

California.

Budd, the Democratic candidate for governor, has a plurality of about 2,000. The remainder of the state offices go to the Republicans. The Republicans also elect six out of the seven congressmen. The legislature will be Republican.

Illinois.

The republicans carried the state by a plurality of 125,000, and elected twenty-one out of the twenty-two congressmen.

The legislature is Republican by a majority that will insure the election of a Republican United States senator.

Wisconsin.

The Republicans have elected the entire state ticket. Upham, the Republican candidate for governor, defeated Peck, Democrat, by about 50,000 plurality.

The entire delegation to congress is Republican.

Massachusetts.

Greenhagle, the Republican candidate for governor, has a plurality of about 70,000, and the entire Republican ticket has been elected. All the Republican candidates for congress were elected but one.

South Dakota.

Sheldon, the Republican candidate for governor, and the entire Republican state ticket was elected by pluralities ranging from 10,000 to 15,000. The legislature is Republican.

North Dakota.

The entire Republican state ticket was elected. The Republican candidate for congress was also elected. The legislature is Republican.

New Hampshire.

The Republican state ticket, headed by Busiel has been elected by a good majority. The legislature is Republican by about seventy-five majority.

Connecticut.

Coffin, the Republican candidate for governor, is elected by 15,674 plurality. In all four of the congressional districts Republican candidates are elected.

Minnesota.

The Republicans carry the state by about 50,000 plurality. Seven Republican congressmen are elected and the legislature is Republican.

Michigan.

The Republicans carry the state by about 80,000 plurality and elect all twelve congressmen. The legislature is Republican.

Kansas.

The Republicans elect their entire state ticket and all of the congressmen. The legislature will be Republican on joint ballot.

Kentucky.

North Carolina.

It will require the official count to decide; the chances are in favor of the Democrats. The legislature will be Democratic.

Delaware.

Republicans have elected governor and congressmen. The next legislature will be Republican on joint ballot.

Alabama.

The Democrats have carried every congressional district in the state but one, which is in doubt.

Colorado.

McIntyre and the entire Republican state ticket have been elected by about 15,000 plurality.

Florida.

NELSON IS ELECTED

HIS PLURALITY WILL EXCEED 50,000.

The Latest Returns Give Nelson a Plurality of 54,923—The Republican Ticket Keeps Up With the Vote for Governor—Seven Republican Congressmen Elected—The Legislature Republican.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 9.—The election returns for Minnesota as they come in only add to the Republican majorities. With only a few outlying districts to hear from, Gov. Nelson's plurality is 54,923, and he has a clear majority of 8,038. His vote will probably reach 150,000 and his plurality 65,000. The Democratic vote for Becker already falls 30,000 below the Populist vote for Owen, the figures being, Owen, 75,912; Becker, 45,165.

The Republican state ticket is elected by pluralities ranging from 35,000 to 50,000. The contest over the state auditorship led to Biermann receiving a larger Democratic vote than other Democratic candidates, and probably a few Populists voted for him, but if he had a third as many more votes he could not be elected.

The legislature is so largely Republican that on a joint ballot that party will have a majority of 114. The Fiftieth district is still in doubt, but it is not included in these figures.

The seven congressmen are all Republicans. Eddy (Rep.), in the Seventh district, has a snug plurality, which not even Boen's expected large vote in Polk county, still largely unreported, can wipe out. The condensed returns are given below:

IN CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS

Every Republican Candidate Undoubtedly Elected.

The congressional district returns are slow in coming in, but it is clearly apparent that Minnesota will send seven Republicans to represent her in congress. In the First district Tawney (Rep.) has a majority over all of 6,271, and a plurality of 9,862. In the Second district McCleary (Rep.) already has 9,315 plurality, and a majority of 3,800 with several counties to hear from. In the Third Heatwole (Rep.) will defeat Hall (Dem.) by 5,000 plurality; Heatwole already has 3,255 plurality. The Fourth has re-elected Kiefer (Rep.), and the Fifth Fletcher (Rep.). In the Sixth Baldwin (Dem.), the present representative, is defeated by Towne (Rep.) by 10,568 plurality, and 5,959 majority, and more counties to hear from. In the Seventh Eddy (Rep.) has, up to the present returns to hand, 1,518 plurality over Boen (Pop.). This may be reduced by the returns from Polk county, but Eddy's final plurality will be above 500. The figures follow:

First District.

Tawney, Rep.	17,184
Noonan, Dem.	7,322
Meighen, Pop.	3,591
Tawney's plurality	9,862
Tawney's majority	6,271

Second District.

McCleary, Rep.	13,830
Baker, Dem.	3,480
Long, Pop.	4,515
McCleary's plurality	9,315
McCleary's majority	3,800

These returns are from twenty-eight precincts in the district.

Third District.

Heatwole, Rep.	12,558
Hall, Dem.	9,303
Bowler, Pop.
Heatwole's plurality	3,255

Many counties have not reported a single return. Three only have given returns for Bowler, and in these he is 2,000 behind Heatwole.

Sixth District.

Towne, Rep.	18,596
Baldwin, Dem.	8,028
Halvorsen, Pop.	4,600
Towne's plurality	10,568
Towne's clear majority	5,959

Seventh District.

Eddy, Rep.	16,746
McLean, Dem.	2,329
Bowen, Pop.	14,828
Eddy's plurality	1,518

THE LEGISLATURE.

One Hundred and Fourteen on Joint Ballot for the Republicans.

Up to a late hour last night all but one district had been heard from in regard to the legislative contests, and the returns from these show that the Republicans will have at least 114 majority on joint ballot. The Fiftieth district, comprising the counties of Becker, Clay and Wilkin, is still in doubt. This district is entitled to a senator and three representatives, but even conceding these to the Populists, the Republican majority would still be 114 on joint ballot. The composition of the two chambers of the legislature will be as follows:

House—Republicans, 96; Democrats 7; Populists, 8; doubtful, 3.

Hearing With His Legs.

The novelty of a telegraph operator who can scarcely hear a locomotive whistle working day after day at his instrument is one of the marvels presented at a telegraph station near this city. The man is about 28 years old. He has been deaf since he was about 3 years of age, as the result of an attack of scarlet fever.

Being so extremely hard of hearing, the child's sense of touch was developed to the degree usually possessed by blind persons. The slightest tap upon a table or a wall, the rolling of a wagon wheel along the street and all similar sounds were conveyed to him by the subsequent vibrations.

When about 12 years of age he undertook the study of telegraphy. Being a favorite with the operator at his home, he was given the run of the office. All the mystic signs, dots and dashes of the profession were explained to him. Day after day he could be seen sitting at the table, with his knees pressed against it or resting his elbow upon it. He was literally feeling the messages as they were ticked off over the wire. Being naturally quick, it was but a short time until he was able to correctly read any message coming into the office. Sending came just as easy, and to-day, after sixteen years' service at the key and sounder, he is just as fine an operator as there is in the country. Of late years his hearing has improved to such an extent that he can easily hear the sounder, but the old habit of listening with his knee or elbow still clings to him, and that is the way all his messages are read.—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

The report that a peace between China and Japan is likely to be patched up soon through the good offices of Uncle Sam may be taken with some grains of allowance. Japan will not be in favor of peace unless she meets with some severe reverses. There are rumors that she has been checked at Port Arthur, but that, if true, is not likely to prove a very serious matter. The Japs need to be whipped once in a while to prevent them from becoming overconfident. It is not likely that any of the powers will interfere to compel peace. It would require united a tion to do that; no one power would attempt it single-handed, and all the Europeans would be very jealous of any attempt on the part of the United States to interfere.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Not many years ago in one of our eastern metropolitan cities was held the memorial services over the remains of an illustrious citizen—a Scandinavian by birth—the orator astounded his hearers by saying that the deceased had been guilty of a crime—a crime which the public was most slow to forgive, and by way of explanation stated that the deceased had been guilty of having an original idea. He had been persistent in pressing congress for an appropriation to put the idea into practice bringing to bear all the political and business influence he could command he finally secured the aid sought for.

The know-it-all states man who was delegated to present the appropriation to the deceased says "here are the funds for which you have annoyed us out of all patience. Take it and build your hobby, get astride of it and ride to perdition on it; but don't bother us any more with such outrageous foolishness.

Nothing daunted with these discouraging words from this self-esteemed wise man Mr. Ericsson built the Monitor in time to save our navy and perhaps our nation from the perdition which the statesman had assigned the inventor.

Moral.—It is well to give new ideas chances—some of them have proven very valuable in the past and probably will be even more so in the future.—Ex.

We have read of a newspaper hustler who claimed he could write a poem, discuss the tariff, umpire a ball game, report a wedding describe a fire so that the readers would shed their wraps make a dollar, pay a months board abuse the liquor habit, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals attack free silver, wear diamonds, invent advertisements praise babies, fight to a finish, set type, raise hogs, sweep his own office, speak at a prayer meeting and sing bass, but we have never heard of any yet who could make a success of collecting old subscription. If you did not get all you wanted Tuesday don't get blue and mope—in some way it was all for the best though it is sometimes very hard to realize this fact. If you voted as your conscience dictated with a full determination to discharge a sacred duty to your country, you have no need to regret. You may have had a mistaken idea—most of men do at least one in their lives, but that is no killing offence and you will in time learn the right way if you have an earnest desire to do so. No true patriot need regret any action performed with a sincere sense of duty, Polk County Journal.

T G. Thompson, A. C. Schmidt and E. C. Davis returnd on Saturday from Mud Lake, where they went a week previous on a hunting trip, One duck was the amount of the game brought back by the hunters. The prairie and timber fires have caused much loss of life there and according to the hunters, stories the sod has been burned to a depth of from 3 to 4 feet. This report comes from almost every man that has visited the reservation country in the past few weeks. The loss is variously estimated at from three to four thousand dollars. Besides that the farmers have lost houses and implements to about the same amount.—Crookston Times.

The official vote of Polk county has not yet been made public but, enough is known to insure the election of every peoples party candidate on the ticket by not less than 500 majority. The peoples party have polled over 4,000 votes in the county which clearly shows that they have not lost ground, Every proposition for county division was beaten by over 1000 majority but the division schemers are still on deck wildly talking about what they will do at the next election.

South Carolina and Nebraska are the only states where the peoples party were successful last week. The democrats have Texas and the republicans the rest. The peoples party vote was a large one but scattered. Two years ago nearly one million votes were polled and a careful estimate shows that this year fully two million votes were cast for the reform party. Democracy appears to be on its last legs and the republicans will be over confident. Immense majorities mean a spirit of unrest among the people. Look out for changes in the future.

We have reason to feel good over the fact that this part of the county has elected for the first time a county commissioner from this section of the district in the person of Henry Norland of Rocksbury. Mr. Norland is an honest capable man who will make us an excellent commissioner and this part of the district will at least get justice in his hands.

A wheat war has been on in St. Hilaire for some time, two new buyers having begun business, and the result is the farmer gets the benefit. Prices rule higher there by two cents than here, The crop is practically all marketed though, and there is no danger of the war spreading.—Crookston Times,

THE ELECTION.

The returns are not yet fully completed but as the Republican have nearly everything in sight it does not matter much, the Republicans have been steadily preaching that the present hard times were caused by the Democrats and that the election of the populists would make matters much worse, but that if they were put in power, the hard times would vanish like a bad dream and prosperity would come on the run. The people have evidently taken them at their word and if they keep their promises and give us the good times that they promised they will surely keep their majorities, but if on the other hand the people find that they have not bettered their condition, and that republican promises were made but to gain votes and be broken their majorities will vanish like a fog before the morning sun. If these promises of good times be kept all will gladly join, if not the people will not be fooled again.

DECEPTION EXPOSED.

A TRICK OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MADE CLEAR.

The Silver Dollars Now Being Coined Add Nothing to the Value of Currency—How Official Misstatements Are Constructed. Interview of A. J. Warner.

Hon. A. J. Warner was asked, "What does the coinage of silver dollars at this time mean?"

"Do you mean to ask why silver dollars are being coined at this time? If so, that is a question which only the secretary of the treasury can answer. It would hardly do to say they are coined just at this time for political effect, although there are strong suspicions of that kind out. One thing, however, is certain—the coining of this silver adds nothing whatever to the volume of circulation. The silver dollars now being coined are made from the bullion purchased under the act of 1890, and under the provisions of that act they can only be used for the redemption of the coin notes issued under that act. If any of these dollars, therefore, are paid out, notes to an equal amount must be canceled and destroyed, for the act of 1890 plainly says there shall be no greater or less amount of such notes outstanding at any time than the cost of the silver bullion and the standard dollars coined therefrom then held in the treasury. Therefore these dollars must either be held in the treasury or paid out for coin notes, which must be canceled. They are not wanted for the redemption of coin notes, and therefore they will be held in the treasury. The secretary of the treasury is consequently incurring the expense of changing a certain amount of silver bullion into the form of coin. There is certainly no objection to coining this silver.

"For my part I wish it were all coined and the coin notes all redeemed with it, for there would then be none to be redeemed in gold. The money volume, however, would not thereby be at all increased. But if these dollars, coined in 1894, are being used on the stump, as is claimed, to prove to the people that silver is still being coined and the currency volume thereby increased, it is downright deception; that is all there is to it."

"What have you to say about the statement of the volume of money in circulation put out on the first of each month?"

"I have simply to say that they are official misstatements of facts. This may seem to be a broad assertion, but it is no more than those who make up these statements well know and would doubtless privately admit. There is no such volume of money in circulation in this country as is contained in these statements. Nor is there any such volume of money in the country at all, and those who make up these statements know this perfectly well. For instance, they give as the volume of greenbacks still in existence, $346,681,000. They do not admit that there has been a single note burned up, destroyed or lost in any way during the war or since. The same is true of national bank notes and of other forms of paper currency. They assume also that every fractional piece of silver coined since 1853, $21,000,000 of which were coined before the war, almost every piece of which left the country during the war, has all come back and is now in circulation! But worse than this is the reported stock of gold in the country. According to the treasury statement for January last, there was $606,000,000 of gold, coin and bullion, in the country, of which $586,000,000 was in the banks and in the hands of the people. But the gold holdings of the banks altogether, according to the last full bank report up to that date, was only $175,000,000, leaving as in actual circulation, in the pockets of the people, in the tills of merchants, etc., $411,000,000 in gold, or $6 per capita in gold actually in the hands of the people!

"Now, the treasury officials do not claim to have any evidence whatever of the existence of any such stock of gold coin in circulation nor of half of it, and yet they put this statement out without any explanation as if it were the truth. All in the world they have to show for it is an estimate made years ago by Director of the Mint Burchard, which was merely a guess to begin with, and to this they have added imports and production and deducted exports without attempting to give the amount of gold that has gone into the melting pot or that has been carried out of the country by Americans traveling abroad or by Chinese laborers returning home. Hence the black faced figures in these reports, claiming to show monthly the true per capita circulation, to say the least, are culpably deceptive.

"Secretary Foster, a few years ago, put out a statement of the volume of circulation at the close of the war, which contradicted the statement of every secretary made during the war or within ten years subsequent to the close of the war, and yet this official misinformation is still repeated from time to time by the present secretary. This sort of information given to the public as true and reliable has been tolerated about as long as it ought to be."

"What have you to say about the estimate of the production of gold for 1893 by the present director of the mint."

"Well, the present director of the mint seems to be about as accommodating as the Indiana schoolmaster who said he would teach that the world was round or flat, just as they preferred. Mr. Preston was made director of the mint to make estimates and get up statistics for the Gold trust, and he has proved a faithful servant to them. I see he estimates the total production of gold for the world last year to be $155,000,000, which comes up to the production of 1853, the largest ever reported before.

"But in order to make this out he raises the estimate of almost everybody else, especially where figures are not perfectly certain, and restores the estimated production of China of $8,000,000, which his predecessor, Mr. Leach, dropped out after an investigation which showed to him that it had no foundation. Mr. Preston, in order to get this $8,000,000 for China, which nobody else knows anything about, assumes that all the gold taken into or sent to China by Chinese gold diggers from all parts of the world has all remained in China, and that therefore China's exports of gold must have been produced within the limits of China itself. Del Mar makes the production of gold for 1893 $132,000,000, but I am inclined to think that this is an underestimate. Without going into details, my own judgment is that the production of last year reached something like $140,000,000. This increase came largely from the goldfields of South Africa, where gold is found under exceptional conditions in conglomerates, as diluvial gold. That there has been a great stimulus to the production of gold in recent years there is no doubt, but that this excessive production of gold can be kept up for any considerable length of time no competent geologist believes.

"Professor Suess in a very positive manner reaffirms in his recent testimony before the German silver commission his previous statements as to the certain decline in the production of gold in the near future.

"Mr. Preston has also reduced the estimate of gold consumption in the arts, without any data whatever to base it on, from $85,000,000 down to $50,000,000. These things show so plainly that these estimates are made to serve a purpose that they become worthless as statistics or as official estimates."

MILK AND WATER.

The Alleged Argument of a Goldbug Newspaper Torn to Tatters.

It appears that Judge Trumbull's reference to silver coinage has disquieted The Tribune, which applies to it the following striking argument:

"Judge Trumbull did not attempt to inform his hearers how the workingman would be benefited by a debasement of the currency, such as would be effected by 'free silver,' nor how the currency is to be made more in value or purchasing power by making it poorer. If a man has a pint of milk and adds to it a pint of water, the result is not a quart of milk, but a quart of a mixture which contains no more milk than would go into a pint. If he could push off a pint of the mixture on a creditor who had lent him a pint of pure milk and call the account 'square' he might gain an advantage in that dishonorable way, but surely the action would not be approved by Judge Trumbull, for the pint of the mixture would have only half the intrinsic value possessed by the original pint of milk."

Let us examine for a moment this milk and water argument and see if we cannot get some of the water out of it.

If a man borrow a pint of milk, is it just to demand that he repay, over and above interest, a pint of cream? Such a rule of business would make a mighty profitable thing for those who lent milk and who got cream in return. And if wheat, pork, beef, labor, were all worth so many pints of milk today there would be a sudden and serious fall in the number of pints each would exchange for if, by a slyly passed law, it should be declared tomorrow that cream, not milk, is the only fluid which may lawfully be offered in trade. In such an event the value of cream would quickly rise, for everybody would want it to purchase things with or to pay debts with, while the value of milk would speedily fall, since it would be needed only to drink, to make clabber or for other use "in the arts."

Then when the fellows who had borrowed milk with its normal quantity of cream in it desired laws enabling them to pay in the same fluid they would be assured that even if any law on the subject were passed there must be more cream in the debtor's milk, as the parity was no longer maintained at the historic ratio. The yellow cream would be exalted, as is the yellow gold, and the white milk and the white metal go down together.

We think that Judge Trumbull is as fortunate in the character of the arguments arrayed in confutation of his speech as he is in the great attention given him by the allied press of privilege. And we are entirely certain that the People's Party is exceedingly fortunate in having won so prominent and so able a champion as he.—Chicago Times.

Populism In the South.

A Washington correspondent, after a visit to Democratic congressional headquarters, wrote a letter to his paper from which the following is taken:

It is a general concession that Tom Watson will beat Black in the Eighth Georgia district. This from a public point of view need invoke no crape. Watson is a bright, vigorous nineteenth century production, unhung by moss. Black, on the other hand, for any purpose of broad statecraft is an utter waterhaul. He is also a Cleveland goldbug without being able to defend himself and tell why. Aside from Black and the doom which attends on him, Democrats looking soberly over the figures express a belief that two more Georgia districts are on the toboggan slide toward the third party. In fact, by the light of burning Georgia, they begin to see that the south is afire for Populism in the Carolinas, Virginia, Alabama and Texas. They say Joe Sayers is having an up hill fight against Populism.

Up in old Missouri, too, the Democrats are making blue report. Every Democratic body there, so they say, is sulky. They won't attend the meetings. They are in that ugly mood, the Missouri Democrats are, where they won't stay where they are nor go anywhere else. All up and down the situation is perplexing to the headquarters Democrat. But the fact is the Georgia tumble took his breath away.

Both Hands Busy.

A negro in Texas was brought up for stealing a pair of chickens, but declared solemnly that he "didn't steal dem ar fowls," declaring, on the other hand, that the complainant had beaten him brutally with a club.

"But," said the judge, "you're twice as large and strong as he is. Why didn't you defend yourself?"

"Why, jedge, see hyar. I had a chicken in each hand, an what's two raw chickens agin a club?"—Exchange.

The following [illegible] B. Porter ([illegible]) [illegible] tary of the convention that [illegible] him for congress for the eighth district of Massachusetts:

J. Winfield Scott, Esq., Secretary:

Dear Sir—Your letter informing me of my selection as the standard bearer of the People's Party in the Eighth congressional district has been received, as well as nomination papers containing the requisite number of signatures named in the ballot law. I accept the nomination, believing it the duty of every man to give his best efforts toward bringing to an end the misgovernment of this country.

The People's Party has its origin in a remarkable state of affairs. A great nation occupying a soil of the utmost fertility, having a high order of intellectual development and inventive genius, is rapidly becoming the [illegible] of a ridiculous minority, aspiring to rule by monopolizing the land and juggling with the medium of exchange.

Prices of the necessaries of life can be raised or depressed at the whim of a hundred persons. Taxation has been so arranged as to fall heaviest on the poorer classes. The most useless of metals—gold—is made a god before whose altar all industry must bow.

Transportation, that chief element in the prosperity of a civilized land, is manipulated almost entirely with a view to private profit. Highways of commerce are made the footballs of speculation, to the ruin of communities. The producer and consumer are bled alike by vampires whose steel rails gird the continent. We are compelled to pay an excessive price for corn that is used for fuel in Kansas and coal that underlies an empire of space 20 hours from our homes.

Human beings were created to live upon the products of the earth, but to gain a few acres the average workman must give his best years in exchange. Land values owing their existence to growing cities are grasped by individuals and willed to their descendants.

When the public needs space for a park, a school, or a wider street, it finds the earth's surface in pawn. It has given, without compensation, to gas, electric and railway companies franchises permitting them to use its avenues, for which the people have paid. If it desires to assume those functions, the gift is reckoned at a handsome sum in the price demanded.

Neither the Republican nor the Democratic party pretends to have any remedy for these evils. When wealthy trusts essay to grind us still further in the mire, a microscope would not suffice to tell them apart. Both call for "honest" dollars, too limited in number, that the banker and monopolist may gather into their coffers the earnings of the laborer.

The Republican party gave us a system of "protection" so delicately adjusted that the slightest fear of variation paralyzed trade. The Democrats, loud in the professions of what they would do if they only had the power, present a spectacle of incompetency that even their party organs cannot find heart to defend.

An attachment to one's political faith often outlives the confidence and respect that engendered it. Those who cast their fortunes with a new party feel the strength of old ties. But, as was said by the prince of Sweden, who left his kindred to fight against a usurper: "In politics there are neither friends nor enemies. There are only duties to perform."

The voter who will not bring his best intelligence to bear on every question is unworthy of the suffrage. He is a fool who continues to hold the shibboleth of a name above his conscientious convictions.

We belong to a party that is unequivocally for reform; that will accept no compromise, and that will not cease its efforts till the shackles that now bind the industrial and business world have fallen into pieces.

Through great states in the west the new party has made its influence felt. In the south it is tearing open the Bourbon crust. The east should be in accord with these pioneers. Let us hope that the number willing to be counted this year will be so large that the "almost persuaded" will flock to our ranks and carry in 1896 our flag in triumph to the capitol. Very respectfully,

LINN B. PORTER.

From

High Government Authority.

No authority of greater experience on food products exists than Dr. Henry A. Mott, of New York. Dr. Mott's wide experience as Government Chemist for the Indian Department, gave him exceptional opportunities to acquaint himself with the qualities and constituent parts of baking powders. He understands thoroughly the comparative value of every brand in the market, and has from time to time expressed his opinion thereof. On a recent careful re-examination and analysis he finds

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

"New York, March 20th, 1894.

I find Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be superior to all others, for the following reasons :—

1st. It liberates the greatest amount of leavening gas and is consequently more efficient.

2nd. The ingredients used in its preparation are of the purest character.

3rd. Its keeping qualities are excellent.

4th. On account of the purity of the materials and their relative proportions, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder must be considered the acme of perfection as regards wholesomeness and efficiency, and I say this having in mind certificates I have given several years ago respecting two other baking powders.

The reasons for the change in my opinion are based on the above facts and the new method adopted to prevent your baking powder from caking and deteriorating in strength.

The Melancholy Days.

Probably everyone who has ever read anything, dolefully quoted "The melancholy days have come," etc., as soon as they hear the first whistle of the wind or note the first scurrying company of dried leaves before a nipping autumn gust. It belongs to this season of the year to make believe you feel depressed and, perhaps, in reality many do; but why should these days be melancholy? Why should they be called the saddest of the year?

If the leaves did not fall we would never enjoy that blissful, keen awakening of nature in the spring, and if the winds did not howl we would never fully appreciate the glorious warmth of an open fire and shady lamp and cozy evenings spent in the company of pleasant people and good books, while all without is cold and drear, the snow piled high up in shifting drifts quite to the doorsill.

To the homemaker autumn and winter means more than the other seasons. They incite the housewife to culinary achievements that will prove most gratifying to the lord and master after he has waded home through storm and sleet to the cozy comfort of his own dining table. The very fixing up of the house for winter brings with it a sense of restful content. As the heavy curtains are hung we fancy how delightful it will be to draw them close together some evening when the raindrops beat hard and fast against the pane and all we love most in the world are shut in within the shelter of the home nest.

After all, life is as we make it. Come winter, come summer, if we but cultivate in our hearts the perpetual greenness of cheerfulness, the sunshine of content, it will not matter whether the skies are blue or gray, the earth covered with a carpet of velvety verdure or a mantle of snow. Think of this when a feeling of loneliness or depression creeps over you and battle it with the weapons that lie always close at hand. What matter if the wind howl if there is no surging tempest of passion in your breast? Life may be to us all the sweetest, best and brightest possession if we only choose to plan it so.—Philadelphia Times.

Actors and lovers have one trait in common. They often "make up" with each other.

ODD GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE.

Some Interesting Statistics Culled From a British Blue Book.

The British government has issued a blue book on the subject of marriage and divorce, giving the laws of various countries, collected by British consuls and intended obviously as a basis for an international agreement on these momentous transactions, says the San Francisco Argonaut. The countries in which divorce laws are in force are France, Great Britain, Germany, Bavaria, Belgium, Denmark, Greece, Russia, Saxony, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the Australian colonies. In most of these countries, as in most of our states, the usual grounds for divorce are adultery, desertion, imprisonment for felony, cruelty and incurable incompatibility. But the latter ground for divorce may not be pleaded in Belgium where the parties have lived together twenty-five years, or where the wife is over 45. In France a woman may get a divorce from her husband if he calls her a canaille before her children, or if he maltreats her mother, or if he refuses to supplement the civil ceremony with a religious ceremony when requested to oblige her to that extent. In Germany a divorce may be granted if one of the parties goes mad, but not if he or she becomes an idiot. In Greece a man may divorce his wife "if she stays out all night," or without his consent, "attends theaters, or sports, or dinners, or, places where men bathe." It is good ground for divorce in Greece that one of the parties to the marriage turns out to be a Jew. In Saxony a divorce may be granted on the ground of change of religion, and in Spain a wife may get a divorce on the ground that her husband is trying to force her to change her religion. In Sweden it would appear that a divorce would be granted on proof that one of the parties had not been vaccinated before marriage. In New South Wales and Victoria a husband may get a divorce from his wife on the ground that she has neglected her domestic duties for three years.

The Blue Book gives these figures, which shows that the United States, which leads the world in most things, leads also in divorce: In 1885 the number of divorces was, in the United States, 13,472; in Switzerland, 920; in Denmark, 635; in France, 6,245; in Germany, 6,161; in Roumania, 541; in Holland, 339; in Austria, 1,172; in Belgium, 290; in Norway and Sweden, 297; in Australia, 95; in Russia, 1,789; in Italy, 556; in Great Britain and Ireland, 508, and in Canada, 12.

POPULAR POSTALCARDS.

Great Britain Has Enough of Them to Belt the Earth Seven Times.

The popularity of the useful postcard is now to be further increased by the recent order which permits us to use private cards with a stamp stuck on them. Let us glance at some postcard facts for the last ten years.

The number of them delivered in the United Kingdom was the stupendous figure of 2,237,000,000. If these pieces of card were spread out flat on the ground and neatly placed, so that they touched each other, leaving no bits of earth visible between the spread-out cards, they would form a huge square measuring nearly eight miles. If they were placed end to end so that each card just touched the next one, the line of them would measure 168,000 miles; i. e., a line which would go round the earth's circumference nearly seven times and have the width of one post-card (3 inches.) The weight of these cards used was 8,910 tons.

And all these tons of post-cards were written and delivered in this country, in addition to 1,817,000,000 letters, 574,000,000 book packets and 165,000,000 newspapers.

At the present time the average for each member of the population of the United Kingdom is 47 letters, 6 1-2 post-cards, 15 book packets or circulars, 4 newspapers, 2 telegrams, 1 1-2 parcels, dispatched by post in one year.—Tid-Bits.

THE GREAT STRIKE

ITS CAUSE ASCERTAINED AND A REMEDY PROPOSED.

The Strike Commission Recommends the Appointment of a Permanent Labor Commission Similar to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—The report of the strike commission to investigate the causes leading up to the recent great railroad strike was made public today. The report is addressed to President Cleveland, who appointed the commission, and it is an exhaustive document, containing about 5,000 words.

The report first takes up the general managers' association, shows that twenty-four roads centering in Chicago combined to "equalize" wages, which meant in many cases a reduction. The report declares that the association has no legal existence, and says that the employes did not combine, and no such order as the A. R. U. was thought of until the railroads combined. If the railroads are to be permitted to combine, then they should not attempt to prevent the employes doing the same thing.

As regards the Pullman company the report shows what enormous profits were made and how wages were reduced but rents were not. The method of operating the town of Pullman is explained, showing that the employes are not, as a rule, well treated. The report says that while the Pullman company claimed that it kept its works running at a loss merely to furnish work for its employes, the facts are that if sought to keep running mainly for its own benefit that its plant might not rust, that its competitors might not invade its territory, that it might keep its cars in repair, that it might be ready for resumption when business revived with a live plant and competent help, and that its revenue from its tenements might continue.

Some slight concession in regard to rents might have prevented the great strike. The Pullman strikers are complimented for their dignified, manly and conservative conduct during the strike, there having been no property destroyed at Pullman.

The report favors arbitration, and says that if the Pullman company and the railroads had shown the slightest disposition to conciliate no lives would have been lost and millions of dollars worth of property would not have been destroyed. The commission says that there was no evidence that the officers of the A. R. U. participated in or advised intimidation, violence or destruction of property.

The calling of troops to Chicago was opportune. It was shown that the militia in many cases sympathized with the strikers, and the commission thinks that the time will come when the militia must be recruited from other than labor classes.

The real responsibility for the disorders rests with the people and with the government for not adequately controlling monopolies and corporations, and for failing reasonably to protect the rights of labor and redress its wrongs. Labor unions have come to stay, and "is it not wise to fully recognize them by law; to admit of their necessity as labor guides and protectors, to conceive their usefulness, increase their responsibility and to prevent their follies and aggressions by conferring upon them the privilege enjoyed by corporations, with like proper restrictions?"

The Recommendations.

The commission therefore recommends:

That there be a permanent United States strike commission of three members with duties and powers of investigation and recommendation as to disputes between railways and their employes similar to those vested in the interstate commerce commission as to rates, etc.

That, as an interstate commerce act power be given to the United States court to compel railways to obey the decisions of the commission after summary hearing until attended by technicalities, and that no delays in obeying the decisions of the commission be allowed pending appeals.

That whenever the parties to a controversy in a matter within the jurisdiction of the commission are one or more railroads on a side, and one or more national trade unions incorporated under charter 567 of the United States statutes of 1885-6, or under state statutes, upon the other, each side shall have the right to select a representative who shall be appointed by the president to serve as a temporary member of the commission in hearing, adjusting and determining that particular controversy.

(This provision would make it for the interest of labor organizations to incorporate under the law and to make the commission a practical board of conciliation. It would also tend to create confidence in the commission and to give to that body in every hearing the benefit of practical knowledge of the situation on both sides.)

That during the pendency of a proceeding before the commission inaugurated by national trades unions or by an incorporation of employes it shall not be lawful for the railroads to discharge employes belonging thereto except for inefficiency, violation of law or neglect of duty; nor for such unions during such pendency to order, unite in a, or aid or abet strikes or boycotts against the railways complained of; nor for a period of six months after a decision, for such railroads to discharge any such employes in whose places others shall be employed, except for the causes aforesaid; nor for any such employes during a like period, to quit the service without giving thirty days' written notice of intention to do so, nor for any such union or incorporation to order, counsel or advise otherwise.

That chapter 567 of the United States statutes of 1885-6 be amended so as to require national trades unions to provide in their articles of incorporation and in their constitutions rules and by-laws that a member shall cease to be such and forfeit all rights and privileges conferred on him by law as such by participating in, or by instigating force or violence against persons or property during strikes or boycotts or by seeking to prevent others from working through violence, threats or intimidation; also that members shall be no more personally liable for corporate acts than are stockholders in corporations.

The commission does not feel warranted with the study it has been able to give the subject, to recommend positively the establishment of a license system by which all the higher employes or others of railways engaged in interstate commerce should be licensed after due and proper examination, but it would recommend, and most urgently, that this subject be carefully considered by the proper committee of congress. Many railway employes and some railway officials examined, and many others who filed their suggestions in writing are in favor of some such system.

The commission would suggest the consideration by the states of the adoption of some system of conciliation and arbitration like that, for instance, in Massachusetts. That system might be re-enforced by additional provisions giving the board of arbitration more power to investigate all strikes, whether requested to do so or not, and the question might be considered as to giving labor organizations a standing before the law, as heretofore suggested for national trade unions.

Contracts requiring men to agree not to join labor organizations, or to leave them, on conditions of employment, should be made illegal, as is already done in some of our states.

The commission urges employers to recognize labor organizations; that such organizations be dealt with through representatives with special reference to conciliation and arbitration when differences are threatened to arise. It is satisfied that employers should come in closer touch with labor and should recognize that while the interests of capital and labor are not identical they are reciprocal.

The commission is satisfied that if employers everywhere will endeavor to act in concert with labor; that if when wages can be raised under economic conditions, they be raised voluntarily, and if when there are reductions reasons be given for the reduction, much friction thus being avoided. It is also satisfied that if employers will consider employes as thoroughly essential to industrial success as capital, and thus take labor into consultation at proper times, much of the severity of strikes can be tempered and their number reduced.

THE ST. LOUIS.

The American Line Steamer Is Successfully Launched.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Shortly after 1 o'clock the magnificent steamship St. Louis, of the American line, was successfully launched at Cramp's ship yard. The affair was witnessed by fully 50,000 people. Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, broke the traditional bottle of champagne on the bow of the noble ship as it glided down the ways, at the same time uttering these words: "I christen thee St. Louis."

After the launch the invited guests to the number of 100 were entertained at lunch in the office of the shipbuilders. Charles H. Carmp, in his speech of welcome to President Cleveland, said that, with two exceptions, the St. Louis is the largest and most powerful ship in the world. He referred to the progress of shipbuilding under the Cleveland administration, and credited to his policy the fact that such wonderful results have been accomplished in America. The St. Louis, he said, is built on American plans, by American workmen and of American material. Twenty-six ships were recommended by Mr. Cleveland and authorized by congress. Concluding, he said that while there may be honest difference on other questions, notional approval of Mr. Cleveland's vigorous and patriotic naval policy will always be unanimous.

The president said it afforded him great satisfaction to be able to assist in the great work of creating an American navy and at the same time stimulate American shipbuilding. We must not forget that our greatest cause of congratulation is found in the hope and promise these incidents furnish of the revival and development of American commerce and the renewed appearance of the American flag in foreign ports.

The "Sea-Going Admiral" Is Placed on the Retired List.

Washington, Special.—To-day there was placed on the retired list the commandant of the New York navy yard, Admiral Bancroft Cherardi, one of the few old war commanders now in the naval service, and known in naval parlance as the "Sea-Going Admiral."

He leaves behind him a career of distinction, full of hard fighting and severe service, and without a blemish. His total active service amounts to forty-eight years and five months, and twenty-five years and eight months of that service were spent at sea. Even during the seven years he has held the rank of rear admiral in a time when few admirals make more than one cruise under their own pennant, he has been at sea about four and a half years.

Admiral Cherardi was born in Louisiana sixty-two years ago, and was appointed to the naval service from Massachusetts June 29, 1846, as midshipman. He became a passed midshipman in 1852, a master in 1855, and was made a lieutenant on the Lancaster, attached to the Pacific squadron when the war broke out. The year 1862 saw him a lieutenant commander, blockading the South Atlantic ports, notwithstanding his Southern birth. From that time to the end of the war he was in the thickest of the fighting.

How He Got It.

"Not long ago I was regaled with the tale of a man who had become a colonel by a novel method.

"'Were you in the militia of your state?' some one asked of him.

"'No, sah,' the proud son of the Blue Grass replied.

"'Then,' continued the questioner, 'I suppose you were a battler for the cause that was lost?'

"'You are wrong again, sah,' the colonel answered.

"'Then,' resumed the man who wanted to know, 'will you please let me know how you became a colonel?'

"'Suhtenly, sah. I married the widow of the late an'lamented Colonel Ruthford, sah.'"

At the Present Age.

It is true that women demand more of men at the present time than our grandmothers and even our mothers did. Once it was enough to be a man. Now he must be a deserving one, and back it up with a fair show of brains and enterprise, or else the modern girl can get along very well without him. Women reason now where once they blindly trusted. The modern wife exacts less in trivial ways. She expects to be granted in suitable ways the same liberty her husband enjoys. She is his companion, not his toy nor his slave. Men talk of affairs of women now, where they used to speak only gallant words.

A Woman's Argument.

He—You women have no right to the ballot for the simple reason that in case of a war you would not be able to fight.

She—Then why do you allow a man who is crippled to vote?

He—Why—er—if that isn't just like a woman to ask some such fool question as that.—Indianapolis Journal.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. The Ascent of Woman.

Prof. Drummond, whose "Ascent of Man" has been attracting so much attention, is also a believer in the ascent of woman. In a speech at Haddo house, Lord Aberdeen's place, the other day, he remarked that "woman had been put through a marvelous discipline during the long night of history to teach her the virtues of unselfishness, tenderness, patience, compassion and love, so that she might become the teacher of the world; and it was quite certain, by all the laws of science and all the traditions of the world's past, that the great factor in the future evolution of society must be the ascent of woman."—Westminster Budget.

Horse sense is a pretty good thing to have at times. It teaches a fellow to say neigh.

Capturing Wild Bees.

The bees and brood from bee trees are often saved. If the swarm is not too high up, a ladder may be put up, and a piece of the wood taken out in front of the bees by boring a line of auger holes around the piece that is to be removed. Sometimes a scaffold is built against the side of the tree, and an axe or saw used in cutting in to the bees. Sometimes "climbers" are used to reach the bees if they are pretty high up, but this is dangerous work. Usually it is better to fell the tree, taking care to have it strike smaller trees and thus break the fall as much as possible. When the bees are reached the combs should be cut out, one by one, and fastened into the frames of a moveable comb hive. They may be tied in, or small sticks may be tacked across on each side. The bees should be brushed off at the entrance of the hive, and as soon as there is a comb containing brood placed in the hive they will begin clustering on the brood. If there are many bees remaining in the cavity or flying about after the combs are removed, it is well to place the entrance of the hive as near the cavity as possible and leave it there several hours—possibly all night—by which time nearly all of the bees will have entered the hive, when it may be carried home. If no honey is coming in the bees should be fed a few days until the combs are securely fastened, when the sticks and strings may be removed. No harm will result from placing the captured one by the side of the one already in the yard.

Useful Sick-Room Invention.

A simple apparatus called the "menotherm," has been devised by applying steady and continuous heat to any part of the surface of the body where it is required for medical purposes. It consists of a flat rubber pad connected to a small copper cylinder or heater by two rubber tubes, the whole being filled with water and hermetically sealed. In use, the cylinder is placed in a can of water over a lamp. The water in the cylinder is thus heated and caused to circulate through the pad, the temperature being regulated by the height of the lamp flame.—Westminster Budget.

CARNIVAL OF BLOOD

CHRISTIANS ARE SLAUGHTERED BY THOUSANDS IN ARMENIA.

From Six to Ten Thousand Persons, Including Women and Children, Are Butchered by Soldiers Acting Under Orders From Constantinople.

London, Nov. 18.—The chairman of the Armenian Patriotic association, G. Hagopin, has sent the following letter, received from an Armenian whose name is not given because it would jeopardize his life, to the earl of Kimberly, the secretary of state for foreign affairs. The letter is accompanied by one from Hagopin in which he says:

"I have no reason to doubt the authenticity of the details. They will be borne out by fuller official reports which have been or will soon be received from the British agents in Armenia. The events reported are the re-enactment of the Bulgarian atrocities with all their most sickening details of fiendish lust and atrocious cruelty on unarmed Christians and defenseless, innocent women and children, deliberately planned and ruthlessly executed under orders received from Constantinople."

Hagopian concludes by saying that the time has come to abolish in toto the existing administration of Armenia and replace it by another regime approved by Great Britain and other signatories of the treaties of Berlin and worked under their immediate supervision.

The letter of the Armenian thus prefaced is dated Bitlis, Oct. 9. After saying that the chief magnate appears to be a second Nero, the writer continues:

"The so-called rebellion of the Armenians in 1893 was a got-up affair for the repression of which the chief magnate got a decoration. This year the Kurds carried off Armenian oxen and the Armenians' appeal for their restoration was refused. A fight ensued. Two Kurds were killed and three were wounded. The Kurds immediately carried their dead before the governor, declaring that the Armenians had overrun the land, killing and plundering the Kurds.

"This furnished a pretext for massing the troops from far and near. The troops were commanded by a pasha and a marshal and were hurried to the district. The pasha is said to have hung from his breast, after reading it to his soldiers, an order from Constantinople to cut the Armenians up root and branch, and abjuring them to do so if they loved their king and their government.

"Nearly all these things were related here and there by soldiers who took part in the horrible carnage. Some of them weeping, claim that the Kurds did more and declare that they only obeyed the orders of others.

"It is said that 100 fell to each of them to dispose of. No compassion was shown to age or sex even by the regular soldiers, not even when the victims fell suppliant at their feet.

"Six to ten thousand persons met such a fate as even the darkest ages of darkened Africa hardly witness, for there women and tender babes might at least have had a chance of a life of slavery, while here womanhood and innocency were but a mockery before the cruel lust that ended its debauch by stabbing women to death with the bayonet, while tender babes were impaled with the same weapon on their dead mother's breasts or, perhaps, seized by the hair to have their heads lopped off with the sword.

"In one place 300 or 400 women, after being forced to serve vile purposes by the merciless soldiers, were hacked to pieces by sword and bayonet in the valley below. In another place some 200 weeping and wailing women begged for compassion, falling at the commander's feet, but the bloodthirsty wretch, after ordering their violation, directed his soldiers to dispatch them in a similar way. In another place some sixty young brides and the more attractive girls were crowded into a church, and after violation were slaughtered and human gore was seen flowing from the church door.

"At another place still, a large company under the lead of their priest, fell down before them, begging for compassion and averring that they had nothing to do with the culprits. But all to no purpose. All were called to another place and the proposal was made to several of the more attractive women to change their faith, in which case their lives were to be spared. They said: 'Why should we deny Christ? We are no more than these'—pointing to the mangled forms of their husbands and brothers—'kill us too,' and they did so."

Another letter says that some of the regular soldiers themselves admit that they killed 100 persons each in a fiendish manner, and that rape was followed by the bayonet. Twenty or thirty Armenian villages, it would seem, have been wholly destroyed and some persons were burned to death with kerosene in their own houses.

It Cures Consumption.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—(Special)—Depositions taken here in the case of Dr. Amick vs. Reeves develop some remarkable facts. It was shown that the Amick Chemical company of this city has supplied forty thousand doctors with Dr. Amick's chemical treatment for consumption, as much as one thousand dollars' worth of sample medicines being distributed daily. Each patient receives a trial outfit and an inhaler. The company offered as evidence its files containing thousands of reports from physicians of cures covering every stage and phase of the disease.

KILLED FOR MONEY.

A Wealthy Farmer Near Morton, Minn., is Killed.

Morton, Minn., Nov. 16.—Emmanuel Otto, an aged and wealthy farmer residing a quarter of a mile north of here, was found dead in a room of his residence late yesterday afternoon. There was a bullet hole in his left side and another bullet had passed into his ear. No revolver could be found in the house, and the case is evidently one of murder.

He lived alone with his aged wife, and when the murder occurred she was in Morton making some purchases. He was evidently taking a nap at the time, as he was found by his wife lying on a bed with his vest, trousers and boots on. The body was still warm. A coroner's inquest is being held to-day.

Otto was said to be worth $50,000. In an iron chest in his house were found $40 in cash, $450 in bank certificates, and deeds, mortgages and notes. The key to the chest had been taken from his pocket and the chest opened, but the murderer did not take all the money for some reason. No clue has yet been found. A post mortem reveals the fact that one bullet passed clear through his body and the other lodged under his ear. They were of 38 caliber.

Otto had several children, all grown up and living on farms purchased for them by their father, who also constructed residences and barns for his children.

HARMONIOUS ACTION.

President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The attention of the president was called to-day to the statement contained in certain newspapers to the effect that there had been a disagreement between him and Mr. Carlisle in regard to the issue of bonds and other matters, and intimating that such disagreement might result in the secretary's retirement from the cabinet. The president emphatically denied the entire "batch of silly misstatements," and said:

"Never since our association together has there been the slightest unpleasantness or difference concerning the affairs of the treasury department or any other matter. I have every reason to believe that his attachment to me is as sincere and great as mine is for him. I should be much pained if anything should cause him to entertain the thought of giving up his position, where he is doing so much for the country. We have agreed exactly as to the issue of bonds, and there has been no backwardness on his part on that subject. I see it is said that I am formulating a financial scheme. If such a scheme is presented it will be the work of the secretary of the treasury, and I shall endorse and support it. The trouble seems to be that those charged with the executive duties of the government do not appear willing at all times to take counsel of the newspapers and make public all they intend to do."

OPPOSED TO DYING.

Col. Colt Does Not Care to Furnish Amusement for Lynchers.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 16. — Great events are now brewing at Washington Court House. Col. Colt declines, by advice of his attorney, to go to Fayette county to be examined as a witness by the coroner concerning the part of the Fourteenth Ohio national guards took in obedience to the orders of Gov. McKinley to assist Sheriff Cook in protecting Dolby, a negro, who confessed to rape and who had been sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. In giving that protection four persons were killed and about a dozen wounded by the military firing upon the mob when it had broken open the doors of the court house to get at the negro. Col. Colt's attorneys, Hon. George K. Nash and J. A. Booth, assures the court that Colt's life would be placed in jeopardy by going. The coroner declines to come to Columbus to take Colt's deposition, and insists that he go there. On account of injury to their business leading law-abiding citizens of Washington Court House have assured the governor privately that if Col. Colt would go there he and Sheriff Cook would be thrown into jail on a charge of murder, and the coroner would become sheriff ex-officio, and men whose friends had been killed would ride the county and gather a mob and both Colt and Cook, especially Colt, would be dragged from the jail and lynched. Gov. McKinley has assured Col. Colt that if he was to go and harm were offered, the whole power of the state and nation, if necessary, would be sent to his support. Col. Colt's reply to this is: "What good would that do my wife and family after I had been jailed or lynched?" There the matter rests for the present.

MANY PEOPLE KILLED

BY EARTHQUAKES IN SICILY AND SOUTHERN ITALY.

Seventeen Communes Suffer From the Disturbances—In One Village Alone Sixty of the Inhabitants Are Crushed to Death.

Rome, Nov. 20.—Earthquakes have occurred in Sicily and Southern Italy. The Province of Reggio di Calabria suffered the severest damage by the seismic disturbances. Little damage was done in Reggio, the capital of the province, but there was great loss of life and much damage to property elsewhere in the province. Seventeen communes were involved in the disturbance, the centers of which were in the vicinity of Palmi, twenty-one miles northeast of Reggio and Bagnara, on the Gulf of Gioja, almost directly opposite Punta del Faro, Sicily. The village of San Procopio, near Palmi, was almost entirely destroyed. Here sixty persons were killed. Forty-seven of these met their death in a church to which they fled for refuge. Their bodies are still in the ruins. At Bagnara seven persons were killed. Eight lost their lives at Mamerlino and San Eufema, being crushed to death, while many others were injured. The inhabitants of these places are obliged to camp in the open air. Prime Minister Crispi has sent a large sum of money for the relief of the sufferers and has placed two vessels at the disposal of the prefect of Bagnara. In the Calabrian towns of Triparni and Mileto many houses were destroyed and a number of persons injured. Much damage was also done in the adjacent Province of Catanzaro. The residents of Messina were in a condition of panic last night. They were in great fear of a renewal of the shocks and passed the night camped out in the squares of the city, in railway carriages and on board vessels lying in the harbor. The panic has lessened to-day, and in some instances the work of repairing damaged buildings has already commenced.

Large electric lights have been erected to illuminate the channel until the light house, destroyed by the earthquakes, shall have been rebuilt.

Renewed shocks were felt yesterday and to-day at Milazze, eighteen miles west of Messina. So severe were the movements of the earth that great seams appeared in the walls of many houses. The inhabitants of this place are still badly frightened and remain camped in the open streets and spaces fearing to return to their homes. No further shocks have been reported from other places.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

Probable Chairmen of the More Important Committees.

Washington, Nov. 20. — The house committees which are expected to be of the greatest importance in the next congress are those on the ways and means, appropriations, rules, banking and currency, coinage, weights and measures, rivers and harbors, and public buildings and grounds. The first three named always head the list in order of importance. The others are expected to assume importance in the next congress because of the especial conditions which will prevail during that congress.

The banking committee will certainly be one of the most important committees in the entire list, if there should be an effort, as is hinted there may be, to revise the currency laws, and change the present system. Such legislation as this would lift the committees dealing with it from its present place of insignificance and place it for the time alongside the ways and means committee. The probability of an effort to secure silver legislation, and the probability that the Republican party when it comes into power in the house will want to formulate a policy in this question, will have the effect also of advancing the coinage committee to a position of first rank.

If Mr. Reed is elected speaker and the seniority rule is followed, Mr. Hermann of Oregon will become chairman of the rivers and harbors, Milliken of Maine the public buildings, Walker of Massachusetts the banking and currency and Burrows of Michigan the ways and means.

FLOUR MILLS SILENT

A Majority of Those in St. Louis Close for an Indefinite Period.

St. Louis, Nov. 20.—The majority of the large flouring mills in St. Louis have closed down for an indefinite period. This course is made necessary, the millers claim, because of the congestion of the market, and more especially by the advanced freight rate to the Eastern seaboard of about 22 cents a barrel. This action of the St. Louis millers is entirely independent of the action of the Northwestern millers at Chicago, whereby a shut-down of six weeks during the three months beginning Dec. 10, was decided upon.

Chicago, Nov. 20. — The executive committee of the winter wheat association, which embraces most of the merchant millers in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Eastern Illinois, ratified the suggestion of the millers' conference on Friday to shut down production for six weeks during the next three months, and instructed the secretary to secure the signatures of the members of the association to the agreement to suspend during the period suggested.

When Will the Czar Marry?

St. Petersburg, Nov. 20.—It is officially announced that the wedding of the czar and Princess Alix will take place Nov. 23.

Four officers who have been attached to the headquarters of the department of the Missouri during the last four years will be members of Gen. Miles' official family at Governor's Island. They are Captains E. L. Huggins, Marion P. Maus and Francis Michlar, his aides-de-camp, and Capt. James Allen, the chief signal officer of this department.

SHOT BY ROBBERS.

An Attempt to Hold up a Train in Mississippi

Washington, Nov. 20.—Democratic senators who are at present in the city decline almost without exception to discuss the probable plans of the Democratic leaders in the senate with reference to the supplemental tariff bills at the forthcoming short session of congress. The majority of them are content with saying that they have had no opportunity for party conference, and that they do not wish to, at this time, express personal opinions. It would seem probable from this that a general Democratic conference among the party members in the senate is among the strong probabilities soon after the convening of the next session for the purpose of determining of this point. It is, of course, well remembered that a faction of the Democratic side of the chamber is opposed to any further efforts at tariff legislation by the present congress, and it is thought possible that the result of the late elections may have influenced others to take this view. Senator Voorhees, chairman of the senate committee on finance, declines to talk for publication on all subjects connected with congress or politics. Senator Harris, also a Democratic member of this committee, contented himself with referring an Associated Press reporter who accosted him on this subject, to his remarks upon the point before the adjournment of the last session. It is recalled that he then announced his purpose of trying to get the supplemental bills up at the earliest opportunity in the short session.

AS TO ALASKA.

Gov. James Sheakley Makes His Annual Report.

Washington, Nov. 20. — James Sheakley, governor of Alaska has submitted his annual report to the secretary of the interior of the general conditions of the territory. He says:

Notwithstanding the unfavorable climatic conditions of the spring and early summer months, many new enterprises were entered upon and old ones completed. The fisheries have been successful, the mines have yielded profitable returns, the population has been largely augmented by immigration, and the people have enjoyed a season of unusual progress and prosperity. The civil officers have been vigilant and faithfull in the discharge of their duties, and in view of the extent of the territory over which they exercise authority and the absence of transportation and other facilities indispensible for the execution of the law, crime is less frequent and law and order quite as well enforced as in some of the more densely populated and highly civilized communities.

South Dakota Leads.

Cleveland, Nov. 20. — The evening session of the W. C. T. U. was given over to the young women's branch of the union, Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, the general secretary of the Y's, presiding. Reports were received as follows: The middle states, Miss Parish, national Y organizer; Southern states, Miss Carter, national Y organizer. Miss Willard said a few words of commendation and counsel. Mr. John Willis Baer of Boston, general secretary of the International Christian Endeavor society, greeted the Y's on behalf of his organization in a speech. A few incidental remarks followed from Miss Belle Kearney, a national Y organizer. Miss Jennie A. Stewart, editress of Young Women, followed with an address upon typical young women. Salutations from the Y's of South Africa were extended by Miss Anna M. Cummings, colonial secretary at Cape Colony. The evening closed with the presentation of the national Y banner to South Dakota for the largest percentage of gain in membership since the last convention.

Suicide of a Young Burglar.

Milwaukee, Nov. 20.—Fearing arrest for participation in a burglary in which one of his companions had been caught in the act, Thomas P. Bell, aged seventeen, committed suicide at the home of his parents by shooting himself.

Elevator Burned.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 20.—The St. Anthony and Dakota elevator at Beltrami was burned. It contained 30,000 bushels of wheat. The loss is reported as total.

FORESTS ARE AFLAME

TERRIBLE FIRES IN THE MOUNTAINS OF COLORADO.

Several Mining Camps Have Been Destroyed and a Number of Others Are in Danger—The Loss Thus Far Is Over $2,000,000.

Boulder, Colo., Nov. 17.—Fire in a saw mill west of the mining camp of Ward, starting last night, spread to the timber and has been doing great damage, and this morning caused intense excitement here by reason of sensational reports to the effect that the mining camps of Ward and Gold Hill had been burned to the ground. Ward, however, did not suffer, but Gold Hill was burned. Gold Hill, having a population of 500, is situated fourteen miles west of Boulder, and Ward, with a population of 1,000, is five miles further on.

The fire started just west of Ward in the heavily timbered districts. The inhabitants were alarmed early in the evening by dense clouds of smoke settling down on the camp. The fire spread through through the dry pine timber with terrible rapidity, and settlers along its path were forced to leave their homes to burn and get into the camps. The fire burning on the outskirts of Ward advanced toward Gold Hill and swept over an area of about eight miles. The fire is speeding toward Copper Creek, and it is believed many small camps will be burned.

The residents of Gold Hill who have not come to Boulder have assembled on the top of Horsefelt mountain and are watching the progress of the fire. The wind is blowing furiously and drives the fire before it in large sheets of flame.

The property loss cannot at present be told, but it will amount to over $2,000,000. There will necessarily be great distress. The fire is spreading along to the left and in the direction of Sunshine. Sunshine is two miles from Gold Hill. Among the important mines at Gold Hill for which fears are expressed are the Allmackee and Cash Beerkin. A courier reports the destruction of about one-half of the property of Camp Talcott and the Prussian mine and mill. The timber around Gold lake has been swept bare by the flames.

Drugged and Starved.

New York, Nov. 17.—The World to-morrow will say: John W. Clift, the man who was drugged, robbed, starved and imprisoned for three weeks in the Vandyke house, a hotel in the Bowery, has brought two suits against Thomas Flynn, the proprietor of the hotel. One is to recover the money, $241, the watch and chain and shoes, in all about $268. And the other is for $20,000 damages for inhuman treatment inflicted. Clift is a traveling salesman from Philadelphia. He came here in September, and, after doing the town, found his way to the Vandyke house. To pay for his welcome he bought a drink of whisky. After that he remembers nothing till he came to himself in a hospital three weeks later, emanciated, bruised starved and a nervous wreck.

O. K. at Bluefields.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Dr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan minister here, has received reports from Bluefields which are very gratifying to him and to our government as indicating a most satisfactory settlement of the troubles which have for so many months afflicted the Mosquito reservation. On Sept. 29 last the new constitution was proclaimed, firmly asserting Nicaraguan supremacy there, and Cabez as the first constitutional governor was formally installed in office. All signs of opposition had disappeared and the American residents voluntarily gave their adhesion to the new government and assisted in its initiation.

CASE OF ESPIONAGE.

Sensation in the War Department of France.

Paris, Nov. 17.—In consequence of the instructions of the minister of war, Gen. Mercier, an inquiry has been commenced into a serious case of espionage. Three arrests have already been made in this connection. The prisoners include two Germans, Schoenbeck and Von Cassel, who are believed to be officers in the German reserve. The third person is a Frenchman whose name has not been given. Searches made at the residences of the prisoners resulted in the discovery of incriminating documents. These three arrests have revealed an extensive espionage plot, and it appears that the documents found at the residences of the prisoners are of great importance. Two women who are said to be the mistresses of the Germans arrested, were also taken into custody, but after their lodgings had been searched without anything of importance being found they were released. It is reported that other arrests will soon be made.

FATAL STORMS.

A Number of Lives Are Lost in England and France.

London, Nov. 17.—Stormy weather and floods continue to prevail over the south part of England, and the loss of life and damage to property is increasing greatly. At Bath, Somersetshire, the River Avon has reached the highest point of the century. Thousands of people are homeless and are being fed by the authorities in various schools and other public buildings.

A special dispatch from Paris says: This city has been visited by a terrible storm. The velocity of the wind was so great that the anaemometers on the Rifle tower and St. Jacques' tower were unable to register it.

Gold for America.

New York, Nov. 17.—A London cablegram to the Evening Post says of the gold exported to-day 200,000 pounds is for America. This is a special operation, believed to be required by American bankers tendering for the new loan.

Killed a Deer With Clubs.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 17.—Two boys aged about sixteen, from Tremont, killed a deer yesterday. Dogs chased it into a stable, when the boys shut it in and killed it with clubs.

An extra train came up last Monday with a load of empty cars going back late at night with a heavy load of wheat

Business has been very good the past week and collections are also good. The town is full of teams nearly every day and the stores are crowded.

We are in receipt of a letter from J, M. Hanson formerly of this place but now of Park Rapids. Mr. Hanson is farming near there and reports that he is doing well.

We have been asked to call the attention of parents to the fact that many children are fooling around the railroad track while the train is here, altogether too much. If this is not stopped there will be an accident some of these days.

M. E, SOCIAL.

Next Friday evening at the M. E. Church the ladies will give an old fashioned New England Supper and auction off some fancy work. All are cordially invited to attend.

The St. Anthony & Dakota elevator was the only place in town that was not blockaded with wheat. Holmes, Marshall & Johnson and Eickhoff had their houses filled to the roof but a long string of cars on Monday made things easier,

Our wheat war is still on and wheat is coming in livlier than ever 51 cents is pa'd for no. 1 hard and all grain that comes in gets that grade with only one pound dockage. This makes about four cents more than the price paid in other places.

Nearly every kind of merchandise has been reduced in price the past year and a dollar will buy much more this year than last. Our merchants are selling on a much closer margin than formerly and their increased trade shows that it is appreciated. At present St. Hilaire is an excellent place to trade and cash customers can drive better bargains here than at almost any place in the country,

A great deal of unhappiness is caused by people who pry into the affairs of others and who maliciously repeat and enlarge upon little scraps of information they receive concerning the private affairs of friends and neighbors. These people are particularly formidable because their mode of speech bears the stamp of sincerity. They usually approach the subject in a hesitating, round about way, as if loth to give expression to words that can hardly fail to injure the character of those whose absence renders them defenceless, it is not a part of their policy to give the maligned party the shadow of a chance to trace the unfriendly and oftimes vicious accusations that are so blighting in their effects upon a sensitive nature.—Ex.

The newspapers of the state are having plenty of fun since election bringing out republican candidates for U. S. Senator' Up to date something over two hundred men have been mentioned as probable candidates who could defeat Senator Washburn. If any of the SPECTATOR's subscribers are desirous of notoriety of this kind we can launch them in a proper manner for the modest sum of $1.18 all cash.

The vote of Polk county has passed a final examination at the hands of the canvassers and shows an increas over any preceding election. The vote of 1890 was 5,895 in 1892 5,935 votes were cast and this year 6,975 votes were cast and counted, and this too, notwithstanding that Crookston's vote was short 200 of the usual number. This indicates a healthy growth for the county even though the climate is cold and the times are hard.— Crookston Times.

It seems that the citizens of Thief River Falls were rather previous in the jollification last Friday over the ratification of the Jones lease as the Assistant secretary of the Interior has recalled the lease and it will come before the Secretary when he returns. A friend of the Meehans, a congressman from Wisconsin, is responsible for the hold up and it may be possible for the other side to hold a jolly meeting in the future.

It is a well known fact that girls of a marriageable age or older, especially the latter, do not care to tell how old they really are but you can find out if you will follow the subjoined rules, allowing the yong lady to do the figuring to suit herself: First, tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then to multiply by 2. add 5, multiply by 50, then add to her age, then to subtract 365. Next have her add 115 and then tell the total amount left. In this grand total the two figures to the left will tell you her age and the other the month of her birth. For example, if the amount is 822, she is 22 years of age and was born in August—the eighth month.

The Kansas Man's Awful Premonition.

"Who will take care of the babies when the women have their rights?" some one asks. Their won't be any babies.—Atchison Globe,

Didn't we mistake to load our platform with "Woman's suffrage?" What did we get for the prejudice we encountered by it? Did any of the women help us? Did they not slaughter Populist ticket in Colorado and Kansas?

The liquor plank also cost us 10,000 votes. Did it bring us any support? Did not the temperance people run their state ticket anyhow? Would they not have done so if we had adopted a plank for protection and in favor of hanging the saloon men?

Will it be wise hereafter to load our wagon with everybody else's baggage? Hadn't we better go it alone?—Representative.

Waseka Herald: Of course election is over but here is a significant statement faom Hon C.A. Pillsbury in an interview last week: "I think the Republicans will elect a majority in the next house of congress; but that will not put them into power. I doubt very much whether the elections two years from now will be Republican. I am not so much afraid of the Democratic party as I am of the Populist party. I think the rock upon which Republican party is in the greatest danger of splitting is is that a tremendous effort will be made to repeal the pooling clause of the inter state commerce bill. I fear that a great many congressmen are already pledged to vote for this ,and in fact enough to put it through congress;but they begged off, not to have the vote taken so as as to put them on record untill after the coming election. Whether the pooling clause ought to be repealed or not might be a matter of discussion but as a political measure I believe it will bury any party, a large portion of whose members vote for the bill. I am inclined to think that a majority of Democrats in the house and a majority of Republican in the senate are going to support the bill In this case you can look out for a Populist vote about two-years from now which will far surpass this one"—There is one universal shout going up from the daily press of the country that the people have buried the parties out of sight. What bosh and nonsence. All that has been accomplished is that the money railroad and other corporation combines have transferred their influence from the state and national democratic machine to the state and national republican machine. But mark you well that in this transfer of voters from one of the old plutocratic parties to the other, the reform parties both the prohibitionists and peoples party, have made very large gains, The fact that the corporation ring democrats went over to the support of Knute Nelson goes to prove what all well informed politicians have known all along—namely that there is no difference in the old parties—they both belong to the same money powers of Europe and America. And the same is true of all the states.— Representative.

Progressive age: The peoples party has been able in Minnesota to force the union of republicans and democrats. The old lines of political battle were obliterated and new lines drawn. If the peoples party never did anything else it has achieved a worthy immortality. This fact assures us of substantial progress.—Populism dead! In Minnesota? The populists began the 1896 campaign last Wednesday morning before the election returns were in. Our triumphant contemporaries, who stampeded us out of court will find us ready to offer steel at the next opportunity.—The People's party is formulated upon the protest against monopoly. This makes it a party of national issues. No other political party is so favored as the People,s party in this respect. It represents the principle of protest common to all civilizations at the present time. Its destinly is assured, and its mission will not be performed until the republic is free from the danger of the anarchism of wealth.

TRUSTS AND MONOPOLIES CREATED BY TRANSPORTATION BARONS.

A People's Party View of the Iniquity of Private Ownership of Railways—Extract From an Address Made by a Populist to an Elite Eastern Club.

On the evening of Friday, Oct. 26, there was a debate upon "Populism" before the Outlook club of Montclair, N. J. This is considered one of the most aristocratic clubs of the metropolitan district, its membership containing many of the prominent bankers and business men of New York city. The disputants were Joseph R. Buchanan for Populism, and Starr J. Murphy, a leading criminal lawyer, against. Admission to the clubhouse was by invitation, and about 500 ladies and gentlemen were present. It was the general verdict that while Mr. Murphy delivered an entertaining and amusing address Mr. Buchanan undoubtedly had the best of the argument. Following is the substance of what Mr. Buchanan said in his opening remarks upon the transportation question:

The People's Party platform declares that the government should own and operate the railways and telegraphs because they are public necessities as instruments of exchange. They, with the money and postal service, comprise the essential factors in commerce. The transmission of intelligence, the transportation of commodities and the discharge of financial obligations are commerce, and congress—the government—is given power under the constitution to regulate commerce. How can the government regulate commerce unless it controls? That it cannot control while three of the principal agents of commerce are absolutely within the possession of private individuals is clearly shown by our experience up to the present time.

All attempts to control railways by commissions created by congress and state legislatures for the purpose of fixing schedules of rates and tolls have failed when contested and will continue to fail for the reason that the courts, federal and state, have by injunction restrained the powers of such commissions to enforce their schedules when the companies were able to show that they must have higher rates to pay interest on debts, operating expenses and a fair dividend on capital stock, and these three absorbers of railway earnings are absolutely subject to the manipulation of the companies. Capital stock and bonds, not to mention the operating expense account, can be increased at the pleasure of the owners. So it comes at the final analysis to taking "all the traffic will bear." In a word, it is absurd to talk of joining two such palpable inconsistencies as private ownership and public control.

According to "Poor's Manual," the railroad trackage in the United States at the close of 1893 was 177,753 miles. The increase during the year 1893 was 2,549 miles. The capital stock of the companies owning these roads was $5,080,032,904; funded debt, $5,570,292,613; unfunded debt, $410,261,503; current debt, $383,201,872; total liabilities, $11,443,888,892. The assets were: Cost of railroads and equipment, $9,661,713,736; real estate, stocks, bonds and other investments, $1,698,306,963; current accounts, $247,002,310; other assets, $248,945,157; total assets, $11,855,968,166.

Earnings for the fiscal year 1893 were as follows:

Passenger	[illegible]
Freight	[illegible]
Other	[illegible]
Elevated railroads	[illegible]
Total traffic revenue	$1,122,[illegible]
Operating expenses	[illegible]
Net earnings	$364,591,109
Other receipts, including rentals received by lessor companies	111,288,932
Total available revenue	$475,880,041

Taking stocks and bonds, it will be seen that the roads are capitalized at $10,650,325,517, or at the rate of $60,706 per mile. It is a liberal estimate to allow that $30,000 per mile average rate represents every dollar actually invested, leaving the amount of $5,387,095,517 to represent the water which has been added by our great railway kings, of whom Jay Gould, Jim Fisk and "Napoleon" Ives were fair representatives. This is one of the greatest frauds ever perpetrated upon a people since time began. The net earnings of railroads for 1893, amounting, according to "Poor's Manual," to $475,880,041, represent a net profit of 4.46 per cent on the total capitalization of 10,650,325,517—that is to say, the traffic in 1893, a presumably dull year, was made to bear enough to pay a profit of 4.46 per cent on $5,387,095,517 of water. In round numbers this interest upon water amounted to $230,000,000, or about $15 for every adult male citizen.

Add to this barefaced robbery of the public by the dishonest manipulation of their affairs the disastrous effects of the railway managers' connivance with the plunderers in the productive departments of industry, and we have a record of thievery, inhumanity and of treason against the stability of this republic not equaled in the history of the world. There is scarcely a trust in the land today that has not been fostered and abetted by the barons of transportation, and many of the cruelest monopolies positively could never have fastened their fangs upon the people without the support in villainy they have received from these barons.

There is not time this evening for presenting in full the irrefutable proof of this charge—proof which is easily obtainable by any investigator. But I will mention several of the most glaring examples which have at one time or another come under the notice of most of you, but which have been set aside or forgotten in the rush of business life or been superseded in your minds by newer matters of public concern. Oil, flour, meat and coal are absolutely under the control of a quartet of the most avaricious and relentless monopolies on earth—monopolies which never could have come into existence without the collusion of the masters of transportation. This assertion is based upon the reports of commissions appointed by congress and others acting under state authority. Within the last 30 years 95 per cent of the anthracite coal of America has passed from the ownership of private individuals, many thousands in number, into the possession of the railways which operate in the anthracite regions. A similar process of consolidation has been going on among the railroads, and they, with practically every pound of anthracite coal, are the property of eight corporations. Through discriminations in the matter of freight rates, which in some instances—always when needed to crush a competitor—were placed so high that individual operators could not market their coal, and by other methods as infamous, private ownership was wiped out and frequently the private owner bankrupted. Consumers are compelled to pay from $1.50 to $2.75 per ton more for coal than it would command in a free market because of this monopoly. The bituminous fields are fast undergoing a similar process of absorption and concentration.

Let me say in explanation that in most cases the ownership of the mines is ostensibly vested in corporations separate from the railroads, but official and judicial investigations have shown that the same persons controlled the railways and owned the mines, and, generally speaking, the millions stolen from the public have gone and are going into the pockets of the rings which control the railroads and not to those who hold the railroad shares.

Every pound of meat products in the United States is controlled by Chicago's "Big Four," every barrel of flour pays tribute to the millers' combination which has its chief seat in [illegible] and practically every drop of petroleum oil used for illuminating or lubricating purposes must have the consent of the Standard Oil company before it can do service for society. You cannot partake of a broiled chop and rolls at a lamp lighted board without paying an unearned and unjust tribute to the four monopolies which control the coal, meat, flour and petroleum of the country. And you are not the only ones robbed by these iniquitous combinations. Producers as well as consumers are their prey. Coal miners, wheat farmers and cattle growers are the first victims. Consumers come next.

That these monopolies could never have existed without the help of the barons of transportation all well informed persons know, and all others may know by giving the subject a little investigation. There are undoubtedly many present who are familiar with the history of one of these four monopolies. It is one of the blackest pages in the history of the 30 years of a plutocratic brigandage that should make every Christian citizen of this republic ashamed to look an Indian savage in the face. That such things can be in a Christian age amid a civilized people is difficult of comprehension by rational minds. I refer to the history of the Standard Oil company. It is written in the reports of congressional and state assembly proceedings—New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, etc.—in the court records of several of the states, and, in the wrecked fortunes and destroyed homes of the men whose industry and courage located and drove the wells that brought up the light of the world from the storehouse where the Creator had placed it to be a blessing to his children.

The trail of the Standard Oil company is marked by the charred remains of competing derricks, by the silenced machinery of independent refineries, by the records in the courts of bankruptcy, by the roll of inmates in the insane asylums. It is a trail of inhumanity and heartlessness, springing from selfishness and avarice and leading to perdition.

What has this to do with the private railway monopoly? The fiends who hatched the Standard Oil company would have been practically harmless if they had not had the never failing support of the transportation lords, "the controlling spirits of both organizations being the same," says the New York assembly "Hepburn" report, 1879, page 42.

I hold that with the rights guaranteed proprietorship by our constitutions and statutes it is simply impossible to break the power of any trust or monopoly or to prevent its formation while the means of transportation remain within the control of private individuals.

With government ownership and control, absolute equality between shippers would be established, and the markets would be open to every grower or manufacturer of commodities. Such is the equality enjoyed in our postal service. Give our postal department over to private control, and unlimited trusts and monopolies would be formed and would flourish at the cost of the public. Canvass in your own minds the subject, and you will see the force of this thought. I will not take up time with more than one example. Under such a condition the large and wealthy newspaper concerns could form a trust and by dictating the rates of newspaper postage shut up every country newspaper office in the United States. No need to explain this. Study the Standard Oil record, and the modus operandi will be open to you.

The Movement's Loss.

John R. Potter of Lansing, Mich, whose name has long been familiar in this movement, has suddenly been taken away. He left this city to fill some dates at Durand, when he was overcome with exposure and travel and succumbed to violent hemorrhage of the bowels. Mr. Potter was present in the orange grove meeting in Florida, four years ago, when the National Reform Press association was formed, and has ever been classed among the best informed and effective public speakers of the movement. His heart was in this work. He loved his fellow men and gave his life for their upliftment.—Chicago Searchlight.

Railway Charges.

Here is a practical computation on the transportation problem that is very pertinent. It is from the Michigan City (Ind.) Headlight: Railroads carry a man from New York to San Francisco for $80, says an exchange. They also carry a hog weighing the same as a man for about $6. Congressmen who receive 20 cents mileage from Uncle Sam's cash box ride free. Advantage in being a hog, $74; advantage in favor of a congressman, $80. What's the matter with nationalizing the railroads?

Some Cold Statistics.

Since free coinage was suspended in June, 1893, India has been unable to export enough products to pay her gold interest, but has been compelled to borrow $50,000,000 to pay interest on her gold obligations during the last year, and she must continue to borrow and increase her debts under the gold standard. The United States has been compelled to borrow $58,000,000 by the sale of $50,000,000 5 per cent bonds and has $50,000,000 less in the treasury than she had a year ago under the same tariff laws that were formerly in force. It is impossible for the United States to export enough products at gold prices to pay interest on either foreign or domestic debts. There is no way of avoiding a continuous increase of indebtedness but by the free coinage of silver, and that can only be had through the efforts of the Populist party.—William M. Stewart.

Correct the Fault.

The farmers are to a great extent to blame for their own financial misfortunes. Existing evils could not have been brought about without their acquiescence. Of course this acquiescence was gained through misrepresentation, deceit and the betrayal of confidence bestowed in ignorance, but now that they begin to understand the situation in all its native ugliness it rests upon them to retrieve the loss they have suffered and correct the evils that they may not descend to their children. The farmers are the power of the land. United they may decree what they will within the bounds of justice. Let them use this vast power wisely, but firmly, determinedly.—National Watchman.

They Told You So.

Yes, they told you. They told you that prosperity would come when the Sherman law was repealed, but somehow prosperity was belated. Then they discovered somehow and somewhere that there was a lack of confidence in the tariff views of the Democracy, and now congress has adjourned, after passing a law that out McKinleys McKinley, and still the people are sitting on the rugged edge of despair, waiting for the promised appearance of Mr. Prosperity. A 10-year-old boy would never be deceived that way and not recognize his dupeship, but the voters of the land—they are such wise lulus. Yes, they told you!—Coming Nation.

tears may be shaken from the limbs. That, in fact, is one of the methods of gathering manna. Herodotus alludes to the same nutritious products, so that there is no doubt it has been known in those regions from the earliest ages. It is easy to see how it might be produced in wonderful quantities without and special manifestation of the supernatural. It is a sweetish substance, pleasant to the taste and highly nutritive.

Some students of the Bible have supposed the manna there mentioned to have been a fungus growth; but while the explanation would be a natural one, the modification which it would require is an unnecessary one. There are numerous interesting things nevertheless about the various kinds of fungi which modern exeperimentation has decided to be edible, and not only that, but highly palatable and nutritive. What country boy of an imaginative nature but has frolicked in mimic warfare with imaginary foes, getting the smoke for his artilery and infantry from the numerous "puffballs" which a convenient pasture afforded, while his own lung power furnished the "crash and roar and cheer" for the inspiring contest! Yet science has demonstrated that those very puffballs were once good to eat—in fact, capable of furnishing the most dainty refreshment.—Good Housekeeping.

New Definition of Missionary.

By some chance the tourist stayed to Sunday school. A young lady with a sweet face—and, unless the tourist's aging eyes deceived him, a stylish bonnet—was explaining the meaning of the word "missionary." "Missionary," she said, "is from the Latin missionarius, which means one sent." She looked heavenly enough to inspire a whole cargo of missionaries and seemed to possess enough learning for an entire lexicon, and the tourist did not doubt her. "Now, Charlie," she said, to a little urchin with shining morning face, "what is a missionary?" "One penny."—Hartford Post.

A BIRD-HUNTING PIG.

He Was Just as Reliable as Any Well Bred Pointer in the Field.

The following from an exchange illustrates a pig's intelligence.

We call pigs stupid creatures. This is not fair. They are really as intelligent as the majority of domestic animals, but the lives we allow them are too short and their opportunities too few for them to show their abilities to advantage. The pig of which I have more particularly to tell was by no means a handsome specimen, but what she wanted in beauty she made up in intelligence.

As a baby pig she belonged to a person named Toomer, and she was raised with a family of young pointer puppies. She took kindly to her playfellows, and when they became old enough to follow the keeper in his walks, she, too, would come trotting and grunting after. When Mr. Toomer began to train his young charges for their work of finding and pointing out game there was danger that piggy might make mischief. But the keeper would not leave her shut up at home. He had, he said, broken many dogs as obstinate as pigs and could surely break a pig that was so much more tractable than the rest of her kind.

So he taught her to "back"—that is, to stand perfectly still whenever a dog had found game and was pointing at it. To teach her this he used both rewards and punishments; when she did wrong he pelted her with tiny stones, for he could not catch her and chastise her as he did naughty puppies, and when she behaved herself well he had always barley meal pudding in his pocket for her. But this was not all. He discovered that piggy, like many other pigs, and a keen sense of smell. She learned to scent the game and point at it for herself but not quite like a dog. A pointer dog when he has found game stands generally with one of his forepaws held up until his master comes to him. Piggy, as soon as she was sure that she had found a partridge or a hare or a rabbit, would drop on her knees and so remain for five minutes if necessary.

Unfortunately, before her schoolmaster had time to teach her any further accomplishments he died. His widow sent piggy to a man with whom she lived for three years. But, alas! piggy did not escape the common doom of pigs. In the end she was shut in a sty fattened and made into bacon, as all her ancestors had been before her.—New York Advertiser.

Designation of Groups of Animals.

The ingenuity of the sportsman is perhaps no better illustrated than by the use of which he puts the English language to designate particular groups of animals. The following is the list of the terms which have been applied to the various classes: A covey of partridges, a nide of pheasants, a wisp of snipe, a flight of doves or swallows, a muster of peacocks, a siege of herons, a building of rooks, a brood of grouse, a plump of wild fowls, a stand of plovers, a watch of nightengales, a clattering of doughs, a flock of geese, a herd or bunch of cattle, a bevy of quails, a cast of hawks, a trip of dottrel, a swarm of bees, a school of whales, a school of herrings, a herd of swine, a skulk of foxes, a pack of wolves, a drove of oxen, a sounder of hogs, a troop of monkeys, a pride of lions, a sleuth of bears, a gang of elk.—Edison's Encyclopedia.

The Mandolins.

Formerly all the mandolins used in this country were imported from Germany and Italy; now nearly all that are used here, and a great many are used, are made in this country. In the past year and a half or two years the mandolin has become very popular, and its popularity shows no signs of diminishing. The demand for mandolins come from all over the country, and it is so great that wholesale dealers in musical instruments are not always able to keep up with it promptly. It is said that we make in this country mandolins better than the imported, and the same is said of American guitars. Guitars made in this country are now used throughout the land, and they are also exported to all Spanish-American countries.—Philadelphia Press.

BANKERS ASSEMBLE.

THEY WANT MORE MONEY IN CIRCULATION.

But They Don't Want a Dollar Created That Will Not Pay Them Tribute—How Do You Feel About It?—Read and Ponder.

The Representative: Those worthy gentlemen, the bankers, who largely furnish us with our circulating medium, and kindly relieve the people of the necessity of creating money, by their own government, for their own use, met the other day, Oct. 10, at Baltimore, Md., to decide how this country should be governed—in their own interest. It was a very interesting session.

President White made a speech. He said:

"No class of people are more interested in the material prosperity of the country."

There is no doubt of this—for no class gets a larger share of that prosperity. The interest the wolves have in the sheep is profound and intense. In fact they think more about the sheep than the sheep do about themselves. Their mouths fairly drool when they contemplate them.

"Our business is inseparably connected with the conditions of the world at large, and in fact with all that enters into the status of the people."

We should say so. That is just what we have complained of! Their business is "inseparably connected with the condition of the world at large." It is an awful condition to-day, and they have largely contributed to produce it. They are the fellows who circulated petitions to drive silver out of the mints and who promised the world good times—they have got them—for themselves.

"Let us cherish our organization, and by our presence make its councils an influence to foster and preserve a system of exchange that will be the admiration of every nation and honor to either a creditor or debtor, and therewith we shall be content."

That's it. They want to make their councils an influence. They have too much influence already. They own congress as fully as if they had made the members out of putty. And they want a currency that will be the admiration of the fellow that owns it!

And then Col. Herrick, president of a Cleveland savings bank, proceeded to praise that other national infliction, the daily press. He said:

"The influence of the press is best known and appreciated when it comes directly in conjunction with or in opposition to our business affairs. Last year the attention of this country, and I might say of almost the entire civilized world, was turned to the subject of finance. If the policy of many newspapers helped to plunge us into our difficulties, the policy of others have helped to extricate us. The newspaper press of America is the one great public institution which belongs to the people and yet it is the exclusive property of individuals. It is, next to our free common schools, the noblest, the most powerful of all institutions that have grown out of free play of intelligence, granted by appealing, not to the prejudices, but to that better nature which predominates in all human beings, and where it acknowledges to the public responsibility of justice, honesty, truthfulness of public faith, it takes on divine attributes, and becomes the first of all in the liberal professions, for it then voices the people, and when it voices that which is best in the people, may we not then truthfully say that it expresses the voice and will of God?"

Oh Lord! What profanity! The purchased and subsidized daily papers; owned by foreign and domestic capitalists, slavishly obedient to its masters, the very mouthpiece of insatiable greed and cruel injustice; full to the lips with falsehoods; diabolical in cunning; industriously engaged in ruining mankind,—"expresses the voice and will of God!"

This is flat blasphemy. If the daily press of the United States is "the voice of God" the sooner the churches are torn down the better.

And, the convention proposed an amendment to the banking act, "that banks are to be allowed to issue circulating notes to the amount of one half their paid up unimpaired capital, subject to a tax of one half per cent per annum upon the average amount of circulation of 25 per cent of the paid up unimpaired capital, subject to the one half per cent tax, and an additional heavy tax upon the average amount of such circulation outstanding for the year, the additional 25 per cent to be left as an emergency circulation. The tax of ½ per cent upon the average yearly circulation is to be paid to the United States treasurer as a means of revenue, and the excess over that tax imposed upon the emergency circulation is to be paid into a guarantee fund."

Observe this: The bankers perceive that the howl of the people for more currency can not be much longer resisted; but they are determined that not a dollar of it shall ever reach the people unless it comes through them. They will levy 10 per cent on it from the people and pay back to the people one-half of 1 per cent; taking 9½ per cent per annum for standing between the citizens and their own government! The constitution provides that the national government alone shall create money—if any one else attempts it he goes to prison—and as the government comes from the people and is the people, the bankers propose to stand between the people and the people, and tax them for the use of their own money! Why don't they insist that postage stamps shall not be furnished directly to the citizens, but shall go through the banks, and the banks make a profit off them?

In God's name what right has any man to crawl in between the people and the government, and levy taxes (an attribute of the highest sovereignty) upon the people, for the use of their own money? Why the national bank notes are printed by the government (that is, the people) on paper furnished by the government (that is, the people), stamped by the United States, and signed by the officials; and their only guarantee of payment is redeemability in greenbacks, the people's money, also printed by the people. It is an inconceivable, incredible absurdity that an intelligent people would permit their own money to be milked to them, through the sieve of the banks, and pay heavy interest to the bankers for holding the strainer! There might just as well be a law that no man could thresh his grain unless a banker held the sacks, and charged him 10 per cent of the crop for doing so; whether the farmer wanted him there or not.

And remember, friends, that the People's party is the only party in the United States that proposes any remedy for this great encroachment on the rights of the public.

It declares for greenbacks, full legal tender, issued directly to the people, without the intervention of banks. Why not? The greenback must be better than the national bank note, because the note is redeemable in a greenback; and surely you can not redeem a superior thing by an inferior. And then this change, proposed by the People's party, would save the people of the United States $15,000,000 a year interest, now paid to national banks, for getting between the people and their government and putting forth an inferior currency.

And observe, friends, the bankers are determined that, if your dire necessities force an increase of money, that they shall handle it; and that every dollar of it shall pay tribute to them; and for this tribute you will get nothing!

Are you ready to agree to this? If not, vote for the People's party candidates for congress, and for the state legislature; for they belong to the only party that has ever dared to open its mouth against the present system; and the next legislature will either elect a man to the United States senate pledged to obey the bankers or a man pledged to obey the people. What say you? Where are you? Are you for yourself, or for the chaps that are bleeding you? There is nobody can prevent you from voting as you please. Have you got sense enough to vote to help yourself? That's the question. How will you answer it? I. D.

How Can Trade Revive.

It is nonsence to talk about a revival of trade!

Trade never revived on a falling market for production.

Who is there with money to spend and revive trade?

Can the laborer, who is out of employment, be depended upon to revive trade?

Can the farmer, whose products have declined 50 per cent from last year's prices, help revive trade?

Will employed labor, under reduced wages, come to the front and help revive trade?

If the consumers have not the money to spend to revive trade, how is trade to be revived?

Will some one good at figures please answer this question and relieve an anxious public?

The democrats say trade is to revive. Is it going to revive without any one reviving it?

Is it going to revive despite the absence of purchasers to revive it?

About the only thing that is reviving is democratic humbuggery. Humbuggery is on a boom.

Trade is dead, and will stay dead until the people get the money by a rising market. It takes money to pay debts and revive trade by the purchase of articles on the market for sale.

If the farmer should receive 10 cents for cotton this fall he would have more money than he had last year, and hence could revive more trade than he did last year.

As cotton is lower than it was last year, and cotton seed one half lower, wheat and everything else the farmer has to sell is lower, how is the farmer to revive trade?

Wages of labor has been reduced on all the railroads and in the manufactories and shops. How is the wage-earner to help revive trade?

Who else is there to revive trade? If the tradesman can not sell his goods, he won't revive very much will he?

As farm wages go down, and wages decline, the power of the consumer is reduced and there is less consumed.

This is followed by a reduction of the price of goods, as the tradesman desires to sell, and trade being dull, he bids for it by reducing his profits.

Thus there is a falling market all around, yet democrats tell us trade is reviving! The only thing that is reviving is the old party campaign liar. He is vigorous, and appears to be doing an active business.—Progressive Farmer.

Bonds were issued to get money to carry on the war—so the bankers tell the people. They want more of them issued now; so the presumption is strong that they want to use them to put down labor war. Bonds enough will soon starve all the laboringmen.—Coming Nation.

All people believe that the government can assume control of an old broken down railroad, as receiver, and run it until the finances of the company are placed in a healthy condition; but it will never—no, never—do for the government to own the road after it has been put on a paying basis!—Ex.

When the wheat crop is abundant there is rejoicing. When the corn crop is ample, national hymns of praise are heard. But the labor crop—it is always abundant, always ample, always profuse—and it is invited to go to the devil or starve on earth. Oh, no! the social condition doesn't need remodeling!—Ohio Sentinel.

Let us discuss politics with the same spirit that we talk over some matter of business. Politics is the most serious business that we have to deal with. The welfare of every individual in the land is affected by our votes. Let us look at all sides of every question with a spirit of fairness and moderation; let us search for truth; let us keep our hearts open to justice and our mind in readiness to receive new ideas.—Reform Advocate.

The money power does not work openly and fairly. It does its work in the dark or in the guise of a friend. Even men who voted for the demonetization of silver claim they did not know it was loaded, and that it robbed the people of half their money. John Sherman seems to have been the one who [illegible] and stuck in a gold bullet, and the London Jews pulled the trigger.—Dover (Ky.) Searchlight.

If the interests of yourself and those of the monopolist are the same, then you will be justified in voting with him. But if they are different then the way to best subserve your own is to vote for them—the monopolist will take care of himself.—Nonconformist.

With monopoly firmly intrenched in power and a large army to soften the murmurs of the discontented, the nation can enjoy the boon of liberty—that thing for which the forefathers fought, bled and died—in a manner entirely new to the people of the western republic. We then can say, and truthfully, that at last we have an overproduction—an overproduction of free institutions.—Nonconformist.

The Tariff Reform Humbug.

The McKinley bill was a "robbery."

So said all the democratic leaders and so said their Chicago platform.

On a tidal wave of majorities they were borne into power to destroy the robber and to eternally stop the robbery.

From every stump in the south the office holders are now preaching the beauties of the senate bill, which Cleveland was ashamed to sign.

They tell the people about taking the tax off slate pencils, but never a word do they say about doubling the tax on molasses.

They tell the people a great deal about reducing the tax on gum camphor, but they say nothing about increasing the tax on Castile soap

The democrats increased the tax on horseshoes 27 per cent, but the campaign orator tells it not in Gath, nor doth he whisper it on the streets of Askelon.

The democrats increased the tax on boiler pipes, etc., 145 per cent, but Mr. Crisp and Senator Walsh skate merrily around this spot in the tariff reform ice, and the mossback voter never suspects that the place is considered "dangerous" by the campaign skater. The McKinley robbery on steel, of the strand and wire size, was not big enough to suit the democratic tariff reformers, hence they increased the tax in some instances 2 per cent and in others 212 per cent, to show to the country how easy it was to denounce McKinleyism as "the culminating atrocity of class legislation" and then to make a schedule still more atrocious.

If it was "robbery" in the McKinley bill to lay the taxes there is laid, what is it in the democratic bill to increase some of those taxes? Is it robbery? If so, why did democrats commit the crime?

If it is not robbery, then why do the lower duties of the McKinley bill constitute robbery?

It is true that many reductions of taxes were made in the democratic bill, but it seems to us there was no earthly excuse for increasing some of the taxes which had been so bitterly denounced.

While Mr. Crisp and Senator Walsh have had much to say about the lowering of duties on the necessaries of life we would really like to hear them defend the increase of tax which they laid upon such necessaries of life as molasses, and upon such articles of common use as horseshoes, mule shoes, rivets, screws, flues, pipes and strand wires.—Louisiana Populist.

Where the Producer Stands.

For twenty-five years they have been aiding to reduce the amount of money in circulation, per capita.

They first had nearly all the paper money burned.

Cotton started down.

In 1878 the government began to make a small amount of silver money each month.

But the supply of money did not meet the necessities of the people.

And in 1880 it took two bales of cotton to bring $120.

No remedy was applied. And in 1890 nearly three bales of cotton were required to bring $120.

Mr. Cleveland, the great democratic leader, was made President in 1893.

From that time until now the democratic party has had entire control of the government.

During the summer of 1893 that party passed a law which provided that not another dollar of silver should be added to the money in circulation.

In 1894 the farmer has to take nearly five bales of cotton to town in order to get $120.

Stop and Think.

Denver Road: We are asked to issue bonds to pay for gold.

What is gold?

It is a species of metal, the bulk of which is owned and controlled by a system of banking concerns under the management of the Rothschilds.

Among those concerns is the Bank of England.

What are bonds?

In what respect do bonds differ from greenbacks?

Well bonds draw interest and do not circulate as money, because they are issued in order to enable the gold metal owners to loan us their metal for use as money, and, at the same time, enable them to draw interest for the use of the metal. See?

Greenbacks, on the other hand, are bits of paper backed up by the same faith and integrity of the nation that backs up the bonds, only they don't draw interest, besides they circulate as money direct among the people.

Then why issue more bonds? you ask.

Simply to enable a lot of inhuman shylocks to live without work and upon usury.

The crime of demonetizing silver finds its deadly fruit in the increased price of gold, that is the measure of all values, and that fruit is so deadly that any measure looking to its destruction is justifiable, just and holy. In fact, it must be destroyed or all of the legitimate industries of the country will be, even that of those who write goldbug articles for a living.—Farm, State and Home.

Thorough Milking.

This is the time of year when the milk yield is apt to decrease. Unless great care is taken to milk out every drop this tendency will become more pronounced. Careless milking is the reason why many dairy herds are not profitable. The last milk in the udder is the richest. If left in it makes a great difference in the cream yield. There are comparatively few milkers who are conscientious enough to be trusted if they know that the owner of the dairy does not keep a sharp eye on them. The manager, if a good rapid milker, will do well to milk some of the cows himself, and look to it that others, which are left to assistants to milk, are milked thoroughly. It is very easy to lose the wages of a good milker through having the milking carelessly done. Not only is there the present waste of milk, but the milking capacity of the cow is decreased.

of all cases of consumption can, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease, be cured. This may seem like a bold assertion to those familiar only with the means generally in use for its treatment; as nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy emulsions, extract of malt, whiskey, different preparations of hypophosphites and such like palliatives. Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.
Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.
The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write those cured and learn their experience.

KENT TO BE HANGED.

THE JURY IN THE MURDER CASE RETURNS A VERDICT OF GUILTY.

With the Recommendation That Kent Be Hanged—Kent's Crime Was Employing His Hird Man to Murder Mrs. Kent.

Mandan, N. D., Nov. 25.—The jury in the Kent murder case came into court with a verdict of guilty, and they decided that the defendant should be punished by death. In this state the jury fixes the punishment in capital cases when they find a verdict of guilty. The defendant listened to the verdict apparently unmoved.

Myron R. Kent was born in Burbank, Ohio, in 1848, and spent his boyhood in that place. He studied law in the office of H. G. Blake at Madina, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar. In 1871 he was elected prosecuting attorney for that county and served one year. He engaged in the banking business, and in 1872 was made bookkeeper of the First National Bank of Medina. He married the beautiful daughter of W. L. Terrill, a prominent citizen of that place, but the young wife died inside of two years. The bank closed its doors May 2, 1874, and an examination showed that its capital had been impaired 50 per cent by Pancoast's (Kent) dishonesty. In the meantime he had made his escape and was never punished for his peculations, which are supposed to have aggregated $40,000, consumed in high living. When Pancoast came to Minneapolis he called himself M. R. Kent and represented himself as an Englishman, and had succeeded in covering up all traces of the past. He managed to ingratiate himself into good society in the Mill City, and, among others, became acquainted with the Lairds. Shortly after he married Miss Julia Laird, for whose death he will pay the penalty upon the scaffold. The parents of the lady were not pleased with the match, but concluded to make the best of a bad bargain, and Kent was given employment in the lumber business of his father-in-law. It is said he embezzled $25,000 of the firm's money. When discovered he was given $5,000 and told to shift for himself. He and his new wife then separated, Kent going to Chicago and afterward to Mandan. Meantime he corresponded with his wife, and a reconciliation was effected.

On the night of March 12, 1894, Kent went across the river to Bismarck, telling his wife he would return the next day. On this night his wife was shot and killed under what seemed to be excusable circumstances. However, there was a risk on her life for $24,000, and Kent failed to return. The true story of her death is as follows: On that night Tom Swidenski, the hired man, awoke Mrs. Kent on the pretext that some one wished to speak to her. When she appeared at the window a shotgun in his hands was discharged, apparently by accident, as at the time he pretended to be looking for intruders. The shot took effect in Mrs. Kent, killing her instantly. Swidenski gave himself up, and told the story is above. Later, however, he confessed that he had been hired by Kent to kill his wife, he to receive $1,800 for the deed. Detectives were placed upon the case, and Kent was brought back to Mandan and tried, with the result above stated.

WANT THAT BOUNTY.

Louisiana Sugar Planters Sue the Government.

Washington, Nov. 25.—The controversy between the sugar growers of the country and the United States government, growing out of the repeal of the act granting a bounty of one-half a cent a pound upon all sugars grown in the United States and territories by the new tariff bill and the subsequent refusal of the treasury department to pay bounty upon sugar grown in the present year, reached the first stage in progress to definite legal settlement today. J. Archibald Murray, an attorney of New York, filed today in the court of claims three suits, identical in character, and all seeking to recover from the government sums of money alleged to be legally due the complainants as bounty upon sugar raised by them in the year 1894. The Chino alley Beet Sugar Company of New Jersey sues for $43,121; the Norfolk Beet Sugar company of New Jersey for $3,093, and the Oxnard Beet Sugar company for $11,782. The cases will probably be pushed to an early hearing in the court of claims, and will then be taken to the United States court for final settlement. It is understood that the suits are brought as test cases and will be vigorously contested, as an amount reaching some $11,000,000 is at stake in the controversy.

HE'S A RICH MAN NOW.

A Poor German's Lucky Discovery—Gets $1,000,000 for a Rheumatic Cure.

CHICAGO, May 2.—(Special).—Less than one year ago Frank Schrage did not possess a dollar in the world outside of the income derived from a small drug business, and only a few years ago he was a poor German immigrant without a home. To-day Mr. Schrage can be called a millionaire, as a result of a discovery of a sure cure for rheumatism. A syndicate to-day paid him $100,000 cash for his discovery and arranged to pay him $100,000 a year until he has received $1,000,000 in all.—Philadelphia Press.

Swanson Rheumatic Cure company, 167-169 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., are the proprietors of this celebrated remedy. Never fails. Testimonials free. Hustling agents wanted. Mail orders filled.

SUFFOCATED IN A FIRE.

A Lumberman Meets an Untimely End in a Blaze.

Minneapolis, Nov. 25. — Fire broke out in the frame dwelling house in the rear of 1817 Second street north about 3 o'clock this morning, and one of the inmates, C. F. Lind, a lumberman, was suffocated by smoke. The house is a small affair, with narrow stairs, and was occupied by a dozen people. Very little is known of Lind. He had been drinking last evening, and was probably in a stupor when the fire broke out.

PAL OF H. H. HOLMES.

C. A. Pitzel Tried to Work a Scheme in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Nov. 24.—C. A. Pitzel, the St. Louis man whose supposed death in Philadelphia last September resulted in the payment of $10,000 to the widow and children by the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company, is known to a good many people in Minneapolis. Pitzel was here last July trying to float a scheme for building elevators through Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas, in which he had interested some Chicago capitalists, but remained only a few weeks. Nothing has since been heard of his elevator idea, so it is to be presumed the gentlemen he met with here were not favorably impressed with the plan. In commenting on the supposed death of Pitzel this morning a gentleman who knows him, but who refuses to allow his name to be published in the same connection, hunted up a circular letter from the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company, issued as advertising shortly after the supposed murder of Pitzel in Philadelphia. The letter is one written to the company by Mrs. Pitzel, returning thanks for the prompt manner in which the policy was paid.

Holmes' wife was a Miss Myrtle Belknap, and lived in Minneapolis with her parents for a number of years. In 1886 she went East and married Holmes.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—It became known to-day that Holmes was at the head of what purported to be an incorporation called the A B C company, with headquarters in the Monon building on Dearborn street. The copying machine which Holmes sold was not without merit, but the sale of territory to agents was the chief revenue. Mr. Holmes would advertise throughout the country and obtain a correspondence with people all over the country. Then the victim would be persuaded to visit this city, and would be ushered into an office apparently rushed with business. Finally a proposition would be made for the disposal of some state or county and a deal consummated. It is said that the State of Ohio sold for $5,000 cash, and that an office was established in Cincinnati. Both of the Dakotas and a majority of the Western states were disposed of. A company was organized in New York and paid $500 per month for merely the agency in that city. Some of the states were sold as many times, it is said, as Holmes could find purchasers.

EATEN BY CANNIBALS.

Terrible fate of Europeans near New Guinea.

London, Nov. 24.—Australian mails are to the effect that the Kanakas on all the islands near New Guinea are in revolt. Scores of European settlers have been murdered. The steamer Three Cheers of Sydney called at the Admiralty islands and found that the trading posts and a trading schooner had been burned. "Not a single white man was visible." The natives fled to the hills on the approach of the steamer. The captain landed and found the remains of a recent cannibal feast. All the whites undoubtedly met with a horrible death. At New Ireland and other islands similar massacres are reported. It is supposed that the natives looted liquor stores, and, becoming inflamed with the spoils, massacred the whites.

TO DIG UP TAELS.

China Offers to Pay Japan's War Expenses and 100,000,000 Besides.

Hiroshima, Nov. 24. — It is reported that China has intimated that she will offer to pay a war indemnity of 100,000,000 taels, and in addition pay all the war expenses incurred by Japan. As the war expenses reach 150,000,000 taels, the total offer of China would be 250,000,000 taels. The tael is the Chinese silver coin worth about 75 cents at the present exchange, so that the whole payment would be approximately $175,000,000 American money.

Yokohama, Nov. 24.—The Chinese Pie Yang squadron is reported to have shelled the Japanese troops marching on Port Arthur. A desperate battle between the Chinese and Japanese fleets is said to have followed. The result of the engagement is unknown.

Tien Tsin, Nov. 24.—The chief of the imperial customs here, De Ting, who was recently summoned to Pekin in order to confer with the government as to ways and means for raising money for the war, has left for Japan in order to arrange terms of peace.

Saratoga, N. Y., Nov. 24. — Patrick Hughes of Helena, Mont., will be released to-day from Dannemora state prison, having been pardoned by Gov. Flower. Churchill at "The Pines," near Schuylerville, Saratoga county, and he was sentenced to nine years and six months imprisonment and Hanehan to nineteen years. Eleven of the jury that convicted him have signed the petition praying for his pardon.

Tiffin, Ohio, Nov. 24.—Every bell in Tiffin at 6:30 o'clock last night rang a knell notifying all that Gen. W. H. Gibson, the statesman, soldier and Christian citizen had passed away. Gen. Gibson had been ailing for some time, and took to his bed a few days ago. Only the immediate members of the family and the doctor were at the bedside when death came. The funeral will be Sunday afternoon under the direction of the G. A. R.

STOLE IMMENSE SUMS

FRAUDS AGGREGATING POSSIBLY $1,000,00 UNEARTHED IN S. D.

School Bonds Are Falsely Issued and Sold to Englishmen—The Promoter, One Pierce, Has Gone to Mexico, Where the Climate Is More Agreeable.

Yankton, S. D. Nov. 24.—The exposure of the gigantic forgeries of John T. M. Pierce and his flight to Mexico, closely followed by the arrival of English capitalists here, has created a sensation in financial circles in New York. Pierce, Wright & Co. have been paying interest four or five years on foreign bonds which were sold to Eastern capitalists.

The firm of Pierce, Wright & Co., so far as anything to the contrary is known, is composed wholly of J. T. M. Pierce, G. H. C. Wright having withdrawn several years ago, and the "Co." being an unknown quantity. The firm has existed in London, England, at Yankton, at Spokane, and at Holyoke, Colo., and has done business in all those places. The principal office of issue has been at Yankton, which has also been Pierce's place of residence. The London office was the place where his various issues of fraudulent paper were negotiated and turned into cash. Pierce has dealt largely in school district bonds and tax certificates. These have been generally of a fictitious character, being manufactured by the wholesale and forged on fictitious signatures attached, together with seals, verifications and other paraphernalia of deceit. He seems to have found a ready market for his bogus paper, probably through the good standing of his London house. In his school bond issues he has covered the South Dakota counties of Yankton, Bon Homme, Hutchison, Turner, Clay and Union so far as known. The business has been going on many years. The last school bond to come to light is dated Dec. 1, 1893. It purports to be the bond of independent school district No. 2 of Bon Homme county. It was for $25,000 payable to J. P. Crennan, who died several years before it was issued. The signatures are forged. It is guaranteed by Pierce's London house. This paper was sold to English parties, and has recently been made the subject of investigation by T. Millinson of Texas, an Englishman. This is given as a sample of his work. The aggregate amount of fraudulent school bonds and tax certificates is not known, but is very large, and there are in addition numerous fraudulent mortgages which have been palmed off upon unsuspecting Englishmen.

It is the opinion of a gentleman in a position to know something about the business that Pierce has floated from $500,000 to $1,000,000 worth of this manufactured paper. He has built in Yankton some of the most substantial improvements, being the result of his investments. He has lived expensively, too, maintaining an establishment here and one in London. He has put $175,000 into the grade and right of way of the Yankton & Norfolk railroad, though there is a belief that the money for the railroad work was not a portion of his income from school bonds, tax certificates, etc. It is said that Pierce has also been dealing in fictitious silver mines. If so this part of the work has been conducted remote from Yankton, and there is nothing here in evidence. He has been an all around hustler, and money could hardly come to him fast enough to meet his demands. Though he secured it by easy processes and in quantities sufficient to stagger belief, he was sometimes hard up. Occasions were not infrequent when it bothered him to meet his office and living expenses, but he always paid all claims finally.

It is not thought that the collapse of the Pierce house will embarrass any Yankton business establishment. With local business men he had no entanglements. There is yet unpaid a considerable sum for grading work upon the Yankton & Norfolk railroad, but these accounts are of long standing, and the losses will produce no new results. He is said to have received payments on loans secured to English money lenders by first mortgages without delivering the money to those who loaned it and that he has neglected to give discharges of mortgages in these cases. If so the parties who made such payments will be losers. The present whereabouts of Pierce is not known. He is said to have left England last month for America, and to have gone to Mexico. That he is not in England seems to be generally conceded.

FITZ EXONERATED.

Result of the Inquest Over Con Riordan's Remains.

Syracuse, Nov. 24.—The inquest over the remains of Cornelius Riordan, the prize fighter who became unconscious while sparring with Bob Fitzsimmons on Friday night last and died a few hours later, was held here last night. Many witnesses were examined. The jury, which was composed of some of the representative business men of the town, brought in a verdict at 10 o'clock exonerating Fitzsimmons. District Attorney S. J. Shoves says that despite the verdict he will present the case to the grand jury.

PIERCE HAS MONEY.

The Yankton Boodler Got Away with much Boodle.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 24. — Attachments aggregating $35,000 were filed against property in which it is thought J. T. M. Pierce still has an interest. It is now estimated that the loss to his English dupes will exceed $1,000,000, and may reach $1,500,000. His friends pretend to account for alleged heavy losses in Mexican silver mines, but the belief is strong that he has cleared up at least $500,000, and that he has this amount out of sight. It was stated to-day by Pierce's brother-in-law that Pierce's wife and child sailed from London on Oct. 5, ostensibly for Mexico.

To-day forged bonds purporting to have been issued by the Yankton board of education, amounting to $50,000, turned up as the property of McCausland of Belfast, Ireland, who bought them of Pierce. Arthur Nation of London was stuck for $200,000, and John W. Robinson of Hull, Eng., has reached here to see if he could save anything from the wreck. The company here is said to have $100,000 of Pierce's fraudulent paper. Englishmen who have been squeezed declare that no one but Pierce could have accomplished such wholesale robbery as was perpetrated upon them, and that it was the prompt payment of large interests which made it easy for him to dispose of his paper. It is now learned that this interest was paid out of the principal, and was done for the purpose of creating confidence and leading up to the large transactions which he successfully accomplished.

SAID TO BE A FRAUD.

An Insolvent Company is Roundly Denounced.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—The North American Deposit and Investment Company of Dubuque, Iowa, was severely denounced by Judge Horton in open court to-day. The methods of the company were declared to be fraudulent and its officers pronounced swindlers, while the court expressed an opinion that its organization had been effected for the purpose of preying upon the ignorant. The company is one of the largest loan and investment concerns in the country, having a capital stock of $25,000,000. While the company was incorporated in Iowa and has its main offices in Dubuque, the chief officers, Samuel B. House, president, and Lyman E. Page, secretary, are residents of this city. The subject matter for Judge Horton's criticisms was contained in the facts brought out on the trial of a chancery matter in which Caroline Humphries and her husband, Joseph Humphries, a colored couple formerly residing in Atlanta, Ga., were complainants. The evidence given in court was to the effect that Humphries and his wife wished to obtain a loan of $1,200. They were induced to sign papers, which they were told constituted a mortgage, but which in reality amounted to an absolute warranty deed. The old colored people never received but $500 in cash. The balance of the $1,200 being given to them in the shape of stock in the company.

NEW TREATY SIGNED.

New Convention Between Japan and the United States Agreed Upon.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Secretary of State Gresham, in behalf of the United States, and Minister Kurino of Japan, in behalf of his country, have affixed their signatures to a new treaty of amity and commerce between this country and Japan. The final formalities in the execution of the instrument occurred at the state department late yesterday afternoon after the close of office hours, and the fact that it now awaited only the ratification of the two governments was exclusively announced by the Associated Press yesterday. When the last formalities were closed yesterday, the state department buildings were deserted, except the private office of the secretary of state, where the interesting ceremony was to be concluded. Secretary Gresham will now transmit the new treaty to the United States senate when it convenes, and Minister Kurino will forward it to the Japanese foreign office to be approved by the emperor of Japan and the privy council. Coming at the present time, the signing of the treaty is considered of much significance beyond its actual terms, as it establishes the cordiality between the countries at a time when the foreign powers are endeavoring to show that Japan's rejection of the peace mediation was a "snub" to the United States. To Japan the signatures are of supreme importance, as the country estimates its new series of treaties as quite as important as the war as it is now conducted.

TOWN DESTROYED.

A Terrific Storm Sweeps Through Mississippi.

Merridan, Miss., Nov. 25.—Meridan was visited to-day by the most destructive storm within its history. The wind accompanied by rain came from the northwest and wrought considerable damage to buildings, fences and shade trees. The storm evidently raged fiercest west and southwest of the city and a report is current here that the town of Newton, on the Alabama & Vicksburg railroad, has been swept away, but as the wires west and south are all down, full particulars of the storm's work cannot be secured.

BREVITIES.

Christ Hall went down to Fergus Falls today on business.

Joseph Smith, of Red Lake Falls was doing business here today.

A. C. Schmidt, of Crookston, was doing business in town last Monday.

Otto Swenson left last week for Sweden where he will spend the winter.

Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, made a professional visit here last Sunday.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving and it promises to be a hard day on turkeys.

Rev. Kenniston will preach his Thanksgiving sermon tomorrow evening at 7:30.

There will be a Thanksgiving dance tomorrow night in Bjerk's Hall. All are invited to attend.

The school children are happy this week as they will have a school holiday until next Monday.

The elevators were blocked again with wheat last Saturday but plenty of cars came on Monday.

Dan Patterson has been drawn on the grand jury which will meet at Crookston next week.

We have been having a sample of cold weather the past week, this morning being the coldest of the season, 22 below zero.

District Court will convene at Crookston next week. The calendar will be a large one and it will probably be in session most of the month.

A. W. Lind who has been at the American House for the past month with a broken leg has recovered sufficiently to be taken home today.

Mrs. Gustave Holmes came up from Goodhue county last Friday and is with her daughter Mrs. C. G. Rapp who has been very sick for several weeks past.

The roads are in bad shape not enough snow for sleighing and too much for wheeling. A few inches of snow would be a first class good thing.

Wheat takes a two cent tumble on account of the close of navigation at Duluth and is worth 49 cents here today. This is two cents higher than at Crookston or at other points.

The M. E. Social last Friday attracted a large crowd who enjoyed an old fashioned New England supper of baked beans and brown bread. The ladies succeeded in clearing an even $50 during the evening.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Crookston Daily Tribune, W. A. Hammond publisher. The Tribune starts in with a fair amount of advertising and is bright and newsy, and will undoubtedly succeed.

Our trains come in late nearly every trip lately and seldom leave here until after supper. The train crew is not to blame however as they are compelled to do the work of two crews, switching in the yard at Crookston and make this run. There is enough business here now for a daily train but we won't get it.

STRAYED.

Strayed from the premices of the undersigned in Terrebonne township about November 1st, a dark red colt with white spot on hind foot, one and one half years old, A reward will be paid for delivery of colt or information.

A. Perusse Terrebonne. P. O.

A lawsuit was tried here today which has caused considerable interest. Ole Cliffgard brought suit against Sever Ness for $75 damages for chasing with a dog a couple of Cliffgard's colts causing them to run into a wire fence and kill themselves. Attorney Richardson, of Thief River Falls, appeared for the plaintiff and Attorney Broughton, of Red Lake Falls, for the defendent, The case came up last Saturday before Justice Hall but was adjourned until today. This afternoon a jury was called and late this evening returned a verdict of $15 in favor of Plaintiff Cliffgard.

The tax levy for 1894 has already been made and shows up as follows: State revenue 2 20-100 mills; state and general schools 2 15-100 mills; county revenue fund 4 65-100 mills; county road and bridge 1 mill; county bond and interest 1 mill; county sinking fund 1 mill. The township levies are about the same as for 1863. The road and bridge levy is just half what it was in 1893, and the remainder of the levy is about the same.—Crookston Times.

A. C. Rinehart came up from Crookston after the official count and felt greatly elated over the result. Mr. Rhinehart in an interview with the writer stated that he was not opposed to county division, but would favor any reasonable measure looking toward such an end. He said that in his opinion it was only a question of time when the county would be divided and if the matter was rightly handled he would do what he could to help the project. His idea is for each township interested to select three representative men and have the men selected meet at an appointed place and time and decide upon the border lines of each county select the officers for the first two years and also name each county. Such a proposition, it appears to us would not work any injustice to anyone and would give the taxpayers an opportunity to say who shall be in charge of affairs if the project carried which it surely would if properly handled and represented fostered and encouraged by representative men.—East Grand Forks Curier.

We have received a letter from our old friend, W. W. Engle, of San Jose, California, in which he says: "We are in this glorious state yet, and hope to remain many year yet on this good old globe, to make up for our fears and sufferings from the cyclones and blizzards of Minnesota that we had to endure while living in that frigid zone so many years of our lives while young and that we should have spent here in this glorious sunshine among fruits and flowers. This has been a glorious summer here, just as lovely as our Heavenly Father could well make it. No cold days no hot days; no rain since last May til Oct. 10th, and not hot or sultry any time, but the air fresh and glorious every day. We had a fine crop of fruit, and I think fruit raising the nicest business in the world. Great big luscious red peaches, apricots, prunes, etc. We measured one peach last week that was twelve inches around. We have had peaches since July 15th up till now. We have a tree of big clingstones that hang on yet. Peaches, that are peaches nearly all summer. We have a tree hanging full of ripe figs, too good to talk about. Our rose bushes, chrysanthemums, geraniums, and others, are in bloom now."

Last night the St. Hilaire train brought down a man who had fallen under the wheels and had his leg crushed. The facts in the case as learned from the trainmen and from the victim of the accident are as follows:

John Rothson has been in the employ of the Great Northern as a section hand between Red Lake Falls & St. Hilaire and owing to lack of work was lately discharged. Yesterday he sent his wife out in the country on a visit and proposed to follow her by train. He asked Conductor Morry if he would stop the train near the farmers house and let him off. This was refused owing to a lack of time and he apparently gave up the idea of going. When the train left Red Lake Falls he boarded a car unbeknown to the train crew, and in doing so missed his footing and fell. The wheels of five cars ran over his left leg about five inches above the ankle, He was removed to the hospital on arrival of the train and attended by Dr.s Dampier and Denniston but owing to the swollen condition of the leg and from due to their having tied a cord tightly below the knee to prevent bleeding no definate idea could be gained as to the extent of the injury. Today the condition of the leg warranted an operation and it was amputated at the knee.

The Great Northern Scenic Co. will bring to the M. E. Church in St. Hilaire on Friday evening next, the finest Stereopticon entertainment that has ever been seen outside of the large cities. This entertainment which is to be given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society is not to be confounded with the ordinary magic lantern show as it is in every way larger finer and more complete.

The machine used, a Bessler Eclipse is one of the finest made and the illumination, a 6.000 candle-power calcium light, would be hard to improve upon.

The program of views, colored true to nature, and correct in every detail, comprises the following:

Scenic America from Midland Lakes to Western Ocean.

Scenic, Scotland, England, France, Switzerland and Italy.

The Terrible Forest Fires at Hinckley, Pine City and Mission Creek.

Beautiful Dissolving Views.

This entertainment was in Grand Forks, Nov. 6 and 7, and the Plaindealer said.

The Stereopticon Entertainment, America's Beautiful Scenery," at the Metropolitan Theater last evening was the finest thing of the kind ever seen in Grand Forks. The scenic views and their presentation upon the canvas would be difficult to improve upon. Those illustrating the country from the Twin cities to the coast were very beautiful, including the picturesque Mount Index, Kootenai Tumwater and Box canyons. Lakes McDonald and Chelan and the majestic Snoqualami Falls. The Hinkley fire views proved an interesting feature,

ORGANIZE FOR 1896.

A STIRRING APPEAL ISSUED BY THE INDUSTRIAL LEGION.

A Plan For Securing With Comparative Ease the Funds Without Which the Work Cannot be Prosecuted—Get Ready and Make 1896 the Year of Jubilee.

The campaign of 1894 is over. The work has been hampered all the year by lack of organization and want of money. Owing to the severe illness and family affliction of our brother, George F. Washburn, we were unable to put the legion rebate plan in operation. We will be ready with the advent of the new year, and we hope the 300 legions who want to try it will renew their efforts at once. We can win the battle in 1896 if we can raise the money for a legitimate campaign. The old parties would be trodden in the dust if it was not for the untold sums contributed by the millionaires on both sides of the water. We can raise all the money we need, but wasted effort must cease and the whole party mass in solid lines. One way would be for all to join the legion and contribute 10 cents a month to the campaign fund. Another and the surest way is the operation of the Washburn rebate plan. Combine your trade, buy only of the business men who will contribute to our fund by buying "legion credits" and giving them back to our members as a rebate on their purchases. You object that it involves cash trade. Thousands save greatly by only buying for cash, thousands are obliged to, and thousands only buy when they have cash. All such can combine trade. If you can mass the trade of 25, 50, 100, 200 or 500 on the firms only who deal with us, we can raise with the legions already organized $1,000,000 for 1896. You object that you cannot raise the money to pay cash for the "legion credits." Cease to throw money away on movements that retard rather than advance our work, and if you have breath of life enough to live until spring comes you can hold entertainments and raise the money.

Send to George Howard Gibson, Lincoln, Neb., and get his grand songbook and hold a concert with the aid of the young people and women and raise the money. Hundreds of legions have provided all the money needed to carry on local campaign work. You can all do it. Show to the merchants that you can combine a given trade, and they will advance the money to pay for the credits. This is no new plan. Today an organization, almost like the legion, produces all the money needed to make the great people's campaign in Germany. The rebate plan nets 20 per cent to its members in one of our cities. It has worked for several years under the direct observation of Mr. Washburn, who drew our plan on national lines.

The legion plan has been approved by our executive council, which is composed of the same men as the national executive committee of the People's Party. We have sent out thousands of constitutions containing the idea in article 7. It is simple, and all it needs is intelligence, zeal and integrity. No legion is obliged to use it. That is determined by your own action. No member can be compelled to take it, but the more you combine the more money for each member and the national and state committees of the People's Party.

The complaint was made at first that the legion fees were too high. They were made the same as the Farmers' Alliance, but we reduced them to $1 for charter of original legions and 20 cents for changing Alliances, clubs, leagues and all other farm or labor orders. Dues have not been exacted, but we must receive some means in this way, for the burden has become greater than we can bear. Myself and family have performed the labor without a cent of compensation and are out hundreds of dollars besides our time for two years. We have not complained, though we know that our members have paid thousands of dollars to join nonpartisan orders that have performed their missions and have not a dollar for the authorized work of the party. Every committee has been bankrupt all the year, and if this is to continue during 1895 and 1896 we might as well fold our banners and let the enemy overwhelm us.

The time for plain speaking has come, and all the organizing energy of this party must be combined in one partisan organization if we win. Wasted, misdirected effort must cease. The farm and labor orders have performed a grand work and graduated their members into partisan politics. It is a great mistake to suppose the legion will disband the labor unions. They work side by side in harmonious companionship, and the legion is simply the People's Party club. It is no experiment. It is planted in 38 states. The best workers in the People's Party hold our commissions. Many of them have waited, but now the sober sense of all the members of the party impels them to band together in the legion work. It covers every situation demanded by the party. All economic measures are discussed in its meetings. Clubs will largely disband when the fall elections are over. They have never had any systematic plan. We change them to legions for 20 cents for charter and supplies.

LEGION CIRCULAR.

All farm and labor orders, People's Party clubs silver leagues, and all other organizations in full sympathy with the People's Party can be organized into the Industrial legion for 20 cents, which is simply the cost of postage and supplies. All persons, male or female, over 18 are eligible for membership, and where they have no organization the charter fee is $1, which is used to pay the expenses of printing and postage. Where the people are utterly unable to afford to pay this $1 they can send the postage as above and cost of supplies. Quartermaster General George F. Washburn has perfected a wonderful plan for the benefit of the legion. It will be known as article 7 of the constitution. It will benefit each member, pay all of his dues and net all the money that is needed for political and educational work. It is [illegible], easily understood and has been [illegible]ed, and we earnestly request all organizations to turn into Industrial legions as rapidly as possible, so as to take advantage of this plan.

PAUL VANDERVOORT.
H. E. TAUBENECK.

We have 1,000 legions in line already. We have the additional indorsement of nearly all the state committees, who [illegible] hold for another year. They see the absolute need of this organization.

Arkansas, after a noble fight in September, where they gained all along the line, have issued a grand state committee address and urged the people to organize legions and asked all clubs to turn into legions at once, and they are now writing from every county. Let this example be followed in every state.

Objection is made that the legion resists fusion and no man or woman can belong to it that barters the honor of the party. That is its proudest title to confidence. Wherever fusion has raised its head the legion has helped to kill the monster. We will never win until we deserve to, and then God will crown us with a victory. Every emergency in our great work is provided for in the legion. The south, in its daring battle against both the old parties cannot enthrone the radiant principle of a fair ballot without a strong and determined legion at every voting precinct demanding at the risk of life, if needed, an honest count. In the great cities, with their multitude of societies, we can maintain our principles and have untrammeled conventions by a legion in every voting precinct. We will be swallowed up and our name changed and platform obliterated if we do not mass in legions. Organization alone will maintain the faith adopted at Omaha. The grand workers who have proclaimed our doctrine from ocean to ocean and by noble self sacrifice have earned the laurel crown will be trodden under foot and their places taken by a discordant force that will disband and destroy us if we do not organize. We are composed of a heterogeneous mass, bound together by slender ties and ropes of sand, and if we do not cling together our enemies will separate us. The same agents that made merchandise of past movements are again at work. Men who hold our commission in high places should not part their garments with the enemy and wreck themselves in a hopeless attempt to serve both God and mammon.

"He who is not for us is against us," and "while our doors are open to the north, south, east and west" we need not go outside our own ranks for men and women to lead our columns.

We have nothing in common with the rotten hulks of the old parties, and we can win this battle by thorough organization on the fundamental doctrines of the Omaha platform, and when the victory is won we can garner every fruit and legislate in favor of all the legitimate demands of honest labor.

Let us inaugurate the great conflict of 1896 by rallying everywhere into local legions, so we may be ready for the battle. We have millions to contend with. The enemy are intrenched. They control both the old parties; they have allies across the sea. It will need the grandest effort the world has ever witnessed to win the victory. In our ranks rest the hopes of a peaceful settlement at the ballot box. The enemy are eager to use force. They control the army and navy and have the money power of the world to support their cause. Five hundred thousand battle worn old veterans who once wore the blue and gray are banded together to save the nation from the horrors of civil war. Once they contended like men in the arena of blood. Now, thank God, under the old flag Washington, Adams and Jefferson gave us, we touch elbows to save the nation from destruction. We want 1,000 brave, devoted men and women who, with a willing spirit of self sacrifice will march forward and overcome all obstacles and plant the banners of the Industrial legion in every voting precinct in the land. If this is done, the People's Party will capture the White House and congress in 1896. Who will volunteer? Send for papers and let all clubs, Alliances, farm and labor orders procure charters.

Government Railways.

In reports just made to the German government and in a circular now being sent around in that country the bad practices prevalent in the management of American railroads under private ownership are condemned, and the effect is to enhance an existing lack of confidence abroad in American railroad securities. Since the government took control of the railroads in the old, conservative monarchy of Austria the benefits to the people have been general. Rates of fare have been reduced one-half; the business of the roads has nearly if not quite doubled; life and limb have been safer by reason of the great improvement in the system of operation. The government has also been directly benefited in the way of revenue. Under the system that prevails in Austria there are no construction companies to be paid exorbitant values, as in America. There are no rebates, and consequently no discrimination between shippers.—Chicago Times.

Rich Men's Charity.

Vanderbilt and other rich men of New York are going to open pawnshops, where only 1 per cent interest will be charged. And they call this Charity with a big C! Poor men and women, thrown out of employment by the contraction of currency and the demonetization of silver, may "put up" their clothing and household effects for a little money to feed upon until the better times, so long promised, come. Oh, what philanthropists these fellows are! Wonder if they will now lower the interest on the mortgages of the farmer or the rates of freight on the railroad? Next!—Knights of Labor Journal.

No More Solid South.

The Chicago Record says that Governor Tillman will increase the number of Populist senators by one, and "it looks very much as if under Tillman's leadership there would be a solid delegation of Populists from South Carolina in the next congress."

Railway Charges.

Here is a practical computation on the transporation problem that is very pertinent. It is from the Michigan City (Ind.) Headlight: Railroads carry a man from New York to San Francisco for $80, says an exchange. They also carry a hog weighing the same as a man for about $6. Congressmen who receive 20 cents mileage from Uncle Sam's cash box ride free. Advantage in being a hog, $74; advantage in favor of a congressman, $80. What's the matter with nationalizing the railroads?

[illegible] Changes [illegible]

The Populist [illegible] will continue [illegible] The masses [illegible] to bring them [illegible] is the only party [illegible] in favor of the use of [illegible] metal. In all our platforms and in every word uttered [illegible] the people may see [illegible] use of the people [illegible] free and unlimited [illegible] the ratio of 16 to 1. [illegible] ing such language. The [illegible] government in the [illegible] Great corporate interests [illegible] legislation and our legislators. [illegible] the fault of [illegible] have it [illegible] their hands [illegible] this. Our government should [illegible] absolutely all transportation [illegible] and all other public [illegible]. The government should control all [illegible] all mediums of public exchange.

The Populist isn't making any fuss of the tariff theories. If you will read our platform, you will see that we do not use the word at all. The Populists are opposed to alien land ownership. The masses see that this new party favors every fundamental principle which the early Republicans and the early Democrats formulated and put into use as the animating basis of their legislative measures. The people see that both of the old parties have abandoned those principles, and that the Populists have taken them up and adopted them as their own. For these reasons the Populist party is growing and will continue to grow until it is the ruling party that governs the land for the people.—Senator Peffer.

Contests In Georgia.

In Georgia the Populists do not propose to submit quietly to the open election frauds of the Democracy and have made 42 contests for seats in the legislature. This is right and just as it should be. The Populists fairly elected the governor and over 100 members of the legislature and propose to make a showing to the world of that fact.

It Is Ever Thus.

The lonely Populist member of the city council of Auburn, Me., has uncovered frauds that have set the town talking. Old party corruption, of course.—Exchange.

The Democratic party is slowly but surely breaking up. It exists now by fraud in sections. In the south its dominance is through fraudulent and suppressed votes.

The World's Columbian Exposition marked the climax of human achievement. It will live in memory of the crowning glory of modern times. No other development of the closing century can compare with it in practical benefit to mankind.

THE RUNAWAY STAR

The greatest velocity that has been recognized among the stars is found in the motion of a star known as 1830 Groombridge, or the runaway star," as it is sometimes called, which is believed to be rushing through space at the rate of 200 miles per second. This star appears to be moving in a perfectly straight line through the sky, and it may be visiting our star system for the first time, but whence it comes or whither it is going no one can tell, and it is a great enigma to astronomers.

Its wonderful velocity can not be explained, as it is far greater than could be produced by the influence of all known orbs in the universe, and, on the other hand, the combined attraction of all the other stars cannot stop this wanderer in its solitary flight through space, until it has rushed on to the remoter distances, beyond which the largest telescopes have never penetrated.

It has been mathematically demonstrated that a body approaching the center of our system from an infinite distance cannot move with a greater velocity than twenty-five miles a second, if influenced by the attraction of the masses in our universe alone, but here we have been considering a star moving with eight times that velocity, and still, notwithstanding the fact that it has the greatest motion known among the stars, it would require 185,000 years for this remarkable star to complete an entire circuit around the heavens.

Forty-Five Years of His Life Gone.

About forty-five years ago Clem Wallis, then a boy 15 years of age, went out to his father's pasture to catch a frisky colt. As he was about to place a halter around its neck the colt kicked him in the head, making a ragged wound. The wound healed, but it soon became apparent that the boy was slightly demented. His hallucination took peculiar forms. He would travel up and down the bay on the steamboats, claiming proprietorship and refusing to pay fare. The steamboat men humored him, as he was considered daft. He was the butt of the small boys' jokes and banter. He has lived in the village since and is now 60 years of age. About six weeks ago the local physicians determined to experiment on his case. They found that a portion of his skull had been forced into contact with the brain by the blow, and by a skillful operation they removed the pressure. The man recovered his reason, and the first question he asked when he recovered from the operation was, "Did the colt get away?" He is perfectly sane now, but forty-five years of his life are a blank to him.—Portland (Me.) Advertiser.

GIVING THANKS FOR TURKEY.

We're thankful for the things we eat,
The oysters with the turkey meat,
The health we have, the sweet content
With blessings which to us are sent;
The golden, glorious pumpkin pies,
The hope of heaven beyond the skies;
The sweet potatoes, piping hot,
The clustered blue forget-me-not;
The celery crisp and cold and white,

The chicken gravy, seasoned right;
The royal pones of sweet corn bread,
The righteous sleep of all our dead;
The yellow beet, the parsnip brown,
The cross that must precede the crown;
The butter served in pots of gold,
On pancakes of heroic mold;
The wide expanse of all things good,
Nowise less toothsome, though they're rude.
And last of all, our dinner done,
We hasten to give thanks as one
Who feels that thanks are more due
For medicine to pull him through.

JOHN'S FORTUNE.

A Story for Thanksgiving.

"You may run and invite Willie Dean and his mother to eat dinner with us if you like," said the widow Blythe, as she closed the oven doors of the tiny stove and began searching in deep trunk for her grandmother's home-made table-cloth. "O, thank you, mother!" exclaimed Johnny Blythe. "I was feeling awfully piggish at the idea of our eating such a nice dinner all by ourselves," and seizing his hat he cleared the steep stairway, three steps at a time, and bounding out upon the narrow, ill-smelling street in the gray of the November afternoon, he came near running over a little old man in a tall hat, who stood on the curb-stone gazing steadily up at their windows. "I beg your pardon, sir; please excuse me, sir!" he cried. "I was in such a hurry you see; my mother sent me to bid guests to her Thanksgiving dinner, and it is already late." Hurrying along the little lad dove into a stairway a few rods further down. Presently he returned very much out of breath, and once more ran against the very same little old man. "O, dear sir!" he cried, with undiminished good-humor, "do please pardon me. I fear I came near doing you a mischief. I found them gone, and I was hurrying so as to tell mother, and see if there is any one else whom we might invite. We know so very few people in the city, you see, sir."

"It's late to send out invitations," said the old man in a high-pitched voice, and Johnny replied courteously; "It is, indeed, sir; but the chickens and fixins never reached us until quite noon to-day. We had no idea of having a Thanksgiving, and queer enough it seemed; but just as soon as Auntie Ray's box came, and we had slipped the things into the oven, mamsy and I began to cast about in our minds to see who we could invite. Are you invited anywhere, sir?"—"I!" echoed the little man; "I invited to Thanksgiving! Who ever thought of such a thing?" "Why, sir, I did," smiled Johnny. "You look kind."—"I look kind!" repeated the little, old man. "Who said so?"—"Why I did, sir," laughed Johnny. "Will you come with me? It is just up here. The stairs are all funny, and the last flight is narrow and crooked. We live clear at the top. Just this way, please." "Yes, yes; I know," replied the old man querulously. "As if I didn't know! There, there, go ahead, boy. I shall get along all right." "I have brought some one," said Johnny, opening the door of the living room. "Not the ones you sent for; they were invited to eat dinner at the school, where Willie goes; so the woman in the next room said. This gentleman seemed glad to come. I was twice near running over him, and I owed him some acknowledgement."

"I am glad to welcome you, sir," said the pleasant faced little woman, in her plain, neat, black gown and white apron, with soft brown hair brushed smoothly each side her winsome face. "We are New England people, sir, and we could not make it seem right to eat our Thanksgiving dinner alone. We have not been here long, and we hardly know any one; it seems so strange and this city life is so different what we supposed. We had good neighbors at home, and they sent us our dinner; and kind it was of them, for they did not approve of our coming here at all. But I wanted to give my boy a better chance at schooling than he could have there. He wanted to be an architect; he had a natural bent that way. You ought to see the plans he has made for reconstructing this queer old house." "Let me see them," said the man, and Johnny brought out a large sheet of brown paper, and spread it on the floor. This is the house as it is now," he said. "These two rooms are ours." "A queer place to put a woman born and bred in a roomy Connecticut farm house," put in Mrs. Blythe; "but it don't do for me to talk it over much."

"No, it don't do to talk over much," said the old man. "This house used to be good enough for the best, and these rooms were the nursery and school room. No wonder the banisters are thin; we, young kids have slid down them times enough." "He is out of his head a little, I fancy," whispered Johnny to his mother, and to the guest he said: "Will you not sit in this chair, sir? It is more comfortable, you look tired." "No, no; I'm not tired. It is the day, the day; and the street, Bond street; yes, Bond street! Who would believe it? Are you not afraid this rickety house will fall down about your ears, madam?"—"O, no, the foundations are sound, I am told. It was built in the old days, when—"—"Yes, in the old days, the old days," interrupted the old man. "Thank you, madam, I am glad to be seated at the table. I have been out longer than I intended. I fancy I am faint from long fasting. I doubt if I have breakfasted. These anniversary days are hard days—hard, hard days. I remember how we young kids used sometimes to have lunch up here when there was a party down stairs, but they are all gone, all gone." "Yes the brain is turned," whispered the woman in an aside to her son; "but he seems entirely harmless."

When they were seated about the little round table, the hostess said a short simple prayer of gratitude, thanking God for his provision for the feast, and for sending them a guest to partake of it "Amen! That is good," said the old man, reverently. "But may I ask, do you mean it? Are you glad to have me here? Are you not afraid of me? I am old fashioned and queer." "One is never afraid of a Christian and a gentleman." "Well, afraid for your viands, then. What! sage summer savory, thyme? Bless my soul, I am fearful you will think my appetite something tremendous." Certainly good Auntie Ray, up in Tolland County, Connecticut, who stuffed the fat chicken for the lonely widow and orphan, would have been of that opinion had they seen how rapidly it disappeared. The mince pie was equally appreciated, and the Indian pudding. As he finished his tea, he crossed the room, and, looking into the street, exclaimed: "O, there is a hot chestnut vender. Here is a silver piece: follow him quickly please! O and bless my soul, there is a vender of butter-taffy, and the lad is gone! O, my dear madam you are younger than I; here is another silver piece; will you follow, and make a purchase?"

"I fear we ought not to have left him alone, with my grandmother's solid silver spoons on the table," she said to Johnny, as they met on the sidewalk; but when they reached the top floor the little old man was standing where they had left him, gazing far off at the west, where the sun threw a golden light, that for the moment glorified all below. "The sky is never for a moment the same, and yet it is unchangeable," he said. "It is like the love of God. He has been wonderfully good to me to-day. I thank you both for entertaining me so kindly. It has been the happiest Thanksgiving for many years. Good-bye, good-bye;" and he hurried away, in spite of their protests that he had not tasted the nuts and taffy. "Well, I never saw the like," said Mrs. Blythe; "and he never told us his name, and we didn't ask him to call again. Well, we will clear away the dinner, and then we will eat the nuts. Why, what is this in my tea-cup?"—"And what is this in my saucer?" echoed Johnny, who, as usual, had taken hold to help his mother. "This is a gold-piece." "So is this; and here is one under my plate and under yours; and there is silver and nickle small change among the chicken bones, and a bank-note in the sugar bowl. He must have been busy while we were down stairs, and then I mistrusted that he might steal my spoons;" and good Mrs. Blythe fairly sobbed. "He must have been an angel unawares." "Or a prince in disguise, or a fairy godfather," said Johnny. "We can move right away now to a better street can't we mother?"

The next morning the agent, who collected the monthly rents, came to say that the house was to be vacated immediately as it was to be rebuilt at once. To Mrs. Blythe he said: "You and your son, madam, are to move to No. 1,—Street. The tenement is ready for you, and here is a receipt for a year's rent in payment for the plan your son furnished for the reconstruction of this house." The widow was nearly speechless with joy and surprise; but in reply to her almost incoherent questions the agent explained: "Your yesterday's guest was the owner of the house. He was born here. This was formerly a street of fashionable residences. On anniversary days he always comes down for a look at the old place, and it always makes him ill, but last evening he sent for me to give these orders, and seemed very happy because he had got hold of a new idea to work out." They found the little old man waiting for them on the steps of the new uptown tenement.

"You are old-fashioned folk," he said; "you, madam, are not ashamed to say grace at your own table. My mother used to acknowledge God in that way. And your son is the most polite little fellow I've seen this many a day. I mean to educate him if you will let me." "It is Connecticut good fortune after all," said Johnny. "Aunty Ray, sent it down in her box of goodies." "I don't know," said the little old man, who was as merry as Johnny himself. "I think your good luck was in your desire to share with some one poorer than yourselves." "Everything works together for good to those who love God," said the widow with grateful tears.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

By Theron Brown.

"Our harvest being gotten in, our governor sent four men on fowling that so we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labor."—Letter to George Morton, in England, from Edward Winslow in Plymouth, Dec. 11, 1621.

Quoth Bradford, "God will give us meat;
Ye four, to-morrow morn,
Go forth and hunt for flesh to eat,
While others grind the corn.
Our fields are gleaned, the woods are not:
Be sure no firelock falls;
Our manna feast this year at least
Shall smoke with store of quails.
And He who Israel filled and clad
Will hear our heart's desire,
And bid His desert-church make glad
By every household fire."

They went to smite the flying duck,
And lay the pigeon low,
With pouch and gun (was Standish one?),
And Plymouth saw them go.

Did Howland's roaring matchlock pick
The squirrel from his tree?
Did fluttering partridge feel the prick
Of Winslow's light fusee?
Did Alden's deadly blunderbuss
Impale the rabbit brown,
Or the bold "Captain's" musket snap
And bring the turkey down?

No ballad of that ancient chase
Hath named the fowlers four,
But still in thought the spoil they brought
We count at Bradford's door,
And see old Plymouth gathered round
That first Thanksgiving fare
To bless the meat whose savor sweet
Went up with Brewster's prayer.

A PECULIAR FISH.

It Was Blue in Front and Yellow Behind and Had a Hog's Head.

One of the most peculiar specimens of the finny tribe that has ever been hooked in this section of the country was brought yesterday evening by Messrs. William Markel, of 79 Dufossat street, and Mr. R. Gogrieve, of 300 Broadway. They caught this curiosity at the Rigolets, and every fisherman who saw it was puzzled at it. None like it has ever been seen here before, it is claimed, but one old soldier says that he saw one in a distant sea nineteen years ago, and that it was called the hogfish.

The head of the fish strongly resembles a hog, and the flesh looks like pork. There are three tall fins, but they are unlike those of the ordinary fish. The front part of the curiosity is deep blue in color and the rear is a bright yellow. These colors are so pronounced that at first sight they appear to have been put on with a brush. When it was caught there were several other hues, but these disappeared, and the blue and yellow were fading when it was brought yesterday evening.

Mr. Markel said that the fish was swimming on its side, like a flounder, in the reeds nearly half a mile from the bridge when he saw it. It would not bite the bait, but nibbled at it, so he was compelled to hook it by a sudden jerk of the line. When the gentleman left the office last night they expressed their intention of having it frozen in a block of ice and exhibiting it. It is one of the most peculiar freaks ever hooked in the waters of this section.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

And the Groom Survives.

One of the pleasures of being married in Paris is that you have two ceremonies, two wedding dresses, two sets of guests and congratulations all done over again, and, although there is an interval between the two ceremonies, you know that you are not really married until you have gone through both. It is almost like being married twice.

THE OLD TURKEY-SLAYER.

He Tells How He Used to Bag Turkeys When There Were Lots of Them.

John Corvell, one of the old time hunters of Missouri still lives in a little log cabin under the shadow of the Boston Mountains, on the bank of White river. Corvell is a little, stoop-shouldered old man, with only one eye to look at the world through, but it does one good to hear him relate stories and adventures of the past, when the country down there was full of big game.

"I hear the boys now talking about hunting turkeys," he said, not long ago. "They think it's a big thing ter git a gobbler or two in a day's tramp. Why they don't know how to get the drop on the smartest game that ever walked. When I hunted turks I uster to go out with a peck of shelled corn to the place where they used when feedin' an, scatter it around. Then I'd find a big log and a place right in line with it where I could hide. I'd just drop the corn in lines running in different directions but all leading up to the log, on the top of which I'd place as much uv the feed as I could; then I'd get in under cover and smoke my pipe til I'd see the turkeys a-comin' along pickin' the off'n it. I'd just sight my old double barreled gun so the charge uv shot would rake the whole length uv the log, an' then I'd let her pop. Why, it was nothin' at all fur me to kill a dozen turkeys in that way with one barrel. I can't see very well anymore. I lost one eye in a scrimmage with a bear, and t'other one is gittin' kinder tired doin' all the squintin'.

"There's lots of deer down in this country yit, but not like they uster be. I know'd the time when every gol-dasted man along the White had a deer-lick of his own. There be some uv 'em yit. Ye see, when ye want to make a good deer-lick ye pick out a likely place near the river, and cut down a tree if there don't happen ter be one already down that is suitable, an' bore a lot uv auger holes in it an' fill 'em up with salt. Ye keep doin' the fillin' up as fast as the deers lap the salt out with their tongues, until they git uster comin' every time they feel too fresh, an' when the family needs some meat ye go out early in the marnin' an' knock over a buck or a doe, jist as ye fancy. Ye kin alus find the deers at the lick in the mornin'. But it makes me feel as if I wanted ter move outen this part uv the country when I see all the darnation fools plantin' corn an' wheat when there's deer an' turkey left in the woods an' no end uv fish swimmin' up an' down the White awaitin' fur some one ter ketch 'em."—Globe Democrat.

GRANDMA'S THANKSGIVING.

She Draws a Picture for the Young Folks.

"Thanksgiving Day in New England in the olden times then was a rare sight dearies," said grandma, with a wistful smile on her sweet old face, for the children who asked her to tell them a story. "Thee has played 'Going to the King's Country.' Well, on that day our house, grandpa's and mine, was the palace, and we gave a banquet, where gathered the knights and ladies of our families—Dorcases, Dorothys, Susies and Prudences Obediahs, and Isaacs, in their pretty gray frocks, kerchiefs, and long snuff-colored coats, all laughing and chattering gaily as thee does at Christmas. Browner turkeys thee never did see. Cranberries were never prettier, celery never stood up saucier, and as for apples, nuts, plum-pudding and pies, ask thy father, pets, if he has ever tasted any since, that made his eyes shine brighter. Dearie me! how those children did eat! but Thanksgiving only came once a year, and I always kept plenty of mustard and soda."

"The next is full of sadness, Pettie."

"What's tadness?"

"Something that makes your heart ache."

"Rollie ain't dot none, since he ate dreen apples; draw another wivout dat, Drandma."

"I can't my darling; the king's chair is vacant, and the lonely old queen cannot talk of the empty palace."

Lonely? with eight little arms hugging her close, and eight little knees clambering for a place, and forty fingers dabbing at the tears, and four bright heads bumping together as eight red lips struggled for a kiss! No, grandma is not lonely; her children's children will not let her be on this, her last Thanksgiving Day outside of "The King's Country.—Woman's Work.

MADE A NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

Congress Early Returned Thanks For Victory and Peace.

For more than eighty years the appointment of Thanksgiving was more or less erratic. As a regularly instituted State festival, it was plant of slow growth, not taking firm root until after the close of the seventeenth century; but whenever or wherever the miscellaneous appointments were made, the day generally came in the ripe autumn, when the rich gifts of bounteous nature were gathered in and storehouses were overflowing with ripened grain, and fruits laid up for winter use.

Both governors and pastors agreed in their respective states in proclaiming a day of festivity and praise, but not seldom the appointments fell upon different dates in different states, which was a matter of small comparative moment at that time, when steam had not bridged space with its rapid transit, and families who were separated by long distances could not flock to the old homesteads as they learned to do later.

In the autumn of 1789 a resolution was offered in the house by Boudinot, requesting the president to appoint a day of Thanksgiving to be kept in all the states, in recognition of the "many signal favors of Almighty God, and especially for the opportunity afforded the nation to establish constitutional government." Sherman supported the motion, but Burke and others opposed it as a mimicry of European customs. Tucker, in a truly conservative spirit, advised postponing the expression of gratitude till after some experience of the constitution and its effects. But in spite of opposition and hot debate, the motion was carried by a large majority.

A Thanksgiving Fable.

The greedy turkey gobbled up the goodly fare and grew fatter day by day but the proudest turkey, suspicious of such bountiful grub, refused to eat it and grew rapidly thinner.

Finally the master came and said: "Better keep the fat turkey for Christmas; if we do not kill the thin turkey he may die on our hands."—Brooklyn Life.

Could Afford It.

First Physician—Is this a case that demands a consultation?

Second Physician—I think it is. The patient is extremely rich.

Confusing.

"Who is that beautiful blonde?"

"My wife, sir."

"Ah! I beg pardon. The fact is, I proposed to her just now, and"—

"And she refused you?"

"No—she accepted me."

You can't argue with a bigot without agreeing with him in thinking that you are a fool.

IN Society women often feel the effect of too much gayety—balls, theatres, and teas in rapid succession find them worn out, or "run-down" by the end of the season. They suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness and irregularities. The smile and good spirits take flight. It is time to accept the help offered in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine which was discovered and used by a prominent physician for many years in all cases of "female complaint" and the nervous disorders which arise from it. The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nervine, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures.

Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion or to disorder of the special functions. The waste products should be quickly got rid of, the local source of irritation relieved and the system invigorated with the "Prescription." Do not take the so-called celery compounds, and nervines which only put the nerves to sleep, but get a lasting cure with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"FEMALE WEAKNESS."

MRS. WILLIAM HOOVER, of Bellville, Richland Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been a great sufferer from 'female weakness;' I tried three doctors; they did me no good; I thought I was an invalid forever. But I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and then I wrote to him and he told me just how to take it. I took eight bottles. I now feel entirely well. I could stand on my feet only a short time, and now I do all my work for my family of five."

BLOOD MAY BE SHED

PROSPECTS OF LIVELY TIMES IN MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Kolb Arrives and Declares That He Will Be Sworn In—His Adherents Flock Into Town—Many Militiamen on the Scene.

Montgomery, Ala., Dec 2.—Kolb has arrived here and says that he will be sworn in this afternoon. There is grave apprehension of trouble. The advance guard of Kolbites arrived last night, and they are talking very bitterly to-day. The Kolbite members of the legislature now admit a possible conflict, and last night held a caucus at which they passed strong resolutions disclaiming any responsibility for any lawlessness that may occur. There is fear that some crank, laboring under excitement, may attempt to assassinate Oates or Jones, and extra precautions will be taken to protect both.

A prominent leader of Populists, Hon. Frank Baltzel, editor of the Alliance Herald, and who is in a position to speak for Kolb, said to-day that he did not expect any overt acts or revolutionary course by the People's party followers, for the reason that the party has spoken against it and everything unfavorable for such a movement. The outlook, however, is rather warlike. Several thousand militiamen are here. Armed Kolbites are pouring into town, and it will be a wonder if blood is not shed. Kolb's plans will not be made known until afternoon.

DEMANDS REPARATION.

England May Cause Serious Trouble for China.

Yokohama, Dec. 2. — That Great Britain has assumed an extremely threatening attitude toward China is asserted with great emphasis and directness by correspondents in Pekin and Tien Tsin. The apparent neglect of the former power to demand reparation for the Chung King affront (when Japanese passengers sailing under the British flag were outraged and robbed by Chinamen) has never ceased to be a matter of surprise, but if reports now current are well grounded it is evident that the wrath of the English government is not slumbering for a moment. We now hear of considerable preparation for the enforcement of satisfaction. Admiral Freemantle has summoned the entire British fleet to meet at Shanghai to await the arrival of a strong military force from India, the landing of which at Chu San is to be effected without delay. The British envoy is to demand payment of a large sum of money, the degradation and dismissal of the chief magistrate holding office at Tien Tsin, and an avowal of regret accompanied by a salute to the flag from the guns of the Taku forts. If these conditions are not promptly fulfilled, troops and war ships will commence reprisals. Startling as this intelligence sounds, it is repeated from various quarters, and on alleged official authority.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE.

Resources of a Receiver Must Pay the Claims of the Poor.

Dubuque, Iowa, Dec. 2.—"Pay the poor first," is the spirit of the order issued by Judge Shiras last night to Receiver Allen, of the American Investment Company of Emmetsburg, Iowa, June 7, when the receiver was appointed. Claims aggregating $160,000 had been filed for collection on the martgages which President Ormsby had failed to remit to the mortgage holders. Judge Shiras last night heard the complaint of Eliza Caroll, whose little $600 was invested in one of these mortgages, and he ordered the receiver to prefer all such claims. The assets applicable to this purpose are about sufficient. The mortgages held by the Mercantile Trust Company of New York are said to be sold in that city Dec. 14 to redeem the debentures. If Judge Shiras had not made this order of last night, it would have been practicable for New York speculators holding most of the debentures to carry out a plan they had formed to buy these mortgages below their value and present a claim to the receiver for the remainder necessary to satisfy the debentures. Now, however, the resources of the receiver will be used first in paying the preferred claims.

Butler Heard From.

Oelwein, Iowa, Dec. 2.—A telegram from Grundy Center, Iowa, was received here late last evening by one of the gentlemen interested in the search for the missing college president and ex-congressman from this town, Hon. W. H. Butler, who disappeared from here so mysteriously on the evening of Nov. 22, stating that Butler was in that city yesterday and requested the city marshal to put him in the jail for the night. Upon being refused he immediately left the town. The marshal was not aware who the party, making the request was until too late to apprehend him. He appeared to be in a demented condition.

Cutting Off Men.

Hawarden, Iowa, Dec. 2.—The railroads in this section of Iowa and in South Dakota and Nebraska adjoining, are making the greatest cuts in their forces that were ever known. Business is lighter than ever before in the history of the Iowa lines, and they are taking off trains and discharging men by the hundred. The reductions are seriously affecting business in many towns.

Kiled in a Fight.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Dec. 2.—John Tregler shot and killed Samuel Daniels last night in an altercation over a rooster fight. Tregler and H. Monroe, a plumber, who was mixed up in the scrape, are in jail.

Cater's Trial On.

Decorah, Iowa, Dec. 2.—The attorneys have finished empaneling a jury in the district court here in the case of the State of Iowa vs. John H. Cater, indicted for murder in the first degree.

SWEARINGER A FIEND.

Another Murder Charged up to his Account.

Elkhart, Ind., Dec. 2—George Swearinger, who attempted to murder his son-in-law, August Vetter, and who is also wanted at Fargo, N. D., for one of the most cold-blooded and most horrifying murders ever committed in that state, is guilty of another murder. Isaac Kohn mysteriously disappeared from South Bend. He was a wealthy stock owner, and at the time he was lured to his death was known to be in possession of a large sum of money. He was followed to Chicago by Swearinger. That was the last seen of him alive; detective skill being unable to solve the mystery. Swearinger also disappeared, and was next located at Fargo, N. D., where he brutally murdered a man named Moxom. Swearinger, who has now been proved guilty of three murders, will not escape the gallows.

CONDITION OF TRADE.

The Holiday Business Is Now Begun—Advance in Prices.

New York, Dec. 2—Bradstreet's says: There is no general or radical improvement in business at the South, the Southwest or the Northwest. But in central Western states, and particularly at some important cities in the old Middle and Northwestern states the reverse is true; a material gain in demand for many seasonable staples having shown itself, with a corresponding increase in volumes of goods distributed or orders for future delivery. This is independent of stimulous to trade in certain lines due to the approaching holidays and in spite of the check to the volume of general business within the week caused by Thanksgiving holiday. A sharp revival in prices is shown by quotations from some grades of lumber, but more particularly for cotton, wheat, oats and lard, improving prices of the first two of which having had an influence for good.

New Rules for Diagnosing Lung Diseases.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 3.—(Special.)—An edition of 100,000 copies of Prof. W. R. Amick's new treatise on lung diseases has just been sent out to physicians by the Amick Chemical company, compounders of Dr. Amick's Chemical Treatment. Old practitioners say the book contains the most complete set of rules for diagnosing consumption ever published. The disease is divided into distinct phases and stages, enabling the least experienced to determine the condition of the patient's lungs. Indications for treating complications are given, together with many valuable prescriptions. The company will distribute from Cincinnati a large free addition to consumptives throughout the country.

Look Out for Him.

Chamberlain, S. D., Dec. 2 — A smooth-tongued fakir has recently been successful in victimizing a large number of the residents of Northwestern Nebraska. He had a large bundle of samples and stated that he was an agent for Wanamaker & Brown of Philadelphia. He carried a fine line of samples and his prices were very low. His plan was to take orders and collect $2 cash on each order, the ballance to be collected on delivery of the goods. He took many orders in that section, and up to date no one has received the clothes for which they have partly paid. A letter from Wanamaker & Brown states that they are not acquainted with their alleged representative.

Public Debt Statement.

Washington, Dec. 2. — The regular monthly treasury debt statement, issued to-day, shows an excess of expenditures over receipts for the month of November of $6,166,367, which makes the deficiency for the five months of the present fiscal year, $22,510,226. The receipts from customs during November were $10,259,892; from internal revenue, $7,774,074; from miscellaneous sources, $1,376,637, making the total receipts for the month, $19,411,403, and for the last five months, $136,530,917. The disbursements for the month amount to $27,567,770, of which $12,037,505 is on account of pensions, making the disbursements for the five months $158,909,045.

They Were Impostors.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 2.—The steamship Victoria arrived to-day bringing advices from the Associated Press correspondent at Yokohama up to Nov. 17. No trouble is expected to result from the affair of the steamer Sydney. The United States government is understood to regard the action of Japan as justifiable on the grounds of self-defense, and Great Britain coincides, although some form of explanation or apology may be deemed desirable. France has taken a less easy view of the situation, but it not disposed to make serious difficulties. Later developments indicate that the self-declared explosive experts were irresponsible speculators, if not impostors.

MONEY OF THE NATION

CONTROLLER ECKELS SUBMITS HIS ANNUAL REPORT.

He Recommends That Banks Be Permitted to Issue Circulating Notes to an Amount Equal to Fifty per Cent of Their Unimpaired Capital.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The report of Hon. James H. Eckels, controller of the currency, was submitted to congress to-day, and gives full information in regard to the organization, supervision and liquidation of the national banks for the year ended Oct. 31, 1894. It shows that during this period but fifty banks were organized, with a capital stock of $5,285,000, the smallest number chartered, as well as the minimum amount of capital in any one year since 1870. Of these new banks twenty-seven are in Northern and Eastern states, ten in the Southern States and thirteen in the Western and trans-Mississippi division.

On Oct. 31, 1894, the total number of national banks in operation was 3,756, with an authorized capital stock of $672,671,365, represented by 7,935,076 shares of stock owned by 287,892 shareholders. On Oct. 2, 1894, the date of their last report of condition, the total resouces of the banks were $3,473,922,055, of which their loans and discounts amounted to $2,007,122,191 and money of all kinds in banks $422,428,192. Of their liabilities $1,728,418,819 represented individual deposits, $334,121,062 surplus and net undivided profits and $172,331,078 circulating notes outstanding. The total circulation of national banks on Oct. 31, 1894, amounted to $207,472,603, a net decrease during the year of $1,741,563 and a gross decrease of $8,614,864 in circulation secured by bonds. During the year seventy-nine banks, with an aggregate capital stock of $10,475,000, passed out of the system by voluntary liquidation; twenty-one, including two which failed in 1893, with a capital stock of $2,770,000, became insolvent and were placed in charge of receivers.

New Currency System.

He considers that the present national bank note system is sound, but it lacks elasticity, but the people will not be content with any innovation unless such new departure insures the same safety that now exists. The report then says:

"It is respectfully suggested that not only as good but better results would be attained if the present bank act were amended by repealing the provision thereof requiring each bank, as a pre-requisite to entering the system and issuing bank note currency, to deposit government bonds. In lieu of such provision should be substituted one permitting the banks to issue circulating notes against their assets to an amount equal to at least 50 per cent of their unimpaired capital."

The controller follows this suggestion with the further one for the maintenance of a safety fund, to be provided by graduated taxation upon the outstanding circulation of the banks, until the same shall be equal to less than 5 per cent of the total of such outstanding circulation, this fund to be held by the government, as an agent only, and for the purpose of immediately redeeming the notes of insolvent banks. It is immediately to be replenished out of the assets of the banks on which it shall have a first and paramount lien, and from assessments to the extent of the double liability on the shareholders.

The controller then cites such proof and gives such statistics as seem to him to make the plan suggested a perfectly safe one to enter upon. He says: "The changes thus outlined will, upon investigation, it is believed, prove to be safe in affording complete security to the note holder and give to the buisness interests of the country a bank note issue responsive to their needs."

To Avoid Delay.

It is suggested that, as a necessary element to the securing of a proper elasticity of issue in our bank note currency, Section 9, Act of July 12, 1892, regulating the retirement and issue of circulation to banks within a fixed period of time, should be repealed, and also that an amendment should be made to the law necessitating the banks keeping in the office of the controller of the currency a sufficient amount of bank notes as will enable them to secure circulation at once, instead of after a period of delay.

Suggestions have been received from many eminent sources that the whole question of a banking and currency system ought to be referred by congress to a commission, to be created by law, appointed by the president and clothed with proper authority. A commission, non-partisan in its character, composed of men of eminent abilities, could unquestionably devise a currency system sound in every part, and one which would commend itself to every interest of the country. It would largely take the question out of politics and have it considered simply in its business aspects and upon its merits; but if the present congress is to enact a law upon the subject, appointment of a commission could avail nothing. If, however, nothing more definite can be accomplished, the question of the creation of such a commission ought to be considered and acted upon.

Washington, Dec. 4.—An error has been discovered in the enrolling of the sundry civil appropriation bill of the current year, which has seriously inconvenienced several states in securing surveys.

HIRSHFIELD BEATEN.

And Della Is Declared to be His Lawful Wife.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 4.—The Hirshfield case is ended, and the young bride of the Montana millionaire has been declared by a court of equity to be a legal wife. Judge McConnell gave the decision denying the application of Aaron Hirshfield for the annulment of the marriage contract at the conclusion of arguments of counsel. The decision was given orally, the court stating it did not care to point out testimony unworthy of credence. The plaintiff's claim, he said, that two armed men forced him to accompany the defendant to the office of a justice of the peace, where they were married under duress, must be substantiated so clearly that there was little room for doubt, or it must be shown that the plaintiff's mental condition was such that he was incapable of making a contract. The first proposition he did not think was clearly sustained. He believed Aaron Hirshfield was a changed man, but not to the extent that he could be held to be irresponsible. He had taken careful note of the evidence; had followed each witness closely, and was confident he had lost no point that would be of benefit to the plaintiff, and saw no other way in justice than to hold the marriage contract valid and deny a decree.

When the judge commenced to deliver his decision the silence was profound. The spectators leaned forward with anxiety depicted on every countenance. The judge had given warning that there was to be no applause, and the crowd respected his command; but when he said "I deny the decree," the sigh of relief that went up swelled to a murmur of approval, which was promptly hushed by the bailiffs scattered throughout the court room. But outside the court house nothing could prevent the jubilation of the crowd. Women who had never seen the plaintiff till she came to Fargo pressed forward to grasp her hand before leaving the room. "I am a happy woman again, for the first time in years," was all she could say.

DOUBLE HEADER IN ALABAMA.

The State in Enjoyment of Two Governments.

Montgomery, Ala., Dec 4.—The State of Alabama for the first time in its history has two governors and two separate sets of state officers. Col. Oates and those elected on his ticket preside at the state house. Capt. Kolb and his cabinet have not announced their official headquarters. Saturday was the day fixed by law for the inauguration of a governor and state officers. The returns of the August election showed the election of the Democratic ticket headed by Col. Oates, by over 27,000 majority. The legislature in joint session had regularly counted and announced the result. Capt. Kolb, Oates' opponent, the nominee of the Populists, charged fraud and claimed he had received a majority of the votes cast, and was the rightful heir to the governor's office. He demanded, therefore, to be sworn in, and was. Surrounded by members of the legislature and with the usual pomp of military display, Col. Oates took the oath of office upon the steps of the state capitol, standing on the very spot on which Jefferson Davis stood when he was sworn in as president of the Southern Confederacy. Numerous threats had been made by misguided friends of Capt. Kolb, and to avoid any possibility of anything like violence, as well as to lend a spirit to the occasion, more than twenty companies of state troops with loaded cartridges in their belts were present and participated in the inauguration ceremonies, which were, however, without disorderly events. Capt. Kolb was not permitted to speak from the capitol steps, and the captain mounted a wagon and made a speech. He was afterward sworn in. There was some excitement but no bloodshed. It is not known what Kolb's plans are.

ALLEGED SWINDLE.

A Duluth Man Said to Be Out a Large Sum.

Boston Dec. 4.—For over a week past private detectives from Chicago have been in this city searching for Dr. R. C. Flower of that city, who was arrested on a northbound train at Conroe, Tex., yesterday. The charges are that he, in conjunction with a man named Paschal R. Smith, sold to Nathaniel C. Foster of Duluth, Minn., $100,000 worth of the bonds of the Deming Land and Water Company of New Mexico for $67,000, asserting that to be first mortgage bonds. When Mr. Foster tried to realize on the paper it is alleged he found it was practically worthless.

Death of Mrs. La Croix.

St. Paul, Dec. 4—Mrs. Rose Delma La Croix died yesterday afternoon of pneumonia at her residence, corner of Robertson street and Fairfield avenue, on the West side. Mrs. La Croix was sixty years of age and has resided in St. Paul since 1853, coming here from Montreal, where she was born in 1834. She was a sister of John St. Aubin and her parents were among the early settlers in the city. She lived in the house in which she died for the past thirty years, and was well known as a philanthropist and friend of the poor.

Yale Plays With Princeton.

New York, Dec. 4.—In spite of the rain and cold Manhattan field was as crowded as it usually is on Thanksgiving day, at the foot ball game between Yale and Princeton, and fully 30,000 within and without the grounds saw Princeton's colors dragged in the mud and snow for a score of 24 to 0.

Reached to Texas for Him.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 4. — Gov. Altgeld has issued a requisition on the governor of Texas for the return of R. C. Flower of Chicago on a charge of defrauding Nathaniel C. Foster out of $45,000 on an alleged $700,000 New Mexico land deal. Flower was arrested at Galveston.

CONGRESS AT WORK.

LAST SESSION OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

It Opens at Noon and the Annual Message of President Cleveland Is Read—Work That May Be Done Before March 4.

Washington, Dec. 4. — The second session of the Fifty-third congress began at noon to-day. Vice President Stevenson presided in the senate and Speaker Crisp in the house. The president's message was listened to with great interest.

Beyond the passage of the regular appropriation bills, it seems probable that little in the way of legislation will be accomplished at the short session, although several important propositions will doubtless be pressed to the front. Among the members of the dominant party in the house, over half of whom were defeated for re-election, there is a great deal of bitter feeling against the administration for real or fancied grievances. It will be the purpose of the Democratic leaders to curb as far as possible the display of resentment, but the Republicans will spare no pains to provoke and goad their defeated adversaries into letting loose their vials of wrath. If the president outlines a financial scheme in his message as is anticipated, it will probably furnish the opponents of his banking and financial views their desired opportunity. In the course of the session it is understood the Nicaragua canal project will be brought prominently forward. At the opening of congress, however routine matters will be kept to the fore to stave off as far as possible unpleasant references to the election, which will prove distasteful to the majority, but this policy can only be partially successful, as the latitude allowed in debate on appropriation bills will throw the doors open to remarks on any subject. Before the adjournment for the holidays it will be necessary to pass an appropriation to carry out the tariff bill provision levying a tax on incomes, the collection of which begins Jan. 1, and while it will no doubt meet with much opposition and lead to a general review of the arguments against such a tax, the general impression is that it will pass by a large majority. The impeachment of Judge Ricks, of the Northern district of Ohio will also furnish a diversion before the holidays if the judiciary committee which investigated the charges should present a resolution of impeachment and it should carry. The trial would occur in the senate, the chief justice presiding. Impeachment proceedings are rare and novel, and this one, the first since the trial of President Johnson, would attract national attention.

The senate begins with a full calendar, a result of committee action during the long session, and it contains at least 200 items, covering a wide range of matters. Nothing has transpired to indicate which of these 200 questions will receive first attention, or whether they will be taken in their order, or whether the calendar will be followed at all.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Annual Report of the Civil Service Commission.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The eleventh annual report of the United States civil service commission shows that from July 1, 1893, to June 30, 1894, there were 4,372 appointments made in the classified service, an increase of 83 over the previous year. Politics are said to have been practically eliminated in making appointments and removals in almost all of the larger post-offices, as well as in most branches of the departmental service at Washington. There have been complaints from many of the smaller offices showing that a large number of removals have been made for political reasons, although other offenses, generally of a minor character, are alleged as the ground for dismissal. In some offices there have been practically clean sweeps. The law has been rigidly observed in the railway mail service, and neither appointments nor removals have been made for political reasons. Gratifying progress is reported in the administration of the civil service law in the Indian school service. The great majority of appointees have been retained and new appointments have been made without reference to political considerations.

The report states that from the terms of the law politics should have nothing to do with continuance in or exit from the service, but that to some extent religious and political reasons will influence dismissals until there is a requirement of law or rule that not only shall the reasons for dismissal be made a matter of record and be made known to the person dismissed, but that an opportunity be given for defense.

After Them Again.

St. Paul, Dec. 4.—It was learned today that witnesses were being subpoenaed to attend the coming session of the United States court in St. Paul, to give testimony against the Austin and Preston pension boards, and it is certain that an attempt will be made to again indict the members of these boards. It will be remembered that on the trials under previous indictments, all but Dr. Hollister were acquitted, Hollister being fined $1,000.

Embezzlement of $20,000.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Otto E. Enell was arrested here to-day, charged with embezzling $20,000 from the firm of Stevenson & Enell, wallpaper dealers at Goodland, Newton county, Ind.

Black Hills Coal Fields.

Chamberlain, S. D., Dec. 4.—George W. Nix, the well known railroad contractor, and Col. Ellsworth of Chicago, recently visited the coal fields lying in the western portion of the Black Hills. Since their departure from that region all sorts of rumors have been going the rounds with regard to the Hay Creek coal fields railway. That the road will eventually be built there is no doubt, and the latest rumor is that the Great Northern has an eye on the rich coal fields lying in the western part of the Black Hills.

In his annual report Secretary Hoke Smith says that there are about 1,000 000 acres of timber on the Chippewa reservation to be examined yet and that at the rate the estimators have been working it will take over three years yet to finish the work. Under the present law none of this land can be marketed untill the whole reservation is estimated. And in the meantime much of the timber is being destroyed by fire, It seems to us that the passage of Congressman Baldwin,s bill to allow the land to be put on the market as soon as 100,000 acres were estimated and arrived would have been a judicious move for congress to have made and the hanging up of that measure was certainly not in the interest of the people of northern Minnesota.—Crookston Tribune.

Secretary Smith has intimated to Representative Baldwin that one of the members of the Chippewa commission will be promoted to the chairmanship made vacant by the retirement of W H. Campbell. This will take the chairmanship out of Minnesota. The two memb'rs of the commission besides Campbell come from Wisconsin and Georgia. A Minnesotan will probably be named to fill the vacancy after the promotion of one of these gentlemen Representative Baldwin has heard from J. Adam Bede and the latter does not care for the chairmanship. Baldwin will make no recomendations untill he finds out what Secretary Smith finally decides to do.—Minneapolis Journal

Fred A. Kribbs, the well-known cruiser, who is making his home at Red Lake, and who represents a wealthy syndicate (not the Wyerhausers, we understand) buying up pine claims in Beltrami county, was in the city Saturday and had an interview with L. Van Hecke relative to amount of pine now on the market and other matters more or less closely connected with the interests of Red Lake Falls. Mr. Kribbs is now offering 75,000,000 feet of logs for spring delivery, and has contracted with the Red River Lumber Co., of Crookston for the delivery of 15,000,000 feet which James Mc. Nair is now getting out and which will come down the Red Lake river. 500 million feet is his estimate of the amount of pine now being offered for sale and of this 80 per cent is white pine.—Red Lake Falls Gazette

The grand jury is made up of excellent good men and the work they have to do has been tackled with a business like spirit.

Peter Michaud was the first man to be examined and an indictment for burglary in the third degree was brought in. Michaud was caught in the act of throwing goods from a Great Northern train near Fisher.

John Stark was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree, Stark was the man who stole Dan Pattersons pants containing about $70. He was arrested at Red Lake Falls by Detective Baink of St. Hilaire, who has considereb reputation as a sleuth. He also writes the detective stories for the St. Hilaire SPECTATOR.

James Sanderson was indicted for malicious destruction of property. He is the man who in a drunken condition went to the G. N. depot several months ago and jumped on a freight engine reversed it and ran it back a few hundred feet into a freight car loaded with wheat destroying the whole shipment.

William Beeker was indicted for forgery. He forged the name of F. McZenman of August, to a check for $16 and passed it at the store of Larson Brother in Crookston. Before that he assigned a note in the same manner to S. W. Vance for rent.

Several other cases were looked after but no indictments are yet reported Even the Tribune man was kept from getting onto them, and it is safe to say that the cases are important.

Got 'Em On the Run.

An editorial in the New York World on the increase of the People's Party vote says:

This increase means for one thing that in the west and south the people are dissatisfied with both the old parties. They have turned from the Republican to the Democratic party without obtaining relief. They believed the promises made them by the Democratic party, only to find them broken through incompetent leadership.

Not Ready to Die.

M. W. Howard, congressman elect from Alabama, was speaking at a People's Party meeting in New York recently when he said, "The Populists of Alabama have carried the last two elections, but the Democrats have counted us out."

"Why don't you kill 'em?" inquired a hoarse voice in the rear of the room.

SUCH IS THE GENERAL OPINION AT THE CAPITAL.

The Financial Question Cannot Be Staved Off Beyond the Fifty-fourth Congress. Our Tribute to European Plutocracy. Populist Gains in the Late Election.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Well, they're here again, and they're at it, not legislating as yet, but busy in the preliminary powwow, somewhat subdued, and not promising good times so confidently as they did last summer, but still able to talk. The defeated take it gracefully for the most part, and a common expression is: "Since I had to be beaten I am glad the deluge was universal, for it shows that no one person is particularly to blame and that it is merely one of these great popular impulses which may sweep the people in the opposite direction next time." A very interesting fact is that there is a substantial agreement of opinion between the leading men of the two old parties on a few points of special interest to Populists. So let us see what is gained, accepting only that testimony of the plutocrats wherein they agree. Of course it is evident without their testimony that much is gained when the raw material for demagogism is reduced and politicians are brought down to the actual needs of the people. The late campaign was fought largely on shams, but now the old heads agree on the following points:

First.—That high tariff or at any rate a tariff of the McKinley variety is done with it may be for years, and it may be forever. It is certainly for three years anyhow, and any fiscal system in this country which is allowed to stand that long will acquire immense strength by mere prescription. There will be as many men in 1897 who want no change as there were in 1888. I might quote dozens of Republicans to this effect, but their opinions are already known. The most radical Democrats say, "Let us pass the appropriation bills, draw our pay and gracefully step down and out."

Second.—There is to be no more "bloody shirt" and sham heroics about the south. That fruitful source of demagogism, blinding the people's eyes to the real causes of their troubles, is done for. There is a bit of comedy in the situation. The Republicans fought bitterly against the repeal of the federal election laws and swore by all that was good and great that such repeal meant ruin. Alleged statesmen protested that the repeal was to forever prevent fair elections in New York city and the south. It was done, and, lo, the solid south is broken, New York city is Republican, the planters of Louisiana are assured by the highest Republican authority that they need fear no more meddling with the race question, and already the work of building up a white Republican party in the south is begun by the national party managers.

Third and Most Important.—The money question is to the front. Reluctantly the Democrats admit it. Rather exultingly the Republicans proclaim it, as they think they can always beat the Democrats on that issue. Be it so or be it otherwise, but "whether he kill Cassio or Cassio kill him either makes" for the people's gain. And a great gain it is to have the real issue brought to the front. The president has twittered his twit. He wants the bankers gratified, of course. The bankers have spoken again and kindly notified us as to what congress must do. And of course the sum and substance of what president, bankers and the goldbugs in congress say amounts to the same old "gag"—namely, we must not inflate with silver because that is half credit. We must inflate with bank paper, which is all credit. Nevertheless currency based on government credit is not to be thought of, but the banker's currency, indorsed by the government, will work like a charm, and so forth, and so forth, and so on ad nauseam. The inference is that they regard American voters as children to be fed on flapdoodle. But, just the same, the currency question is here and must be discussed. All parties admit it, and that is the great gain.

There is another point on which the shrewd men of various parties are near an agreement, though there is much discussion as to details, and this is that the hardest pull on government finances is to come next March, or possibly as early as February. They give many reasons which seem to me weighty. The greatest outflow of gold is usually at that season, and there are many reasons why it should be greater this winter than usual, as our products are now too cheap to pay our annual dues to foreigners. And what is that annual indebtedness? Estimates range all the way from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000, but it is certainly not less than $200,000,000. This is the amount which we must pay every year as interest to foreign creditors, as dividends on property owned here by foreigners, as freight to foreign ships which do our carrying, and as the expenses of the 80,000 Americans who go abroad every year and the 10,000 wealthy ones who habitually live abroad. This $200,000,000 we must pay in gold in a surplus of commodities over and above those which go to pay for our imports or in the sale of new bonds and stocks. The latter served from the resumption of specie payment until a few years ago, and then the surplus of commodities served a short time. But now consider this fact: All the surplus wheat and cotton of the crop of 1894 would barely pay it at present prices. You may make the calculation for yourself—say $75,000,000 for wheat and $125,000,000 for cotton, and there is barely enough, if enough, saying nothing of what goes to pay for continuous imports. There is but one resource left—the gold must go. Our existing financial system is absolutely at the mercy of England and of 20 men in New York city.

Another very important fact has been overlooked by our farmers—in fact, by nearly all Americans. Time was when foreign war helped us greatly. It now hurts us. The Crimean war created a tremendous boom in American produce, and so did the Franco-Italian war of 1859 and the Prussian-Austrian war of 1866, but in 1870 the effect was much less noticeable. It was still less so during the Russian-Turkish war of 1876, and the great Russian famine of 1891 had but a slight effect, and that temporary. Europe now has vast fields of supply on the other side of the equator and in India. In case of war or famine she takes no more of our wheat and much less of our cotton, but calls imperatively for our gold. Only a few years ago, when Austria reorganized her military system for the triple alliance, she called on the world for $80,000,000. Russia was the next to call, and then when the collapse in Australia and Argentine affected her England came on us for gold. Japan will be the next. The rapid rise of Japan to a power of the first rank and the collapse, the apparently irretrievable ruin, of China are the great phenomena of this age. The great financiers will see to it that the debt created by the Japanese war is utilized for a bonding and banking system.

These are but a few of many reasons urged for believing that the great convulsion will come on early next spring. If so, there will be a loud outcry for an early called session of the Fifty-fourth congress. And then will come the great issue—more bonds to pile up more gold and a system of banking more to the taste of the bankers, or a truly national system, with the credit of the government put to its proper use. The president, of course, will use all his influence and patronage on the side of the bankers, but they have not yet decided, or at any rate not unanimously, in favor of the so called Baltimore plan. Nearly all the western men say that Mr. Cleveland "might as well sing psalms to a dead horse as to ask the present congress to put his views into law." But what will the Fifty-fourth congress do? To this question Lafe Pence replied:

"Well, that depends largely on the bigness of the convulsion next spring and the tightness of the pinch to follow it. And that in turn depends on the will of our English masters and their New York allies. If they so decide, they can jerk this supposed gold basis from under us any minute. I believe it is today $57,000,000 which in the treasury is supposed to be holding up $1,160,000,000 in paper and silver. They could draw out every dollar of it before night if they liked, but they are wiser than those blood sucking flies told about in the fable. It may be to their interest not to bring on the collapse so suddenly. They have depleted us pretty thoroughly for a few years and may now conclude to let us run free a year or two until we get some more blood. They are smart enough to see that if we are drained much more just now we shall have to lie down and can pay nothing. So I rather think they will give us time to recruit up and then draw on us again."

"By the way, what position did your opponent and successor take on the silver question?"

"Well, he constructed a platform of his own. We had lots of fun smoking him out. Shafroth is a lawyer of Denver and a shrewd one. He came from Missouri, and, I think, from Dockery's district. He has been city attorney of Denver and is up to all the dodges they might try to work on him in politics. We tried hard to get a joint debate on the subject, and then a pledge was proposed on the silver question. He modified it considerably—in fact, wrote a new one in which he took strong silver ground on conditions, but declared positively that if the choice of a president were thrown into the house he would vote for no man opposed to the free coinage of silver. That rather took the wind out of my sails, and so I said to my audiences, 'You can now take your choice between two Populists.'

"It wasn't that, however, which defeated me. We made the women voters, and they all or nearly all turned against us. They are very young students in finance and cannot see that a dollar made in Colorado is better in the long run for the state than $2 borrowed from outside. But don't imagine for a minute that the Populists are discouraged. We will take a rest and then up and at 'em again."

It bothers the plutocratic press mightily to decide how many Populists are elected to the Fifty-fourth congress, and, as to the aggregate vote, they devote all their talents and energies to saying nothing whatever about it. At first they allowed us but five congressmen. Now some of them are inclined to allow us 14, counting the South Carolina delegation with one exception. Chairman Taubeneck claims that there are really ten who have certificates or are sure to get them—namely, five in North Carolina and one each in Alabama, Kansas, Colorado, Nevada and Nebraska. In the Thirteenth Texas district Gilliland still claims his election, and the Democrats admit a doubt. As to South Carolina the managers of all parties are equally at sea. Republicans say that in the state fight between the old Wade Hampton set or the remnant of the slaveholding aristocracy and the Tillmanites the latter have to call themselves Democrats, but that they will be forced into one of the other two parties before 1896. Mr. Taubeneck thinks that if the new congress does not convene before December the breach will be so wide that the Tillmanites will not go into a Democratic caucus, "for since Alabama is knocked out on her temporary evasion by what they called Jeffersonian Democracy the South Carolina men cannot stand alone as Alliance Democrats. If they go back to the Democratic party, they must go as repentant refugees and take the tail end of the procession for all time to come. In a new party they can be leaders. There ought to be no doubt as to how ambitious and progressive men will decide such a question."

Admitting the Situation at Last.

It is imperative that congress at the short session shall appoint an expert and unbiased commission to study this delicate and complex problem and indicate the legislation needed to free the treasury from a recurrence of present disturbances and secure to the people a safe, uniform and elastic currency.—New York Herald.

We need, [illegible] of us are for [illegible] is a great national bank, with [illegible] everywhere, to act as the [illegible] the government, receiving [illegible] revenues, issuing circulation and [illegible] lating the rate of discount and the volume of credits as the exigencies of [illegible] require. This is the plan which [illegible] years of experiment the great nations of Europe have adopted, and with them for the last half century at least it has been successful, but with our 7,000 separate banks scattered over the country each independent of the others, bank circulation, no matter how many safeguards may be thrown around it, would prove quite as dangerous as our present legal tenders.

The Gold Basis.

On the 1st of October the treasury held less than $59,000,000 of gold over and above the amount of gold certificates outstanding. At the same time the amount of greenbacks in circulation was $267,300,000, and the amount of Sherman notes in circulation was $121,500,000. The obligation to redeem these in gold on demand is recognized. At the same time it is equally necessary to pay gold for silver certificates, if it is demanded, for if it is refused the silver dollar will begin to sink to its bullion value, and the country will come down to the silver basis. The amount of these outstanding on the 1st of October was $330,500,000. Here we have over $719,000,000 of credit currency resting on a reserve of less than $59,000,000 of gold in the treasury.—Chicago Herald.

Referred to Colorado.

In the belief of many sagacious political observers the question of honest money as opposed to the makeshift of free silver coinage or any other device of financial quackery will occupy a much more prominent place among the issues of the next presidential campaign, if indeed it does not dominate all others, than in any previous election. Republicans cannot afford, looking at it as a simple question of party policy, to entangle themselves in any way with free silver advocates. It would be a sacrifice of principle, and that never pays.—New York Tribune.

The peons of Mexico are a queer set. Their ignorance and stupidity is equaled, perhaps, by no other race of people in the world. They are too stupid even to be instructed. I was down in the mining regions of Mexico for some time and had a good chance to observe their habits. They still persist in carrying the ore from the mines in bags on their backs. I knew a case where a contractor secured a number of wheelbarrows, thinking to help their labors. They accepted barrows all right, but they would not use them as they were intended to be used. Instead of wheeling them they would fill them up and carry the barrows with their contents on their backs, as they had done with the bags. Another amusing case of their stupidity was shown when an American, living down there, purchased a stove for his servants, who were peons, to cook on. They would not touch the stove, but persisted in adhering to their old custom of sitting in front of a charcoal fire, fan in hand, waving it to make the pot boil. Their ignorance and density of understanding is deplorable.—Baltimore Herald.

Girls' White Rugs.

There is nothing in winter that gives such a sense of warmth, comfort and luxury as fur, unless, perhaps, it is a glowing log fire. When these are both combined, what can the heart of man desire more in the way of decorative comfort? When Bengal tigers and white polar bear skins are very expensive, there are large square and oblong rugs of white fur that are much used in bed rooms and the popular white drawing rooms of the day. These are also used as couch coverings by the aesthetic young women, and she may have several of them, as the price is low.

Warm water, sea bathing, temperance and outdoor life are curative for bleariness of the eyes. Clean water of medium warmth is the best application. Excess in eating and drinking should likewise be avoided and some aperient medicine taken.

WOMEN ON SMOKING CARS.

Persistently Invading the Reservation Intended for Long-Suffering Men.

A few months ago a Philadelphia street car companies began running smoking cars in response to a popular demand for them, says the New York Evening Post. It has been found almost impossible to keep women out of these cars, and to make matters worse the smokers, unable to resist the claims of politeness, have been cheerfully surrendering their seats to the women. Things have now got to such a pass that the latter have become masters of the situation. "Day by day," says an observer, "the feminine travel upon the smoking car has increased. That man is lucky who can now cling to the edges of the car and fondly hope that he may smoke in peace, after the long journey is over and he has reached the secluded precincts of his office or home. The women not only claim the smoking cars as their own, but they have begun to stare coldly at such men as now venture timidly into the cars, which were prepared especially for them." The question whether the men have a right to smoke in a smoking car in the presence of women has been settled by the latter in the negative, and an offender was actually ejected from one of these cars the other day by a man accompanying an indignant woman. What makes the persistence of the women singular is that that the smoking cars are much less comfortable and attractive than those provided for general use. The Philadelphia newspapers are courageously supporting the men in this emergency, and urging them to stand on their rights. "The women," one newspaper makes bold to say, "must yield the cars to men or they (the women) must learn to smoke."

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

GAINED FORTUNE FROM A ROSE

How the Famous American Beauty Was Discovered by a Gardener.

Here is a pretty interesting story about the origin of that most beautiful of flowers, the American beauty rose, says the Baltimore Herald. The late George Bancroft, besides being a historian and scholar, was one of the first amateur rose growers in America. Every year he imported cuttings from the leading flower growers of Europe. The king of Prussia, when old Kaiser William was king, allowed the American historian to have a slip of whatever he might fancy in the royal conservatories. Mr. Bancroft's gardener used to cultivate some of his roses in an old house away out on F, or perhaps it was G street, above Twenty-second street, in the west end of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Grant had a florist named Field in charge of the White House conservatory. He was a rose grower of rare merit and skill in his artistic work. One day he happened into the old building where Mr. Bancroft's gardener potted his plants and budded his roses. Over in the corner he observed a rose of a variety utterly unknown to him, and of wonderful size and perfection in form and color. "Where did this come from?" he carelessly inquired of his rose-growing confrere. "O, it is an offshoot from some cuttings we imported from Germany," the man replied. It was evident to Mr. Field that the other did not in the least comprehend the value of the new plant. After some talk Mr. Field bought the cuttings he had seen for $5. A year thereafter, when he had propagated his new purchase and become convinced that he had a new and very valuable variety of rose, which he named the American beauty, he sold his find for $5,000, the most wonderful result of the investment of $5 on record. To follow his luck a little farther, Mr. Field invested his easily earned $5,000 in lands near Washington, which in a little less than three years he sold for $50,000. Truth is sometimes stranger than fiction.

PEOPLE ARE ROBBED!

COMBINES A MENACE TO THE COUNTRY.

The Managers Live Like Princes—Our Only Remedy Is Complete Government Ownership of All the of the Country Railroads.

Occasionally we hear a person say, "I would favor the People's party, but I am afraid of their railway policy." When questioned closely they either say, "If the government owned the railways, and a party once got in power, it would be impossible to oust it," or, "It would bankrupt the government to buy these roads, and place such an enormous debt on their shoulders that they never could pay it."

Believing such people are honest, we think we can remove their fears. In the first place, taxation can not be tolerated without completely enslaving the people. This is the case when corporations own and operate railways for their own profit. A company of men obtain a charter to build, equip and operate a railroad from a state state legislature, which charter grants the rights and powers of eminent domain, which no citizen can exercise.

Such corporation can condemn a man's land, or a right of way 100 feet wide through a man's land; by applying to the proper court, have a board of appraisers appointed to value the land. The company pays the valuation, the court decrees the company the land, and thus they build the road. This is exercising the right of eminent domain, which is alone a government prerogative.

All this is done under the plea of the general welfare. The road is completed, a meeting is called, not of the people who are expected to patronize the road, but of the stockholders. They elect a board of directors, who elect each other officers, and fix their salary. Upon examination, they find that there are 1,000,000 people tributary to their road, and they conclude to tax them $11,000,000 annually. Perhaps one of the officials will say: "If you tax these people $11,000,000 annually it will be such an enormous profit on the money invested that the people will see they are being robbed, and rise in their indignation and elect men to the legislature who will revoke our charter, condemn our railway and demand that the state assume control of it through ownership, to protect the people"

At this juncture a man with a wolfish eye and face rises and says: "I will explain how we can hoodwink the public and collect the $11,000,000 tax all the same. We will issue interest bearing bonds to each other for three or four times as much as the property has cost; place our salaries at a very high figure; set aside a large 'sundries' fund, and when the fool people complain at our salary, we will show them that we are barely receiving a fair interest on our money, when in fact we are receiving 400 per cent more interest than the business shows."

The stock is watered till the annual interest will cover what there is left after paying our own and our friends' salaries, with the hope that the poor fools never will see the cat, and their slavery is complete and perpetual; for just as fast as the receipts increase, the stock or bonds are increased to absorb it. Some railroads in the east are now stocking up to $115,000 per mile for this identical purpose. The only way under heaven that people can avoid paying these taxes is to live like a prairie dog—neither buy nor sell, nor produce anything for sale. Not only this, but suppose Mr. Huntington takes a notion to pension off his son on to the state. Being president, he calls a meeting of the board of directors, himself and two or three other friends, by proxy or otherwise, vote a majority of the stock, his son is nominated for third or fourth vice-president, and his salary fixed at $20,000 per annum. The order is entered on the books of the concern, and the general manager instructs the treasurer of the company to honor the new-made officer's check for his salary, and the young man hies off to Europe to have a good time and to associate with his brother lords and dukes who are likewise public parasites.

As a result of this taxation without representation, the farmers, who are forced to pay these aristocrats these princely salaries, take their boys and girls out of the school house and drive them into the cotton patch, there to dig and sweat under a tropical sun from sun up to sun down; wear the poorest clothing, eat the plainest of diet and drink tank water, all to pay the princely salaries of their new master, put over them without their knowledge or consent. Every trunk railway in the United States has a few such lords and masters, and the people have no way to escape paying the utmost farthing. No man worthy of the name would submit to such infamies. All that the people have to do to rid themselves of these festering incubuses is to vote for the Populist candidates for congress, and just as soon as a majority is secured, they would see to it that the Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and Central Pacific railroads are sold for debts due the United States and have the government buy them in, for they are not worth the debt due the government. Then the government could operate them under such a tariff as would pay only operating expenses.

This would force the roads on each side of the government road to come down to the same scale of charges. This would force all the roads running parallel lines from the lakes to the gulf to run on the same basis. Let the government build a trunk line from the lakes in Canada to New Orleans, and it will regulate all the north and south traffic and travel.

Under the present conditions, six men practically control all the railways in the United States. These six men can, through their underlings, say to the 853,000 railway operatives, "Vote for Grover Cleveland or get off this road," and 853,000 American voters will have to stultify themselves, vote as directed, or become tramps and their families starve or beg for bread. Any one knows that such a power in the hands of six men is a menace to the republic and that such power renders these 853,000 American citizens helpless slaves. By transferring these railroads to the government these men will be shorn of this power.

This will place every railway operative on an equality and absolutely independent of each other. Then all would vote for justice and freedom, for it is only through fear of those who can ruin them that American citizens can be made vote against their own interests, or through dense ignorance, but thank God the ignorance is disappearing and soon bossism will go with it.

As to buying and paying for these railways, the owners of them say they are worth say $11,000,000,000 and their books show that they owe $10,726,000,000 on them; having only paid about $275,000,000 on them. Now every one knows that if these roads are ever paid for the people must do it. Then by all the laws of justice, if the people pay for them they should belong to the people; but it is never intended that this indebtedness shall be paid. Just as soon as the government begins operating one trunk line east and west and one north and south, the present owners will be anxious to sell them. Then let them be appraised at their true value.

This value will not exceed $4,000,000,000. Then let the government pay one tenth of their worth every year and 2 per cent per annum interest out of the traffic every year, and by this means they will be paid for in ten years and the people will own them and thenceforth be free men. By this plan the people will save $400,000,000 per annum that they are now being enslaved to pay. But, says one, is not that paternalism?

It is no more paternalism than carrying your letters or packages of four pounds or under. It will be remembered that Thomas Jefferson in 1804 bought 757,000,000 acres of land upon which New Orleans, St. Louis and many other large cities now stand, and he astonished the world for his boldness in plunging into a debt of about $15,000,000 for this vast territory; yet that purchase was a bigger job than buying the railways now.

As a matter of fact, government ownership of railways has been thoroughly tested, and has never failed to be a success. Sweden, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Russia, India, Australia, Canada, Egypt, China, Spain, Japan, Denmark, Italy and Portugal own most of the railroads, and we are sure to do it at no distant day in the United States.

The best of all is that no one can produce a single sound argument against government ownership of railways, telegraphs and telephones.

The most toothsome morsel to the average mossback outside of peddling nauseating falsehoods on the Populists and their platforms, is in advising the dear people how to live cheaply, utterly forgetting that the intelligence necessary to equip a man for self-government revolts at anything short of justice.

If these relics of a defunct aristocracy could realize how ridiculous they appear when advising independent American citizens to go half fed and half clad, while a few of the government's pets extract millions annually from their labor right before their eyes, they would retire to some lonely spot and subside.—Ex.

There are almost as many reasons for it as there are politicians, but the principal one is that the democrats were defeated for lying. That is to say they promised and did not perform.

HOW MUCH MORE CAN HE STAND?

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The People Could Remove the Ills They Complain Of if They Would Try.

Is it not about time to stop blaming capital and capitalists, monopoly and monopolists for the ills which afflict labor and commerce, to charge the blame home where it belongs—to labor itself?

Really the suffering people are alone to blame for their condition.

If they have not made their own condition, they have permitted it, they have, and continue to acquiesce in measures and politics and to give support to men and parties which have reduced them to poverty and serfdom.

We all remember how eloquently John A. Logan started out in defense of the people against the financial schemes of Wall street which resulted in the panic of 1873, and the long period of unparalleled suffering and labor depression which has followed in its wake.

But his words fell on deaf ears.

They heeded not his warnings, nor cared for the calamities he predicted.

He saw that he was sowing on stony ground and on sandy barrens, where no harvest could be hoped for during his day at least.

When a few years subsequent he was asked why he had turned his back upon the people and was lending his support to their enemies, he replied:

"The masses don't hold state and national conventions.

They know how zealously the masses will vindicate and defend all measures of public policy, no matter how damaging or dangerous to the public weal, provided it receives the indorsement of party conventions and the sanction of party leaders.

Farmers stand with folded arms and see corporations destroy the value of their lands and products, rob them of markets, destroy their medium of exchange, force them into debt and their lands under irredeemable mortgages, extort ruinous rates for transportation, levy burdensome taxes, while millions upon millions, robbed from honest toil, are being accumulated and piled up in the great cities. Society is suffering from the effects of unjust class legislation.

We are alarmed at the growth of land monopoly. It is fostered by legal encouragement and protection.

We complain of the extortions of the coal monopolies that refuse to employ men to dig coal whose families are starving for want of employment and at the same time deprive thousands of poor families of coal who are freezing for want of it.

We complain of low wages, low prices and scarcity of money when the people have it in their power to reverse these conditions had they the courage of a mouse to demand and the independence of manhood to act, and these evils will continue and intensify until men cease to be partisan slaves and assert their manhood and God-given rights.

Until then let them suffer, for of suffering comes wisdom.—Chicago Sentinel.

Republicans are grinning at democrats for the blunders they have made; they forget that they were kicked out of power for about the same thing.

THE LOST ST. ELIAS.

THAT MOUNTAIN BELONGS TO THE BRITISH.

Recent Discovery of Government Surveyors of the Boundary Between Alaska and British America—An American Flag Near the Top.

Uncle Sam has lost the highest lump of land in his possessions. No longer can the United States claim to hold the biggest mountain in North America. The tallest bit of territory this side the North Atlantic has been adjudged the property of Great Britain. Mt. St. Elias, the snow-crowned monarch of the Alaskan mountains, no longer stands upon American soil.

Not that it has been moved. Even England, with all her boasted prowess, would hardly undertake to carry it away. But she has "lifted" it in another sense. Her ever elastic boundary lines have been stretched so that they now surround the majestic mountain, and St. Elias is lost to us forever.

The members of the coast survey party sent to confer with representatives of the state department of England, with a view to effectually locating the boundary line of Alaska, have returned to Washington. The division has been definitely fixed at the one hundred and forty-first meridian of longitude. Mt. St. Elias stands just half a degree east of this, and, therefore, is within the British possessions.

In 1867, when the United States bought the vast country of Alaska from Russia at a price of less than half a cent per acre, it was believed that the famous peak of the Cordilleran mountains was part of a joblot. Although the land is barren and unproductive, it has a coast line of over 18,000 miles, which is more than all the rest of the United States put together can boast, and with a pinnacle reaching nearer to heaven than any other spot where Old Glory might be planted, it was not thought a bad bargain. But ever since trouble has arisen with England as to where her rule ended and the land of liberty commenced. Now this is settled, and we are minus our star mountain.

Behring, the navigator, first sighted the "Bolshoi Shopka," or "Great Peak," on St. Elias day, 1741. Hence its name. Since then numerous explorers have attempted to scale its snowy heights. As yet no intrepid traveler has reached its summit. In 1888 an English expedition, commanded by Mr. W. H. Topham, reached an altitude of 11,460 feet. At this point, Mr. William Williams of New London, a cute Yankee who accompanied the party, deposited a tin box containing a flag of the United States. Although the British have grabbed the land it will probably be some time before they can ascend its icy slopes and tear down the stars and stripes which Williams planted there.

In 1891 Professor I. C. Russell, in the interest of the National geographical society of America, succeeded in reaching an elevation of 14,500 feet. The latest survey, just completed, fixes the summit at 18,023 feet above sea level. St. Elias is over 3,000 feet taller than Mt. Blanc, the king of the Alps in Europe. And it may become still higher.

When Mr. Russell lectured before the National geographical society upon his exploration, Professor Gilbert, the geologist, came to the conclusion that the mountains of Alaska are very young; that is, of comparatively recent formation. He based this opinion on the fact of the existence in the mountain formation of shells identical with those in the waters of Alaska gulf to-day. He inferred that the process of mountain making was not so ancient as is supposed, and that their upheaval belonged to our present geological period. Surely, if Mt. St. Elias is still young, it may grow. It is quite English, you know, now; and that may make it poke its nose a little higher.

As a rule, American mountains have a tendency to go back upon the estimates of their altitudes made by early surveyors. Mt. Hood, in Oregon, provides a case in point. It was originally set down as 17,000 in height, but by recent observers it has gradually been written down to 12,000. A farmer who lives at the foot of Mt. Hood was lately much annoyed at the belittling of his pet earth-heap. He said that if scientific men kept pegging away at the mountain the summit would soon become nothing more than a hole in the ground.

Now that Uncle Sam has lost St. Elias, he must drop his pride some 2,000 odd feet in the matter of mountains, and fall back upon Mt. Brown of the Rockies. Here he may whittle his stick at an altitude of 15,900 feet, and brag that he is 119 feet above the tallest bit of all Europe.

Mount Whitney, in California, climbs up next highest of his possessions. It reaches 15,000 feet, and Pike's Peak, in Colorado, measures above sea level 14,320 feet. Setting aside their recent acquisition, the top bit of British property is Teneriffe, of the Canary islands, which runs up to 12,236 feet, while England herself cannot raise her own head out of the sea more than 4,600 feet at Ben Nevis and 3,500 at the summit of Snowdon. The first of these is in Scotland and the second in Wales. We can still give the old country a whipping in the matter of mountains.

Anyway, it is satisfactory to have arrived at a thorough definition of our boundary line, and it is perhaps little known that Alaska, as now fixed, is nine times the size of the New England states, twice the size of Texas and three times larger than California. It stretches more than 1,000 miles from north to south, and the Aleutian islands make the central or halfway point of a straight line across the United States a little west of San Francisco. Point Barrow in the North and Cape Fox in the South are as far distant from each other as the north of Maine and the end of Florida.

A Great Shock.

Indigestion Troubled Me
And I was a constant sufferer. The poison in my blood made my limbs a solid mass of sores. I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the paper and I at once prevailed upon my husband to let me try it. I got one bottle and it did me so much good that I kept using it until I had taken twelve bottles, and now I am entirely cured. Mrs. Louisa Matlock, Bonita, Texas.

These We Have Always.

A critic suggests that a mass meeting of dramatic critics be called to protest against the further use on the stage of the subjoined expressions:

"You will learn to love me."

"Listen(music) and I will tell you the story of my life."

"He was the only man who ever spoke a kind word to me."

"Papa, kiss mamma."

"I must tell you one thing before I go—not very much to you, perhaps, but to me everything. I love you."

"Be brave, Jack; you have ME."

"Ah, little one, you don't understand these things."

"For some weeks I have noticed a change in your manner toward me."

"At last, Robert Gorgon, we meet face to face. * * * A-h-h!" (as he is stabbed in the back.)

"Me c-h-i-l-d!"

"What was that? Only a snap of a twig. How faint my heart feels to-day. Some superstitious dread seems to be over me."

"Don't be afraid of me, little one. I once had a child, who, if he had but lived, would have looked just as you do now." (Looks earnestly at the lad's face and toys with his hair.)

In This Work-a-Day World
Men and women continually break down through mental strain and physical effort. The true repairer of vitality thus impaired, a perennial fountain of health and vigor is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which restores digestion, enriches the blood, and healthfully stimulates the bowels, kidneys and liver when they are indolent. This comprehensive remedy also subdues malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

He Knows Better Now.

Wife—I suppose if you had never known me you would have married some other woman just like me?

Husband—Yes, dear, I might have—if I had never known you.

The Modern Mother
Has found that her little ones are improved more by the pleasant laxative, Syrup of Figs, when in need of the laxative effect of a gentle remedy than by any other, and that it is more acceptable to them. Children enjoy it, and it benefits them. The true remedy, Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co only.

Eat Apples and Be Healthy.

Dr. Stotzer Buetzer, in one of his foreign medical reviews, writes as follows on the medicinal and hygienic properties of the apple: "Apples eaten immediately before bedtime promote health generally. Its dietetical as well as alimentary substance is of the highest order. It contains more phosphoric acid in an easily digestible combination than any other vegetable product. It is (1) good brain food; (2) excites the functions of the liver; (3) promotes a sound and quiet sleep; (4) disinfects the mouth; (5) agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach; (6) paralyzes hemorrhoidal disturbances; (7) helps the secretions of the kidneys and prevents calculus concretion; (8) obviates indigestion and (9) is a good preventative against diseases of the throat.—Christian.

PROGRESS.
People who get the greatest degree of comfort and real enjoyment out of life, are those who make the most out of their opportunities. Quick perception and good judgment, lead such promptly to adopt and make use of those refined and improved products of modern inventive genius which best serve the needs of their physical being. Accordingly, the most intelligent and progressive people are found to employ the most refined and perfect laxative to regulate and tone up the stomach, liver, and bowels, when in need of such an agent—hence the great popularity of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These are made from the purest, most refined and concentrated vegetable extracts, and from forty-two to forty-four are contained in each vial, which is sold at the same price as the cheaper made and more ordinary pills found in the market. In curative virtues, there is no comparison to be made between them and the ordinary pills, as any one may easily learn by sending for a free sample, (four to seven doses) of the Pellets, which will be sent on receipt of name and address on a postal card.
ONCE USED THEY ARE ALWAYS IN FAVOR.
The Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heart-burn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Put up in glass vials, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day after dinner. To relieve distress from over-eating, they are unequaled. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules; any child will readily take them.
Accept no substitute that may be recommended to be "just as good." It may be better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help. Address for free sample, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

TALKS TO CONGRESS.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND PRESENTS HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE.

The Reports of the Various Cabinet Officers Are Reviewed—A Synopsis Covering the Most Important Subjects Touched on.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Following is the president's message:

To the Congress of the United States:

The assemblage within the nation's legislative halls of those charged with the duty of making laws for the benefit of a generous and free people, impressively suggests the exacting obligation and inexorable responsibility involved in their task. At the threshold of such labor now to be undertaken by the congress of the United States and in the discharge of an executive duty enjoined by the constitution, I submit this communication, containing a brief statement of the condition of our national affairs and recommending such legislation as seems to be necessary and expedient:

The history of our recent dealings with other nations and our peaceful relations with them at this time additionally demonstrate the advantage of consistently adhering to a firm but just foreign policy, free from envious or ambitious national schemes and characterized by entire honest and sincerity.

Offer to Mediate.

Acting under a stipulation in our treaty with Corea (the first concluded with a Western power), I felt constrained at the beginning of the controversy to tender our good offices to induce an amicable arrangement of the initial difficulty growing out of the Japanese demands for administrative reforms in Corea; but the unhappy precipitation of actual hostilities defeated this kindly purpose. Deploring the destructive war between the two most powerful of the Eastern nations, and anxious that our commercial interests in those countries may be preserved, and that the safety of our citizens there shall not be jeopardized, I would not hesitate to heed any intimation that our friendly aid for the honorable termination of hostilities would be acceptable to both belligerents.

The Bering Sea Agreement.

Early in the present year an agreement was reached with Great Britain concerning instructions to be given to the naval commanders of the two governments in Bering sea and the contiguous North Pacific ocean for their guidance in the execution of the award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration and the enforcement of the regulations therein prescribed, for the protection of seal life in the waters mentioned. An understanding has also been reached for the payment by the United States of $425,000 in full satisfaction of all claims which may be made by Great Britain for damages growing out of the controversy as to fur seals in Bering or the seizure of British vessels engaged in taking seals in these waters. The awards and findings of the Paris tribunal to a great extent determined the facts and principles upon which these claims should be adjusted and they have been submitted by both governments to thorough examination upon the principles, as well as the facts which they involved. I am convinced that a settlement upon the terms mentioned would be an equitable and advantageous one, and I recommend that provision be made for the prompt payment of the stated sum. Thus far only France and Portugal have signified their willingness to adhere to the regulations established under the award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration. Preliminary surveys of the Alaskan boundary and a preparatory examination of the question of protection of food fish in the contiguous waters of the United States and the Dominion of Canada are in progress.

Regarding Hawaii.

Since communicating the voluminous correspondence in regard to Hawaii and the action taken by the senate and house of representatives on certain questions submitted to the judgment and wider discretion of congress, the organization of a government in place of the provisional arrangement which followed the deposition of the queen has been announced with evidence of its effective operation. The recognition usual in such cases has been accorded the new government.

The Bluefields' Incident.

Prominent among the questions of the year was the Bluefields' incident in what is known as the Mosquito Indian strip, bordering on the Atlantic ocean and within the jurisdiction of Nicaragua. By the treaty of 1860 between Great Britain and Nicaragua the former government expressly recognized the sovereignty of the latter over the strip and a limited form of self-government was guaranteed to the Mosquito Indians, to be exercised according to their customs, for themselves and other dwellers within its limits. The so called native government which grew to be largely made up of aliens, for many years disputed the sovereignty of Nicaragua over the strip and claimed the right to maintain a practically independent government. Early in the past year efforts of Nicaragua to maintain sovereignty over the Mosquito territory led to serious disturbances culminating in the suppression of the native government and the attempted substitution of an impracticable composite administration in Nicaragua and alien residents were to participate. Failure was followed by an insurrection which for a time subverted Nicaraguan rule, expelling her officers and restoring the old organization. This in turn gave place to the existing local government established and upheld by Nicaragua.

For some months on and during part of the time two of our naval ships have been stationed at Bluefields, for the protection of all legitimate interests of our citizens. In September last the government at Managua expelled from its territory twelve or more foreigners, including two Americans, for alleged participation in the sedition or revolutionary movements against the republic at Bluefields already mentioned; but through the earnest remonstrance of this government the two Americans have been permitted to return to the peaceful management of their business. Our naval commanders at the scene of these disturbances, by their constant exhibition of firmness and good judgment contributed largely to the prevention of more serious consequences and to the restoration of peace and order. I regret that in the midst of these occurrences there happened a most grave and irritating failure of Nicaragua justice. An American citizen named Wilson residing at Rasmk Mosquito territory, was murdered by one Argueleo, the acting governor of the town. After some delay the murderer was arrested, but so insecurely confined or guarded that he escaped and notwithstanding our repeated demands it is claimed that his recapture has been impossible by reason of his flight beyond Nicaraguan jurisdiction. The Nicaraguan authorities having given notice of forfeiture of their concession to the canal company on grounds purely technical and not embraced in the contract have receded from that position.

As to Samoa.

In my last annual message I referred briefly to the unsatisfactory state of affairs in Samoa under the operation of the Berlin treaty as signally illustrating the policy of entangling alliances with foreign powers, and on May 9th, 1894, in response to a resolution of the senate, sent a special message and documents to that body on the same subject, which emphasized my previously expressed opinions. Later occurrences, the correspondence in regard to which will be laid before congress, further demonstrate that the government which was devised by the three powers and forced upon the Samoans against their inveterate hostility can be maintained only by the continued presence of foreign military force at no small sacrifice of life and treasure.

OUTLOOK FINANCIALLY.

A Deficit During the Past Year and Promises of More of it.

The secretary of the treasury reports the receipts to this government from all sources of revenue during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $372,802,498.29, and its expenditures to $442,605,758.87, leaving a deficit of $69,803,260.58. There was a decrease of $15,952,674.66 in the ordinary expenses of the government, as compared with the fiscal year of 1893.

There was collected from customs $131,818,530.62, and from internal revenue $147,168,449.70. The balance of the income for the year, amounting to $93,615,517.97, was derived from the sales of lands and other sources.

The values of our total dutiable imports amounted to $275,199,086, being $140,657,625 less than during the preceding year, and the importations free of duty amounted to $379,795,536, being $61,748,675 less than during the preceding year. The receipts from customs were $73,536,486.11 less and from internal revenue $13,836,539.77 less than in 1893.

The total tax collected from distilled spirits was $85,259,250.25; on manufactured tobacco $28,617,898.62, and on fermented liquors $31,414,788.04.

Our exports of merchandise, domestic and foreign, amounted during the year to $892,140,572, being an increase over the preceding year of $44,495,378.

The total amount of gold exported during the fiscal year was $76,898,061, as against $108,680,444 during the fiscal year 1893. The amount imported was $72,449,119, as against $21,174,381 during the previous year. The imports of silver were $13,286,552, and the exports were $50,451,265. The total bounty paid upon the production of sugar in the United States for the fiscal year was $12,100,208.89, being an increase of $2,725,078.01 over the payments made during the preceding year. The amount of bounty paid from July 1, 1894, to Aug. 28, 1894, the time when further payments ceased by operation of law was $966,185.84. The total expenses incurred in the payment of the bounty upon sugar during the fiscal year was $130,140.85.

It is estimated that upon the basis of our present revenue laws, the receipts of the government during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, will be $424,427,748.44, and its expenditures $444,427,748.44, resulting in

A Deficit of $20,000,000.

On the 1st day of November, 1894, the total stock of money of all kinds in the country was $2,240,773,888, as against $2,204,651,000 on the 1st day of November, 1893, and the money of all kinds in circulation, or, not included in the treasury holdings, was $1,672,093,422, or $24.27 per capita, upon an estimated population of 68,887,000. At the same date there was held in the treasury gold bullion amounting to $44,615,177.55, and silver bullion, which was purchased at a cost of $127,779,988. The purchase of silver bullion under the act of July 14, 1890, ceased on the 1st day of November, 1893, and up to that time there had been purchased during the fiscal year 11,917,658.78 fine ounces, at a cost of $8,715,521.32—an average cost of $0.7313 per fine ounce. The total amount of silver purchased from the time that the law took effect until the repeal of its purchasing clause, on the date last mentioned, was 168,674,682.53 fine ounces, which cost $155,931,002.25; the average price per fine ounce being $0.9244. The total amount of standard silver dollars coined at the mints of the United States since the passage of the act of Feb. 28, 1878, is $421,776,408, of which $378,166,793 were coined under the provisions of that act, $38,531,143 under the provisions of the act of July 14, 1890, and $5,078,472 under the act providing for the coinage of trade dollar bullion.

The total coinage of all metals at our mints during the last fiscal year consisted of 63,485,220 pieces, valued at $106,216,730.06, of which there were $99,474,912.50 in gold coined; $7 in standard silver dollars; $6,024,140.30 in subsidiary silver coin, and $716,919.26 in minor coin.

THE ARMY.

Some Changes Are Considered Very Desirable.

From the report of the secretary of war it appears that the strength of the army on Sept. 29, 1894, was 2,135 officers and 25,765 enlisted men. Although this is apparently a very slight decrease compared with the previous year, the actual effective force has been increased to the equivalent of nearly two regiments through the reorganization of the system of recruiting and the consequent release to regimental duty of the large force of men hitherto serving at the recruiting depots. The abolition of these depots, it is predicted, will furthermore effect an annual reduction approximating $250,000 in the direct expenditures, besides promoting generally the health, morals and discipline of the troops.

Increase Its Strength.

While the maximum legal strength of the army is 25,000 men, the effective stength, for various causes, is but little over 20,000 men. The purpose of congress does not therefore seem to be fully attained by the existing condition. While no considerable increase in the army is in my judgment demanded by recent events, the policy of sea coast fortification, in the prosecution of which we have been steadily engaged for some years, has so far developed as to suggest that the effective strength of the army be now made at least equal to the legal strength. Measures taken by the department during the year as indicated have already considerably augmented the effective force, and the secretary of war presents a plan which I recommend to the consideration of congress to attain the desired end. Economies effected in the department in other lines of its work will offset to a great extent the expenditure involved in the proposition submitted. Among other things this contemplates the adoption of the three battalion formation of regiments which for several years has been indorsed by the secretaries of war and the generals commanding the army. Compact in itself, it provides a skeleton organization ready to be filled out in the event of war, which is peculiarly adapted to our strength and requirements; and the fact that every nation, with a single exception, has adopted this formation to meet the condition of modern warfare should alone secure for the recommendation an early consideration.

The Recent Strike.

It is hardly necessary to recall the fact that in obedience to the commands of the constitution and the laws and for the purpose of protecting the property of the United States, aiding the process of federal courts and removing lawless obstructions to the performance by the government of its legitimate functions it became necessary in various localities during the year to employ a considerable portion of the regular troops. The duty was discharged promptly, courageously and with marked discretion by the officers and men and the most gratifying proof was thus afforded that the army deserves that complete confidence in its efficiency and discipline which the country has at all times manifested.

OLNEY'S DEPARTMENT.

The Circuit Court of Appeals Proves a Success.

The report of the attorney general notes the gratifying progress made by the supreme court in overcoming the arrears of its business and in reaching a condition in which it will be able to dispose of cases as they arise without any unreasonable delay. This result is, of course, very largely due to the successful working of the plan inaugurating circuit courts of appeals. In respect to these tribunals the suggestion is made, in quarters entitled to the highest consideration, that an additional circuit judge for each circuit would greatly strengthen these courts and the confidence reposed in their adjudications, and that such an addition would not create a greater force of judges than the increasing business of such courts requires. I commend the suggestion to the careful consideration of congress. Other important topics are adverted to in the report accompanied by recommendations, many of which have been treated at large in previous messages and at this time therefore need only be named. I refer to the abolition of the fee system as a measure of compensation to federal officers; the enlargement of the powers of United States commissioners at least in the territories, the allowance of writs of error in criminal cases on behalf of the United States and the establishing of degrees in the crime of murder. A topic dealt with by the attorney general of much importance is the condition of the administration of justice in the Indian territory. The permanent solution of what is called the Indian problem is probably not to be expected at once, but meanwhile such ameliorations of present conditions as the system will admit of, ought not to be neglected. I am satisfied there should be a federal court established for the territory, with sufficient judges, and that this court should sit within the territory and should have jurisdiction as to territorial affairs as now vested in the federal courts sitting in Arkansas and Texas.

POSTOFFICE AFFAIRS

A Change in Second-Class Rates Is Recommended.

The report of the postmaster general presents a comprehensive statement of the operations of the postoffice department for the last fiscal year. The receipts of the department during the year amounted to $76,080,479.04 and the expenditures $84,324,414.15.

The transactions of the postal service indicate with barometric certainty the fluctuations in the business of the country. Inasmuch, therefore, as business complications continue to exist throughout the last year to the unforseen extent, it is not surprising that the deficiency of revenue to meet the expenditures of the postoffice department, which was estimated in advance at about eight million dollars, should be exceeded by nearly one and one quarter million dollars.

The ascertained revenues of the last year, which were the basis of calculation for the current year, being less than estimated, the deficiency for the current year will be correspondingly greater, though the postmaster general states that the latest indications are so favorable that he confidently predicts an increase of at least 8 per cent in the revenues of the current year over those of the last year. The expenditures increase steadily and necessarily with the growth and needs of the country, so that the deficiency is greater or less in any year depending upon the volume of receipts.

The postmaster general renews the suggestion made in a previous report that the department organization be increased to the extent of creating a direct district supervision of all postal affairs, and in this suggestion I fully concur.

There are now connected with the post office establishment 32,661 employes who are in the classified service. This includes many who have been classified upon the suggestion of the postmaster-general. He states that another year's experience at the head of the department serves only to strengthen the conviction as to the excellent working of the civil service law in this branch of the public service.

THE NEW NAVY.

A Gratifying Progress in the Construction of Ships.

Attention is called to the report of the secretary of the navy, which shows very gratifying progress in the construction of ships for our new navy. All the vessels now building, including the three torpedo boats authorized at the last session of congress and excepting the first-class battle-ship Iowa, will probably be completed during the coming fiscal year.

The estimates for the increase of the navy for the year ending June 30, 1896, are large, but they include practically the entire sum necessary to complete and equip all new ships not now in commission, so that unless new ships are authorized the appropriations for the navy service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, should fall below the estimates for the coming year by at least $12,000,000.

More Ships Needed.

The secretary presents with much earnestness a plea for the authorization of three additional battle-ships and ten or twelve topedo boats. While the unarmed vessels heretofore authorized, including those now nearing completion, will constitute a fleet which it is believed is sufficient for ordinary cruising purposes in time of peace, we have now completed and in process of construction but four first-class battle-ships and but few torpedo boats. If we are to have a navy for warlike operations, offensive and defensive, we certainly ought to increase both the number of battle-ships and torpedo boats.

HOKE SMITH'S WORK.

Recommendations Regarding Public Lands, Pensions and Patents.

The report of the secretary of the interior exhibits the situation of the numerous and interesting branches of the public service connected with his department. I commend this report and the valuable recommendations of the secretary to the careful attention of the congress.

The public land disposed of during the year amounts to 10,406,100.77 acres, including 28,876.05 of Indian lands. It is estimated that the public domain still remaining amounts to a little more than 600,000,000 acres excluding, however, about 360,000,000 acres in Alaska as well as military reservations and railroad and other selections of lands yet unadjudicated.

The Indian Problem.

Though the condition of the Indians shows a steady and healthy progress, their situation is not satisfactory at all points. Some of them to whom allotments of land have been made are found to be unable or disinclined to follow agricultural pursuits or otherwise beneficially manage their land. This is especially true of the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, who, as it appears by reports of their agents, have in many instances never been located upon their allotments, and in some cases do not even know where their allotments are. Their condition has deteriorated. They are not self-supporting and they live in camps and spend their time in idleness.

Pensions.

At the close of the last fiscal year, on the 30th day of June, 1894, there were 969,544 persons on our pension rolls, being a net increase of 3,532 over the number reported at the end of the previous year. These pensioners may be classed as follows: Soldiers and sailor, survivors of all wars, 753,968; widows and relatives of deceased soldiers, 215,162; army nurses in the war of the rebellion, 414. Of these pensioners, 32,039 are surviving soldiers of Indian and other wars prior to the late civil war, and the widows and relatives of such soldiers.

The remainder, numbering 937,505, are receiving pensions on account of the war of the rebellion and of them 469,344 are now under the authority of the act of June 27, 1890, sometimes called the dependent pension law. The total amount expended for pensions during the year was $139,804,461.05, leaving an unexpended balance from the sum appropriated of $25,205,712.65. The sum necessary to meet pension expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1896, is estimated at $140,000,000.

INTERESTING TO FARMERS.

Comments Upon Secretary Morton's Annual Report.

The secretary of agriculture in his report reviews the operations of his department for the last fiscal year, and makes recommendations for the further extensions of its usefulness. He reports a saving in expenditures during the year of $600,000, which is covered back into the treasury. This sum is 23 per cent of the entire appropriation.

A special study has been made of the demand for American farm products in all foreign markets, especially Great Britain. That country received from the United States during the nine months ending Sept. 30, 1894, 305,910 live beef cattle, valued at $26,500,000, as against 182,611 cattle valued at $16,632,000 during the same period for 1893. During the first six months of 1894 the United Kingdom took 112,000,000 pounds of dressed beef from the United States, valued at nearly $10,000,000.

The report shows that during the nine months immediately preceding Sept. 30, 1894, the United States exported to Great Britain 22,676,000 pounds of pork; of apples 1,900,000, valued at $2,500,000, and of horses 2,811, at an average of $139 per head. There was a falling off in American wheat exports of 13,500,000 bushels, and the secretary is inclined to believe that wheat may not, in the future, be the staple export cereal product of our country, but that corn will continue to advance in importance as an export on account of the uses to which it is constantly being appropriated.

The export of agricultural products from the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $628,363,038, being 72.28 per cent of American exports of every description, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain took more than 54 per cent of all farm products finding foreign markets.

CIVIL SERVICE.

The President Pleased With the Reform—Public Health and Labor.

The advantage to the public service of an adherence to the principles of civil service reform are constantly more apparent; and nothing is so encouraging to those in official life who honestly desire good government as the increasing appreciation by our people of these advantages. A vast majority of the voters of the land are ready to insist that the time and attention of those they select to perform for them the more important public duties should not be distracted by dealing out minor offices, and they are growing to be unanimous in regarding party organization as something that should be used in establishing party principles instead of dictating the distribution of public places as rewards of partisan activity.

Numerous additional offices and places have lately been brought within civil service rules and regulations, and some others will probably soon be included. The report of the commissioners will be submitted to the congress and I invite careful attention to the recommendations it contains.

The Labor Commission.

By virtue of a statute of the United States passed in 1888, I appointed in July last Hon. John D. Kernan, of the State of New York, and Hon. Nicholas E. Worthington, of the State of Illinois, to form with Hon. Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, who was designated by said statute, a commission for the purpose of making careful inquiry into the causes of the controversies between certain railroads and their employes which have resulted in an extensive and destructive strike, accompanied by much violence and dangerous disturbance with considerable loss of life and great destruction of property.

The report of the commissioners has been submitted to me and will be transmitted to congress with the evidence taken upon their investigation. Their work has been well done and their standing and intelligence give assurance that the report and suggestions they make are worthy of careful consideration.

THE TARIFF.

The President Considers the Matter Not Yet Settled.

The tariff act passed at the last session of the congress needs important amendments if it is to be executed effectively and with certainty. In addition to such necessary amendments as will change rates of duty, I am still very decidedly in favor of putting coal and iron upon the free list.

So far as the sugar schedule is concerned, I would be glad under existing aggravations to see every particle of differential duty in favor of refined sugar stricken out of our tariff law. If with all the favor now accorded the sugar refining interest in our tariff laws it still languishes to the extent of closing refineries and discharging thousands of workmen it would seem to present a hopeless case for reasonable legislative aid.

Whatever else is done or omitted I earnestly repeat the recommendation made in another portion of this communication that the additional duty of one-tenth of a cent per pound laid upon sugar imported from countries paying a bounty on its export be abrogated. It seems to me that exceedingly important considerations point to the propriety of this amendment.

MORE BONDS.

The President Says They Will Be Issued as Often as Necessary.

During the last month the gold reserved in the treasury for the purpose of redeeming the notes of the government circulating now in the hands of the people became so reduced, and its further depletion in the near future seemed so certain that in the exercise of proper care for the public welfare it became necessary to replenish the reserve and thus maintain popular faith in the ability and determination of the government to meet, as agreed, its pecuniary obligations.

It would have been well if in this emergency authority had existed to issue the bonds of the government bearing a low rate of interest and maturing within a short period, but congress having failed to confer such authority resort was necessarily had to the resumption act of 1875, and pursuant to its provisions bonds were issued drawing interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum and maturing ten years after their issue, that being the shortest time authorized by the act. I am glad to say, however, that on the sale of these bonds the premium received operated to reduce the rate of interest to be paid by the government to less than 3 per cent.

NEW CURRENCY SCHEME.

A Plan Suggested by Secretary Carlisle Is Endorsed.

Questions relating to our banks and currency are closely connected with the subject just referred to and they also present some unsatisfactory features. Prominent among them are the lack of elasticity in our currency circulation and its frequent concentration in financial centers when it is most needed in other parts of the country.

The absolute divorcement of the government from the business of banking is the ideal relationship of the government to the circulation of the currency of the country. This condition cannot be immediately reached, but as a step in that direction and as a means of securing a more elastic currency and obviating other objections to the present arrangement of bank circulation, the secretary of the treasury presents in his report a scheme modifying present bank laws and providing for the issue of circulating notes by state banks free from taxation under certain limitations.

It is proposed to repeal all laws providing for the deposit of United States bonds as security for circulation; to permit national banks to issue circulating notes not exceeding in amount 75 per cent of their paid up and unimpaired capital, provided they deposit with the government as a guarantee fund in the United States legal tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890 a sum equal in amount to 30 per cent of the notes they desire to issue, this deposit to be maintained at all times, but whenever any bank retires any part of its circulation a proportionate part of its guarantee fund shall be returned to it; to permit the secretary of the treasury to prepare and keep on hand ready for issue in case an increase in circulation is desired blank national bank notes for each bank having circulation and to repeal the provisions of the present law imposing limitations and restrictions upon banks desiring to reduce or increase their circulation—thus permitting such increase or reduction within the limit of 75 per cent of capital to be quickly made as emergencies arise.

In addition to the guarantee fund required, it is proposed to provide a safety fund for the immediate redemption of the circulating notes of failed banks by imposing a small annual tax, say one-half of 1 per cent, upon the average circulation of each bank until the fund amounts to 5 per cent of the total circulation outstanding. When a bank fails its guarantee fund is to be paid into this safety fund and its notes are to be redeemed in the first instance from such safety fund thus augmented—any impairment of such fund caused thereby to be made good from the immediately available cash assets of said bank, and if these should be insufficient such impairment to be made good by pro rata assessments among the other banks, their contributions consisting a first lien upon the assets of failed bank in favor of the contributing banks.

As a Further Security.

As a further security it is contemplated that the existing provision fixing the individual liability of stockholders is to be retained and the banks' indebtedness on account of its circulating notes is to be made a first lien on all its assets.

For the purpose of meeting the expense of printing notes, official supervision, cancellation and other like charges there shall be paid a tax say, one-half of 1 per cent per annum on the average amount of notes in circulation. It is further provided that there shall be no national bank notes issued of less denomination than ten dollars; that each national bank, except in case of a failed bank, shall redeem or retire its notes in the first instance at its own office or at agencies to be designated by it and that no fixed reserve need be maintained on account of deposits.

Another very important feature of this plan is the exemption of state banks from taxation by the United States in cases where it is shown to the satisfaction of the secretary of the treasury and the controller of the currency by banks claiming such exemption that they have not had outstanding their circulating notes exceeding 75 per cent of their paid-up and unimpaired capital; that their stockholders are individually liable for the redemption of their circulating notes to the full extent of their ownership of stock; that the liability of said banks upon their circulating notes constitutes under their state law a first lien upon their assets; that such banks have kept and maintained a guarantee fund in United States legal tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890, equal to 30 per cent of their outstanding circulating notes, and that such banks have promptly redeemed their circulating notes when presented at their principal or branch offices. It is quite likely, that this scheme may be usefully amended in some of its details; but I am satisfied it furnishes a basis for a very great improvement in our present banking and currency system.

I conclude this communication fully appreciating that the responsibility for all legislation affecting the people of the United States rests upon their representatives in the congress, and assuring them that whether in accordance with recommendations I have made or not, I shall be glad to co-operate in perfecting any legislation that tends to the prosperity and welfare of our country. —Grover Cleveland.

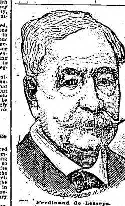
DE LESSEPS IS DEAD

THE DISTINGUISHED FRENCH ENGINEER PASSES AWAY.

After Nearly Ninety Years of Usefulness the Great Promoter of the Suez and Panama Canals Reaches the End of Life's Journey.

Paris, Dec. 9.—Ferdinand de Lesseps is dead.

Ferdinand de Lesseps was born at Versailles in 1805, the son of Jean Baptiste Barthelemi, Baron de Lesseps. When twenty years old he was appointed attache to the French consulate at Lisbon. He was afterward engaged in the commercial department of the minister of foreign affairs. In 1828 he was the attache to the consul general at Tunis, and in 1831 was made consul at Alexandria. In his thirty-fifth year he was made consul at Rotterdam and in 1839 negotiated in behalf of French commerce with the Spanish government. The same year he was transferred to the consullate at Barcelona. In 1844 he returned again to Alexandria, but was speedily reappointed to Barcelona. French minister at the court of Madrid in the last days of the reign of Louis Philippe, he returned to Paris after the revolution in which that monarch fell, and was sent by the republican government to represent France at Rome, then under a government headed by Mazzini. His commission to negotiate for the construction of the Suez canal was given in 1854, but not until 1858 was the compagnie internationale formed for this purpose. The years between then and 1864 were spent in collecting money for his great project and in the overcoming of other difficulties than the financial one; but in July, 1864, the final and favorable decision of Napoleon III. was gained, and work on the canal fairly begun. It was opened in 1869, the year witnessing the completion of perhaps the greatest piece of engineering of modern times, and the highest triumph of the indefatigable man who had constructed it.



ACT. ASS. PRESS N. Y.

Ferdinand de Lesseps.

IT LOOKS LIKE WAR.

Skirmish Between Troops on the Guatemalan Frontier.

Mexico City, Mex., Dec. 9.—The latest reports from the Guatemala frontier are of a more serious character than any which have yet reached this capital. It is claimed a Mexican colonel has been assassinated by the Guatemalans. From unofficial sources it is also reported that a company of the Nineteenth battalion of the Mexican forces have had two skirmishes with a force of 400 Guatemalan guerillas The first assault on the Mexican troops was harmless, but the second resulted in the death of two Mexican soldiers. The Guatemalans retreated hastily. It is not known that they suffered any material damage.

This particular body of mounted Guatemalans is reported as still hovering about the vicinity of the Mexican troops, but it is believed that, after making the attack, they retired to the Guatemalan side of the international line. Should official information confirm the reports, it is highly probable the mexican government will at once demand reparation for the outrage.

Train Robbers Got $40,000.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 9.—The best information obtainable warrants the placing of the amount of booty secured by the robbers at $40,000. The officers engaged in the pursuit are confident the desperadoes are members of the Cook gang and they are making for the Indian Territory. A detachment of state rangers has started for Quanta to cut off retreat in the direction mentioned.

Arrest of a Murderer.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—William Cruns, wanted for the murder of Hans Peterson near Devils Lake, N. D., last September, was arrested here to-day. Cruns, who, with a man named Erick, is accused of murdering Peterson and robbing him of $700, was identified by a peculiar scar on his cheek. The police say that he has admitted his identity.

Government Exhibit.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Representative Washington of Tennessee to-day introduced in the house a bill appropriating $150,000 for the government exhibit to be held at Nashville in 1896.

ATTEMPTED TO ESCAPE.

But a Bullet Stopped Him in His Flight.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 9.—Frank Meyers, a convict testifying in court, was fatally shot to-day. Myers was in stripes, but not handcuffed. He broke away at the jail door, knocking Jerry Wilkerson down, as the latter was unlocking the door. The prisoner ran down the street, followed by Wilkerson, who fired three shots, the last felling the prisoner. Meyers was serving six years for burglary.

County Commissioner-elect Henry Norland who has had charge of the dam at Crookston for the past three months came up last Monday to look over affairs on his farm. He has finished his work there and will soon commence to attend to the numerous wants of his constituents,

Lars N. Kron, a Rocksbury farmer who has seen about sixty summers and fully as many winters, made up his mind some time ago that he wanted a wife to share his joys and sorrows and also help do the chores. He was unable to find any one in this locality so he inserted an advertisement in a Minneapolis Swedish paper and received quite a number of replies. One gushing damsel of twenty from Iowa struck him as being about right and he negotiated for her to come up here sending her $15. to defray expenses. Last Friday was the day set for her arrival and the old man came in bright and early "dressed in his best Sunday clothes." Of course the train was late but at last it arrived, but no girl. On Monday he tried it again with the same result, and the neighbors are smiling some at Farmer Kron. Be charitable, friends, to lose a girl is hard, very hard but when this is coupled with the loss of fifteen coins of the realm it is a disaster few men can stand without shedding hot scalding tears.

Later—On today's train the girl arrived and all are happy and the goose hangs high.

Moorhead Daily News: Rube Allyn is a humorist as well as impersonator and recitationist. Much of his humor is original is of high character, or rather of a character which pleases without shocking the finest sensibilities He seems to be growing into a reader and humorist that will keep up the pace in America, set by Bill Nye, Josh Billings and Mark Twain.

President Van Horn being asked as to the probability of early completion and extension of the Duluth & Winnipeg in the Northwest he said: "That is all mixed up at present. The Duluth & Winnipeg is in the hands of a receiver and will have to be reorganized. Until that muddle is settled and the times get a little better nothing can be done toward completing the line. But that will all come around in a year or two Jamestown Alert: The chief cause of land leaving the posession of the small owner and coming into the ownership of the mortgagee is undoubtedly low prices for farm products, and a great decrease in general and staple values from what prices were when the mortgage was assumed. The debt paying power has become less each year while the debt remains the same. The value of money has increased while the value of labor and farm produce has decreased.

The New York World publishes a list showing the number of votes cast by the populist party in all of the states at the last general election as compared to the votes cast by the same party in 189–. The World also says. In 1892 the populist party polled altogether 1,041,028 votes for president. Between 1892 and 1894 there was no general election the returns of which can be compared with the year preceeding. This year the populist vote was 1,636,600, a gain of nearly 600,000 in two years.

AN EMINENT OPINION,

L. C. Lord, president of the State Normal school at Moorhead, has this to say of Rube Allyn, who gives an entertainment here on the 14th inst.

"I have had the privilege of hearing Rube Allyn upon two separate occasions. He is a reader of easy presence, with great facial expression, clear enunciation, and never fails to please his audiance. His skill in rendering the various dialects is seldom equalled and rarely surpassed."

An Exchange says:—Money makes money. No one is so poor that he can not raise a penny to start on Now, upon the first day of the month deposite one cent in the bank and upon each succeeding day of the month double your deposite. Follow out this program faithfully and at the end of the month you will be greatly surprised to find that your account will show the neat little sum of $4,589,777.92 to your credit. With this you can retire and let the other fellows hustle, or, if you are disposed to be avaricious, you can buy a country newspaper and double your wealth in a short time.

Let us see a new member of the rail road and warehouse commission must be appointed next January. The member whose term expires is a democrat the members holding over are republicans. The law requires that one of the commissioners must be of the opposite political party to the governor. This provision of the law will be obeyed by the appointment of a democrat but in view of the fact that the people's party is now the second in the state, the proper thing for the governor to do would be to appoint a populist. But the idea is preposterous. The democrats hold a mortgage on considerable that is to be distributed after Christmas and an anarchist would be a dangerous fellow on the commission. It will have to be a democrat, we guess.—Norman County Herald.

The Milwaukee Sentinel says the English syndicate has secured options until next April on 45 paper mills in the Fox river valley and it looks as if the deal would go through. This ought to bring quite a lump of foreign capital to the northwest.—Exchange.

That would be the cry if the congress of the United States offered itself for sale to the highest bidder:—"What a lump of foreign capital that will bring into this country" the old party editors would cry. What does the investment of foreign capital mean? It means domestic slavery. Generations will have to pay the interest on it. The republic becomes a nation of slaves. If the people of the United States had fair play they could produce wealth enough for all their uses without becoming bond slaves to England or any one else. Curses on the men who have wrought these evil conditions where a new world of workers can only exist by running into debt to an old world of workers.—I. D. in Representative.

Thief River Falls Press, The Hubert Bros. Comedy Co. appeared at the G. N. Hall Saturday night in the "Commercial Drummer." The play though light was productive of the greatest possible amusement and the audiance was held in a state of uproarious laughter during the entire performance. W. B. Herbert who appeared in the title role of the Drummer proved more clever than ever and his rendition of this character was simply perfection. Miss Mabel Owen who appeared as Verda Miller did some very good work and her ease and grace in the impersonation of this character showed that she is a talented little actress. The people did ample justice to their parts, But the real essence of the play is found in two characters, the one as impersonated by Mr Hubert and Gulick Larson a Swede which was most excellently handled by Fred Zeh.

The People's Party That the Plute Press Said Was Dead.

THE INCREASE OVER 600,000.

While Some Offices Are Lost the Party Is Much Stronger.

A "LANDSLIDE" THE OTHER WAY.

Figures That Will Grow When Populist Freight Train Gets In.

The New York World Gives Way to Its Fondness For "Scoops" and Tells a Story That Its Associate Plutocratic Sheets Would Rather Keep Dark—Table Showing the Vote of 1892 and 1894, the Latter Sometimes Estimated, but Always In the Way Most Unfavorable to the People's Party—The Handwriting on the Wall.

Revised returns of the vote cast at the last general election do not confirm the claim so recklessly made 24 hours after the polls were closed that "the Populist party has been destroyed anyhow." The great western and southern party did lose the governorships of Kansas and Colorado and met with some unexpected defeats elsewhere which attracted attention and gave rise to the belief that its growth had been checked, but an examination of the official returns shows that the belief, after all, was not well founded.

In 1892 the Populist party polled altogether 1,041,028 votes for president. Between 1892 and 1894 there was no general election the returns of which can be compared with the year preceding. This year the Populistic vote was 1,636,000, a gain of nearly 600,000 votes in two years!

How much greater the vote might have been had not the two old parties in many of the western states surrendered to the silver craze which is sweeping over that section nobody knows. Senator Matthew Stanley Quay of Pennsylvania and Senator James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey, who have studied the matter very closely, say it is not at all improbable that all the western delegates in the next national conventions may withdraw in a body if they are unable to secure declarations in favor of free coinage.

The appended table shows the vote for Populist candidates in 1894 compared with the vote in 1892. The figures are in many cases official. In others they are not. In some states the boards of canvassers will not meet until the middle of December. So far as possible, the vote for congressional candidates has been taken as the best test of strength.

In the states in which no official returns are obtainable The World's correspondents have made very careful estimates based on the returns by counties. This work has been done so carefully that the grand total will not vary more than 2,000 or 3,000 at the most from the official figures. Here is the vote by states:

†For governor in August.

In 1892 the Democrats in the states of Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, North Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming fused with the Populists to take the states named from the Republicans. This year in several of these states the Democrats ran a third ticket. In 1892 the fusionist ticket in Nebraska received 88,134 votes. In 1894 the Populist alone polled 60,978 votes for their congressional candidates.

In North Carolina the Republicans and Populists fused this year, but the Republican independent voters ran a third ticket. In South Carolina, where the Democratic organization fell into the hand of the Tillman Populists, the straightout Democrats also ran a third ticket.

In 1892 the Populist party cast about one-twelfth of the total vote. This year the total vote cast, except in Illinois, California, Wisconsin, Texas and one or two other states, was much smaller than in 1892. It is doubtful if it was more than 10,000,000 altogether.

In two years, therefore, the third party has grown from a representation of 5,000,000 to a representation of 8,000,000 people.—New York World, Nov. 27.

TO THE POPULISTS.

CHAIRMAN TAUBENECK MAKES A STATEMENT OF INTEREST.

He Advocates an Early Meeting of the Party's Leaders—Lessons Drawn From the Late Election—Men Who Have Loyally Supported the Cause.

[Official.]

The result of the late election is before us. We have increased our aggregate vote about 100 per cent since 1892 and have broken the solid south. We have convinced our opponents and the world that we are a fixed factor in politics and have come to stay. A new party that can double its voting strength in two years shows a vitality that has not been excelled by any new party in the history of our country. Every Populist can be proud of the record we have made this year. The People's Party is the only political organization whose members stand as a unit in all sections on the principles it advocates. The two old parties have their eastern, northern, western and southern factions, each one holding antagonistic views on all the great industrial questions which are forging their way to the front.

In 12 out of the 14 states west of the Mississippi river which in the past have been classed as Republican, the People's Party is first and second in voting strength, all except Iowa and California. In these 12 we have reduced the Democratic strength to a few stragglers, and had it not been for the administration and goldbug Democrats nominating dummy tickets for the Democratic farmers and laborers to support, while they voted with the Republicans, we would have elected our candidates in a majority of these states. In the states south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers we are second in voting strength in 8 out of 14 states, and the Democratic party remains in control by fraud and counting the colored vote.

The Democratic party in the south is the negro party, because without their votes a majority of the southern states would have elected Populist governors this year.

Headquarters of the People's Party were opened Jan. 1. Contributions to defray expenses were made by the Populist senators, representatives and other friends throughout the land. The total amount received from all sources was $1,349.80, an average of $122.71 per month, only a trifle more than a congressman's clerk receives for "spinning yarns." Out of this amount we had to defray all expenses, as room rent and furniture for same, fuel, gas bills, clerk hire, stationery, postage, telegraphing, printing, board and many other incidental expenses.

Any one familiar with this kind of work can readily see that the greatest economy was necessary. Doubtless either of the old parties has used more than this amount in the average county in the United States. In connection with this I wish to thank Hon. Lafe Pence of Colorado, Colonel George C. Ellison of Washington, Leroy Templeton of Indiana and Thomas Davis of Macon, Ills., who came to the rescue and saved headquarters from being closed in the middle of the campaign. I doubt if the people will ever appreciate or be able to repay them for the sacrifice they have made for our cause. There is one thing that Mr. Pence doesn't know, and that is when to cease giving for the cause.

In many respects this campaign has been a phenomenal and stormy one—in fact, it has no parallel in our history. Many grave questions confronted the committee, which required careful consideration, and perhaps but few realized the critical position the party occupied. The industrial army movement as well as the strikes and general discontent introduced a new feature into the political arena which demanded close attention. On these questions we were flooded with letters demanding that our committee issue an address indorsing the industrial army movement and inviting every one to come to Washington, while others as zealously demanded that we issue an address denouncing it in the severest terms. The same was true of the great coal and railway strikes, which were the cause for some very acrimonious correspondence between some good Populists and headquarters. Although we at the time were severely criticised by both sides for remaining silent, yet I think that time has proved that the policy of the committee was best.

Headquarters will have to be closed after this week, but many suggestions have been made by our press and leaders for a conference composed of the members of the national committee, chairmen of the state committees, representatives of the reform press, congressmen of the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth congresses and other leaders in our party to discuss ways and means for conducting an educational campaign from now until the meeting of the next national convention.

This is very important because during the short session of the present congress and the Fifty-fourth congress questions of great importance will be discussed. The money power is not yet satisfied. They demand the repeal of the income tax, the destruction of the greenbacks and the passage of the national banking bill as outlined by the late Bankers' association held in Baltimore. The financial question will come to the front, and the Republicans will be as servile and do the bidding of the money power as much as the Democrats have done.

In addition to the Populist delegation in congress I am greatly indebted for counsel to Mr. J. M. Devine, Mr. I. L. Johnson and Byron E. Shear. Mr. Devine, as secretary of the American Bimetallic league, has loyally stood by our cause. He is one of the ablest men in our party and will do credit to any cause he may espouse. The people of this country will never learn or be able to recompense Messrs. Shear and Johnson for the sacrifices they have made.

Admitting the Situation at Last.

It is imperative that congress at the short session shall appoint an expert and unbiased commission to study this delicate and complex problem and indicate the legislation needed to free the treasury from a recurrence of present disturbances and secure to the people a safe, uniform and elastic currency.—New York Herald.

SUMMING UP.

An Analysis of Election Returns Which Will Not Be Materially Changed.

As the election returns come in the Populist vote appears more satisfactory. The aggregate vote of 1892 was one [illegible] 042,020, while so far as can be found from the returns up to date the aggregate vote at the recent elections will reach 2,200,000. This shows a gain of more than 100 per cent, which ought to satisfy the most sanguine, since it is the aggregate vote which discloses the growth of a party. In 1890 the People's Party received less than 300,000 votes. In 1892 this vote had grown to 1,0[illegible] 000, while in 1894 it has reached 2,20[illegible] 000. Imagine what will be the re[illegible] in 1896 if this growth is continued. When the returns are all in and a careful analysis is made, it will be found that the real Populist vote has increased in every state, Kansas and Colorado excepted.

The defeat in Kansas may be charged principally to the settlement of Oklahoma and the drought. Thousands of Populists from Kansas and Nebraska went to Oklahoma to get cheap land and begin life anew out of debt. There were many also who abandoned their farms because of financial ruin and drifted to other sections. Mr. Simpson, whose district adjoins Oklahoma, was defeated for these reasons alone. The Democrats who to some extent had voted the reform ticket deserted it almost to a man. This desertion, together with the emigration, brought about the Populist defeat, which would have been a victory had either of these not occurred.

In Colorado thousands of miners and operators who were generally Populist were compelled to leave the state on account of the mines closing down. Thousands more were coerced by the Business Men's league and money interests. This, together with the unpopularity of Governor Waite, wrought the disaster.

In the east surprising gains have been made. The south has disclosed a wonderful reaction, which threatens the entire destruction of the Democratic party. We have five senators now, to whom will be added one from North Carolina, making six certain, with a prospect of having another from South Carolina. In the house we have one each from Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Nevada and Alabama, together with five from North Carolina, making ten in all who will be given certificates of election. We shall contest in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Kentucky and probably in Tennessee and North Carolina. Out of these contests we should get not less than 22 members, which will give us all told over 30 congressmen.

Heating the Poultry House.

Artificial heat in the poultry house causes the hens to take cold when they go outside; but the suggestion given by us last year might be mentioned again for the benefit of some who may not have noticed it. It is to hang a lighted stable lantern in the poultry house on very cold nights. It will not create much heat, but will raise the temperature sufficiently to dry the interior and make the hens more comfortable. Care should be exercised, however, to suspend the lantern by the use of wire, and to use every precaution to avoid liability of destruction by fire.

MISS GING'S MURDER.

A MINNEAPOLIS WOMAN FOULLY MURDERED.

The Victim of a Plot to Obtain Life Insurance—Charles A. Blixt Makes a Confession Implicating Harry Hayward.

Minneapolis, Special.—At 9:30 last evening the dead body of Miss Catherine Ging, a dressmaker with parlors in the Syndicate block, Minneapolis, was found lying in a desolate spot on the side of the country road, half a mile west of Lake Calhoun, with a bullet in her brain. About 7 o'clock last evening she engaged a carriage from the West Hotel and drove away alone. The man who found her body met the carriage rapidly driven to town by an unknown man. Later in the evening the carriage horse, minus the driver, entered the livery stable from which it was hired, and when the owner of the stable examined the rig he found blood and brains scattered about the bottom of the carriage, and on the back of the curtain, which had been torn as though a woman's body had been thrown through it.

Miss Ging had been living at the Ozark apartment house with her niece Miss. Louisa Ireland, who is a very pretty and accomplished girl of seventeen years old and who moves in the best society.

The murder created a great sensation in Minneapolis and completely mystified the police.

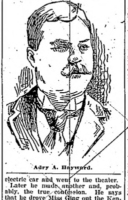
Harry Hayward, who was known to have been intimately acquainted with the dead woman, was taken in custody and put through a sweating process by the police. He was able to prove an alibi and was released, but was subsequently rearrested and charged with the murder. It was learned by the police that he had loaned Miss Ging $7,000, taking as security a $10,000 life insurance policy. Adry Hayward, a brother of Harry, was also arrested and made a confession, stating that his brother had disclosed to him the details of a plot to get rid of Miss Ging, for the purpose of getting the life insurance.

Acting on clues furnished through Adry's confession, the police arrested Charles A. Blixt, engineer at the Ozark apartment house, of which Harry Hayward was manager, as an accomplice, it being believed that he was the actual murderer.

Blixt Confesses.

Minneapolis, Dec. 11. — Charles A. Blixt is the self-confessed murderer of Catherine Ging.

He made a full confession last night, or, rather, made two confessions. In the first one he said that Harry Hayward committed the deed, and that Hayward left to Blixt the work of disposing of the body and the carriage, and that Hayward jumped upon an electric car and went to the theater.



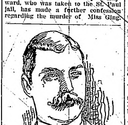
Adry A. Hayward.

Later he made another and, probably, the true confession. He says that he drove Miss Ging out the Kenwood boulevard, with the understanding that Haywood was to meet her, and later threw her body out of the carriage.

Blixt says that he was forced to commit the murder, as Hayward had threatened to kill him and his wife if he refused. He says that Hayward has already killed two men, and that he was planning to marry an Eastern girl who has $200,000, then kill her and her parents. Blixt says that Hayward had planned to burn the Ozark apartments next spring, even if every person in it perished. Blixt said that Hayward got him under his absolute control by inducing him to set fire to a barn merely to have fun with the fire department, and then told him that he could have him sent to the penitentiary.

Adry Talks Again.

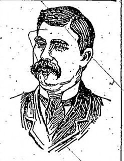
Minneapolis, Dec. 11.—Adry A. Hayward, who was taken to the St. Paul jail, has made a further confession regarding the murder of Miss Ging.



Harry Hayward.

He says that a criminal operation was performed upon Miss Ging about three weeks before her murder, and that it was probably for this reason, as well as to secure money, that his brother Harry plotted to kill her. Adry claims that his brother is a hypnotist and that he was afraid of him. Adry says that Harry offered him $2,000 to kill Miss Ging, and when he refused Harry threatened to hire a man to kill him. The object of Adry's removal to St. Paul was ostensibly to protect him from influences that might be brought to bear upon him to make him change his base on his confession. That he will be carefully taken care of is assured by the fact that he is strictly in favor of telling things that must invariably hang his brother, and may possible lead to a disagreeable quarter of an hour for himself, in which he will be very closely in touch with the sheriff. He tells, in a matter-of-fact way, a story that leaves but the details to be proved to give his brother over to the hangman. His story is necessarily disjointed and all through it he was prompted from time to time, yet his utterances go to show that he has but one version of it to give and also suggests that if Harry Hayward is the man that Adry paints him he will presently go to the witness stand and tell the actual truth of the matter to the end that his brother may suffer the same fate that is waiting for him.

Harry Hayward has been taken from the Minneapolis jail and placed in jail at some other town. The necessity of his removal arose from the disturbed condition of public sentiment in Minneapolis. There was no actual danger at any time that there would really be a hostile demonstration against the men, but the authorities conceived that it would tend to allay excitement if he were removed for a time. Not only in Minneapolis, but in St. Paul, the murder was the sole topic of conversation in the resorts where men congregate, and the tone of the people of Minneapolis was at least menacing. Every one agreed that a lynching would be a most desirable thing, if it were not for the reflection it would cast on the good name of the community, and it was much easier to temporarily take Hayward out of town than to reckon with the uncertainty of a crowd gathering about the place of his confinement.



Charles A. Blixt.

St. Paul, Dec. 11.—Harry Hayward is in the St. Paul jail, but care is taken that he and his brother Adry hold no communication.

One Use for Wealth.

Lord Aberdeen is reported as telling the following story of himself: He left London at midnight in a sleeping car for the north. In the morning when he was awakened he saw a stranger opposite him.

"Excuse me," said the stranger; "may I ask if you are rich?"

Somewhat surprised, his lordship replied that he was tolerably well-to-do.

"May I ask," continued the stranger, "how rich you are?"

"Well, if it will do you any good to know," was the reply, "I suppose I have several hundred thousand pounds."

"Well," went on the stranger, "if I were as rich as you, and snored as loudly as you, I should take a whole car so as not to interrupt the sleep of others."

Six Months for Dreaming.

At least one individual here has solved the problem of life easily so far as sustaining it is concerned. When the justice asked him this morning what he was doing in the hallway of a mansion when the policeman arrested him, his trampship replied: "I wus dreamin' I was eaten, when dis cop cum along an' woke me up. It's de only way I ever git a meal, an' de cop stopped me when I wus tacklin' duck." Then the fellow told the court that work and himself had parted company ten years ago, and got six months.—New York Letter.

The Usual Thing.

St. Peter—Did you expect to get in here with a record like yours?

Tammany Policeman—Can't we compromise on a reprimand and a fine of two weeks' pay?

A Brief Description.

Reporter—How would you describe the scene when this fire started?

Chief of Fire Department (who has his suspicions)—Kerosene.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S LUNCH

Hard Work and Indigestion go Hand in Hand.

When a five horse-power engine is made to do ten horse-power work something is going to break. Very often the hard-worked man coming from the field or the office will "bolt" his food in a few minutes which will take hours to digest. Then too, many foods are about as useful in the stomach as a keg of nails would be in a fire under a boiler. The ill-used stomach refuses to do its work without the proper stimulus which it gets from the blood and nerves. The nerves are weak and "ready to break," because they do not get the nourishment they require from the blood, finally the ill-used brain is morbidly wide awake when the overworked man attempts to find rest in bed.

The application of common sense in the treatment of the stomach and the whole system brings to the busy man the full enjoyment of life and healthy digestion when he takes Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to relieve a bilious stomach or after a too hearty meal, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood. The "Pellets" are tiny sugar-coated pills made of highly concentrated vegetable ingredients which relieve the stomach of all offending matters easily and thoroughly. They need only be taken for a short time to cure the biliousness, constipation and slothfulness, or torpor, of the liver; then the "Medical Discovery" should be taken in teaspoonful doses to increase the blood and enrich it. It has a peculiar effect upon the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, toning up and strengthening them for all time. The whole system feels the effect of the pure blood coursing through the body and the nerves are vitalized and strengthened, not deadened, or put to sleep, as the so-called celery compounds and nerve mixtures do—but refreshed and fed on the food they need for health. If you suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, and any of the ills which come from impure blood and disordered stomach, you can cure yourself with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which can be obtained at any drug store in the country.

Sea Air vs. Living Skeletons.

Macdonald Gordon of Healey, Australia, weighed but thirty-four pounds, although six feet in height and broad in proportion. Some London speculators heard of the freak and resolved to put the "bloomin' livin' skeleton" on exhibition in the British capital. They sent a man to the Antipodes to bring the skinny Mac at any reasonable figure, but when he arrived they were on the point of arresting the agent for fraud—the "living skeleton" weighed 141 pounds! The sea air and change of food had ruined the speculation.—St Louis Republic.

A Capable Valet.

Chapple—Do you feel obliged to kiss your wife, now that you are married?

Cholly—I haven't so far; I suppose my man attends to all that.

Weak as a Cat

Is a bad simile, for the cat is a very muscular animal for its size. But to be weak as a convalescent after a wasting and protracted disease is to be weak indeed. Nothing in the way of a tonic promotes convalescence, hastens a gain in strength, like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It increases appetite, helps digestion and induces sleep. Nervous invalids derive from it unspeakable benefit. It cures malaria, rheumatism, constipation.

So Was Braggleigh.

Dick—Oh, well, Centaur was a mythological horseman.

A Modern Reading.

Della—Mamma, when you were divorced, why was it called an "absolute" divorce?

Mamma—The absolution refers to the co-respondent, my child.

If the Baby is Cutting Teeth.
Be sure and use that old and well-tried remedy, MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for Children Teething.

True to the Letter.

Purchaser—You told me this horse was easy to manage, and the brute ran away with me the first day I had him out.

Horse Dealer—I didn't say that. I said he was very easy to get away with. He always runs away.

Got Used to Them.

Mrs. Nuwed—Your little boy does not seem to be very much afraid of policemen.

Mrs. Hussiff—Why, no. The nurse maid used to take him out every day in the park.

The butcher is no gambler, but he is always ready to stake the lucky boarding house keeper.

The era of reform is the name that this period of our national life promises to bear in history.

It is common for a man to bring up his niece, but what do you think of a man who raises his ante?

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

HUBBY WAS IN THE WAY.

So He Was Removed With Due Neatness and Dispatch.

Dickinson, S. D., Dec. 11 — Mrs. Orlando Giles and Billy Davidson, who have run a small herd of cattle in the Cave Hills district, south of Dickinson, for the past eighteen months, have been arrested and taken to Minnesela, S. D. An indictment has been found against them for the mysterious death of the husband of Mrs. Giles, which happened eighteen months ago. Mr. Giles was returning home from Dickinson alone and was shot in an out-of-the-way place a few miles from his home. The law has been slow in its course, especially as Mrs. Giles and Davidson live in unsavory and unorganized territory on the state boundary line.

The Giles family moved to this country from New York five years ago, and it appears that Davidson and Mrs. Giles became much too intimate to suit Giles; whereupon Davidson was ordered to leave the premises. This he did; but Mr. Giles was killed while absent from home and soon after Davidson returned and remained until his arrest.

Many of them were badly bruised, and one soldier was knocked senseless, but all were able to leave the train at Fort Sheridan. The men were all privates.

The World's Tribute to Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893

World's Fair HIGHEST MEDAL awarded to Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

Cleaning Pots and Pans.

A woman naturally hates to clean up a bread or cake bowl after the dough has got hard. They should be cleaned as soon as used, but if necessary to leave them for a time, run the tray or bowl full of cold water and let it stand so. When you get ready to clean it the dough will be in the bottom of the utensil as a general thing, and you will only have to rinse and dry it. The same is true of kettles and skillets. I do not approve of setting any utensils aside when the dishes are washed, for if you keep an oyster shell with a thick smooth edge at hand you can clean the roughness out of anything in half a moment, but if you don't want to do it just then you will find that an iron pot in which potatoes have been burned to the bottom, or a skillet in which meat or gravy has simmered to a crust, will be easy enough to clean, after standing an hour or two filled with cold water.—Washington Star.

Where Counterfeiting Fails.

There are several interesting declarations in the annual report of William P. Hazen, Chief of the United States Secret Service. He says that it has become an easy matter, owing to the development of photo-litography, to make a faithful imitation of the designs of our paper money. The counterfeiter, however, has never been able to discover how the money used in the manufacture of our money is made. It has been a well-guarded secret. The alteration of notes is a crime which is increasing, and more arrests were made for this offense last year than in any previous year. Counterfeiting coin is also on the increase, but none of the counterfeits of silver are very deceptive or dangerous. Strange to say, there is no law punishing the passing of mutilated, lightened or debased coins, and the chief therefore recommends such an enactment.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Too Nice for an Athlete.

A "dude," who had never earned his bread by the perspiration of his brow, went into a shop in Detroit, according to the Free Press, and stood wearily before the counter.

"I want to purchase a perspirer," he said in a ladylike voice, as the clerk came up.

"Oh," said the clerk; "you mean a sweater," and he sold him one at the regular price.

Hidden Money Brought Out.

Twenty years ago Arch Price died near this city, aged eighty-five years, and it was believed he left his son, Edmund, thousands, but no one was the wiser until to-day, when the son, now sixty-nine years old, brought to a bank in this city a large quantity of gold, also a lot of silver, principally Mexican dollars and five-franc pieces, all of which has been buried since long before the war. The son has always lived the life of a bachelor and but a short time ago took it into his head to marry. His girl "went back" on him, and he fell in love with another, and is now getting ready for the occasion, which has caused him to bring out some of his hidden money. He has much more hid, but will not say where, nor will he bring it out until after the marriage. He has a valuable farm in Elk River Valley.—Charleston W. Va, Despatch to Baltimore Sun.

This Beats Walking.

The ruse of Rabelais, who, finding himself penniless at Amiens and wishing to go to Paris, had himself arrested and traveled there as a suspect at the king's expense, has been outdone. A stranded theatrical company, wishing to go from Dayton to Cleveland, caused the arrest of one of its members on a charge of opening aletter belonging to another member. The accused was taken before the United States Commissioner at Cleveland, where the other members of the company were subpoened as witnesses. They, of course, secured his acquittal, and also their fees, amounting to $6.25 a piece. It was the most profitable engagement they have played this season, but the commissioner is willing to bet that they can't play it on him again.—Cincinnati Times Star.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

LAST SESSION OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

A Condensed Record of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Matters of Importance Dealt With.

Washington, Dec. 12. — Mr. Harris (Dem., Tenn.), president pro tem, called the senate to order in the absence of Vice President Stevenson, who has not yet returned from Asheville, N. C., where he is with his family. Senators Hill, Blackburn and Carey were in their seats for the first time this session. Mr. Call (Dem., Fla.) presented a resolution setting forth that the independence of the Island of Cuba is an object of great importance to the United States, and requesting the president to commence negotiations with Spain for the recognition of the independence of the island and for the guarantee of the United States of the payment of such a sum of money as shall be agreed on between the United States and Spain. The resolution went over until to-morrow. Mr. Call also presented a resolution declaring that the further prosecution of the war between China and Japan will not be advantageous to the peace of civilization, and that the interests of the world require that all governments shall unite in negotiating with Japan and China for the termination of the war. Without discussion the resolution was referred to the committee on foreign relations. The senate, on motion of Mr. Morgan, took up the Nicaraguan canal bill. The bill was read at length, and Mr. Morgan made a speech in behalf of the bill.

The house devoted the day under the rules of the business reported from the District of Columbia committee. Several bills of purely local importance were passed and a resolution adopted setting aside the third Saturday in January for eulogies on the life and character of Marcus B. Lisle, late representative from the Tenth Kentucky district. A joint resolution was also passed to pay the officers and employes of the house and senate their salary for the present month on Dec. 20.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The struggle over the bill to authorize railroad pooling was terminated by the passage of the bill by the decisive vote of 166 to 116. The Cooper substitute, which placed the entire control of the conditions of pooling in the hands of the interstate commerce commission, and gave the absolute power in the matter of revoking pooling orders, was defeated, as were also all subsequent efforts to amend and recommit it, and the bill passed as reported from the committee. Several attempts were made to defeat the bill by filibustering, but they also were unsuccessful.

The consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill was continued in the senate and Senator Dolph made a long speech in favor of the bill, in the course of which he advocated the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The venerable senator from Vermont (Mr. Morrill) made some remarks in which he criticised the currency inflation bills reported adversely from the finance committee. The day closed with an executive session in which a large number of nominations were confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 14.— The house entered upon the consideration of the urgency deficiency appropriation bill. The bill contained two disputed items, the appropriation for special pension examiners, and the appropriation for the collection of the income tax. The former appropriation opened the doors for a debate on the conduct of the pension office, and especially the practice of summarily suspending the payment of alleged fraudulent pensions, and the debate on the income tax appropriation was especially lively, but the motion to strike it out was defeated in committee by a vote of 54 to 127. It is probable that a record making vote will be demanded in the house to-morrow.

Senator Gray made an unsuccessful attempt to have considered in the senate the bill reported from the finance committee striking out all the differential duties in favor of refined sugar and leaving all sugar dutiable at 40 per cent ad valorem. There were a great many absentees so that the defeat was not so decisive as to discourage further efforts of the same kind. The majority vote of ten against taking up the closure resolution, which followed, indicates, it is believed, the improbability of changing the rules at this session. Mr. Morgan again addressed the senate on the Nicaraguan bill, and in concluding expressed his intention of soon asking that unanimous consent be given fixing a time for a vote on the bill.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The house passed three appropriation bills—the urgency deficiency, fortifications, and military academy—and made fair progress on the pension bill. Mr. Cockran secured a record-making vote on the appropriation of the collection of the income tax by moving to recommit the bill, with instructions to strike it out, but his motion was defeated by 120 majority, the vote standing 49 to 169. The fortifications bill, as passed, carries $1,879,057—$5,478,646 less than the estimates, and the military academy bill $457,678—$127,372 less than the estimates. The pension bill—to which the day will be devoted to-morrow, carries $141,381,570—$200,000 less than the estimates, and $10,200,000 less than the appropriation for the current fiscal year.

The senate adjourned until next Monday. Practically all the time of the session to-day was consumed in the discussion of the bill to establish a national university at Washington, and the Nicaragua canal bill. Senator Hunton of Virginia and Senator Vilas of Wisconsin addressed the senate in support of the former, and Mr. Morgan practically concluded his speech on the latter. During the day he asked the senate that unanimous consent be given fixing a time for a vote on the bill, but this was refused.

Washington, Dec. 18.—By the close vote of 9 to 8 the committee on banking and currency of the house decided to report Secretary Carlisle's plan for a revision of the currency. Representatives Johnson of Ohio and Ellis of Kentucky, Democrats, voted with the Republicans against reporting this plan. The committee on rules will be asked to fix the final vote in the house for next Friday at 3 p. m. This conclusion was reported after a spirited executive session of the committee. It has been in session for a week, hearing officials and bankers on the proposed revision. The hearings closed and at 4 o'clock the committee held a private session to determine on a programme. Representative Brosius (Rep., Pa.) endeavored to secure further time for hearings, but his motion to this effect was voted down. Half an hour was given for caucuses by the respective sides. At the Republican meeting it was agreed that their votes should be cast together on all propositions. When the full committee reassembled Representative Hall (Dem., Mo.) moved that the Carlisle bill be reported. This prevailed by the vote of 9 to 8, as stated.

NOVELIST DEAD.

Robert Louis Stevenson Dies Suddenly in Samoa.

Auckland, N. Z., Dec. 18.—Advices from Apia, Samoa, of date Dec. 8, are to the effect that the well known novelist, Robert Louis Stevenson, had died suddenly from apoplexy. His remains were interred on the summit of Pala mountain, 1,300 feet high. At the time of his death Mr. Stevenson had half completed the writing of a new novel.

Robert Louis Stevenson was born in Edinburgh, Nov. 13, 1850. He was educated at private schools and at the University of Edinburgh, and was called to the Scottish bar, but traveled and devoted himself to literature. One of his earliest works was an account of his travels in California, but the work which established his reputation as a writer of fiction was "Treasure Island," published in 1883. Among the most popular of his works is Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which was dramatized and played at the Lyceum theater in London in 1888, and subsequently in the United States. Among his other works are "Kidnaped," "The New Arabian Nights," and "The Black Arrow." Some time ago Mr. Stevenson, who was suffering from lung trouble, went to the South Pacific for his health. He became enraptured with the Samoan islands and decided to take up his residence and spend the rest of his days there. He took close interest in Samoan affairs, and has written many letters to the newspapers in favor of the natives as against the treaty powers under whose direction the government of the islands is conducted.

NO LIMIT TO GUILE.

Even Christmas Said to Be Utilized in Furthering Swindles.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 18.—The police were informed to-day by a victim of the trick that a Chicago firm, located on La Salle street, is carrying on a diamond swindle that is a very catching thing at this holiday time of the year. The plan of the firm as described by the informant is the sending, C. O. D., to persons whose names have been secured in some way, of jewelery boxes purporting to contain diamonds. When the boxes are opened the diamonds prove to be worth about 10 cents each. The boxes bear the firm name of Perue, Wright & Co., Chicago. Hundreds of these packages are said to have reached Pittsburg, with express charges ranging from $1 to $4. Some have been delivered, but owing to the timely notice given the police, many remain in the express office. The Adams Express company agent has telegraphed to Chicago asking that an investigation be set on foot.

The President Goes Hunting.

Washington, Dec. 18. — President Cleveland, accompanied by Dr. O'Reilly, Capt. R. D. Evans and Mr. Charles Jefferson, left Washington last evening on an Atlantic coast line train for a hunting trip on the coast of South Carolina. The trip has been in contemplation since early fall, and is taken at this time in the hope that the outing will benefit the president and eradicate the remnant of his rheumatism, which still lingers with him. The party will return in about a week.

Seeds Where Most Needed.

Washington, Dec. 18. — Secretary Morton has determined this year to devote his quota of free seeds, amounting to one-third of the whole, to the farmers of those Western states that have suffered so severely through last season's drought. In this action the secretary follows the precedent he established last year of distributing to the sufferers by the great storms and floods on the Carolina coast, the greater portion of the seed sent out directly by him.

Found Dead.

Waupun, Wis., Dec. 18.—The Schultz children, who disappeared, and for whom hundreds of men have been searching, were found dead in the woods two miles from the homestead. They lost their way during last Monday's snow storm and died from exposure.

GILFILLAN IS DEAD.

MINNESOTA'S CHIEF JUSTICE PASSES AWAY.

After an Illness Lasting Several Months He Succumbs to Bright's Disease—A Sketch of Justice Gilfillan's Life.

St. Paul, Dec. 18.—After an illness of a little over four months, Chief Justice James Gilfillan passed peacefully away at 6:04 yesterday morning. His death was caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. Justice Gilfillan was unconscious for some little time before the end came. There was no one present when he died but members of the family. Dr. Senkler, who attended him throughout his illness, was with him until midnight, and was convinced when he went away that death would come before morning. The news of his death spread rapidly among the close friends of the family, and all day yesterday they kept calling at the residence to extend their consolations to the surviving members of the family and view the remains of their departed friend. Justice Gilfillan was an ex-commander of the Loyal Legion of Minnesota, the only society of which he was a member. He could never be induced to join societies, because he felt that it would tend to cast discredit on his impartial disposition on the bench. The commander of the Loyal Legion has issued a call for all the members to participate in the funeral services.

James Gilfillan was born in Scotland in 1829, and the following year his parents came to this country and settled on a farm in New York. The boy attended common school for three or four months in the year until he was sixteen years of age, when he began the study of law. He was admitted to the bar at Albany in 1850. In 1857 he came to St. Paul, and immediately began the practice of his profession.

But when the call for volunteers came the young lawyer enlisted in the Seventh regiment, Minnesota volunteers, on Aug. 9, 1862. This was one of the regiments that was ordered out to defend the settlers of the state against the ravages of the Sioux Indians.

He served with his regiment in the campaign against the Indians in the fall of 1862 and summer of 1863, and was in the battles of Wood Lake and Big Mound. He accompanied his regiment to St. Louis and was in action with it at Harrisburg and Paduca. Oct. 8, 1862, he was promoted to captain, and on Nov. 1, 1864, he was mustered out of the Seventh regiment. Two days later, Nov. 3, 1864, he joined the Eleventh Minnesota regiment and was commissioned colonel of that regiment Oct. 13, 1864, having been mustered in as colonel.

He was mustered out of the army with an honorable discharge July 16, 1865. During the last year of his service he was in command of the Third division of the military of Middle Tennessee. His knowledge of law came into service even on the battlefield, and he served at some of the most notable court martial proceedings during the war.

At the close of the war Judge Gilfillan returned to St. Paul and took up the practice of law again. In 1869 he was appointed by Gov. Marshall chief justice of the state supreme court to fill the unexpired term of Justice Thomas Wilson, and served on the bench until 1870. He was again appointed to fill another vacancy in 1875, and held the office by election ever since.

He failed to receive the nomination and Judge Start was elected his successor. It is probable that Justice Collins will serve as chief justice until Chief Justice Start is sworn in next month.

FISTED TO DEATH.

Andy Bowen Killed in a Prize Fight in New Orleans.

New Orleans, Dec. 18.—Andy Bowen, who was defeated in the arena of the Auditorium club by Kid Lavigne of Saginaw, Mich., died from the effects of the punishment received. Andy died while Father Delaney was praying over him. He remained unconscious from the time he received the blow. The Dempsey-Ryan fight was declared off.

Lavigne was inexpressibly shocked when he heard the news of Bowen's death. He said he believed that when Bowen fell that his head had struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death.

Lavigne and his party were taken to the Third precinct police station. Lavigne was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000, the others $5,000. Duffy, the referee, and Spitzfaden, were the only ones to furnish bonds. Fitzsimmons telegraphed his sympathy and offered financial aid.

FEAR AN OUTBREAK.

Settlers at Pine Ridge Afraid of their Lives.

Pine Ridge, S. D., Dec. 18.—The Indians on the reservation are getting very restless and settlers are fearful of another outbreak of them, similar to that of three years ago. The Sioux have never been peaceful since then, and, on account of the dry weather that has made them very poor and unable to care for stock, they are fast becoming turbulent. It is believed extreme measures will be necessary to prevent trouble this winter, as the approach of cold weather is making the situation more critical.

Death of a Veteran.

Algona, Iowa, Dec. 18.—Capt. L. M. B. Smith, a retired merchant of this city, died last night of heart disease. He was a former resident of Oconomowoc, Wis., and served during the War of the Rebellion as captain in the First Wisconsin cavalry. He was well known throughout the Northwest

South Dakota Horticulturists.

Vermillion, S. D., Dec. 18.—The state horticulture convention has closed. H. C. Warner of Forestburg was elected president.

A CLERK USES A GUN.

Sensational Shooting affray at Council Bluffs.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Dec. 18. — A tragedy was enacted yesterday in the private office of the Citizens' State Bank of Council Bluffs which may result fatally to three persons. John Huntington, assistant bookkeeper and collection clerk, shot C. A. Cromwell of Minneapolis and F. N. Hayden of Chicago, representatives of the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, and then emptied his revolver into his own brain, inflicting a wound from which he died two hours later. Cromwell and Hayden, it is thought, will recover. Huntington was one of the best known men in Council Bluffs, and numbered his friends by the hundreds. So far as can be learned he had no bad habits, and this is what makes this act the harder to explain. On the 20th of last July a check of $500 was turned over to him by Ira F. Hendricks, one of the employes of the bank, in the regular routine of business. Huntington charged up the check to the Union Stock Yards Bank of South Omaha, and from that day to this nothing whatever has been seen or heard of it. The day following Huntington left for a vacation trip of several weeks to New York city. The bank officials kept thinking the check would turn up sooner or later and deferred any action. As time passed on and it became evident that the bank was out $500 they sent a message to the Fidelity and Casualty company, notifying them of the fact and suggesting that inspectors come on at once and make an investigation.

The bank officials claim that at the time they had no charges to make against Huntington or any employe of the bank. All of the employes were bonded in the Fidelity and the bank preferred that the Fidelity company should make the investigation rather than make it themselves. Messrs. Cromwell and Hayden arrived in the city last Friday and took rooms at the Grand hotel. They cross-examined each of the employes through whose hands the missing check had passed, and among the rest, Huntington. They claimed to have discovered that he had been spending more money than the salary of $45 a month, which he was receiving, would warrant, and on this, together with the fact that the check had been last seen in his hands, they based their suspicions. Huntington and the representatives of the Fidelity company met Saturday night and made arrangements for another meeting at the bank Sunday morning, when the investigation was to be resumed. At the hour appointed they were together and Cromwell and Hayden commenced to put the young man through a running cross-fire of questions. J. D. Edmundson and Cashier C. B. Hannan, of the bank, were present during most of the interview. The conference had not been in progress more than fifteen minutes when Huntington arose from his chair pulled a revolver and commenced firing at the representatives of the Fidelity company. The revolver he used was a 44-caliber that belonged to the bank and had been kept in the desk of G. F. Spooner, the paying teller. The first three shots were fired at Cromwell, who had taken the lead in the interrogation, and all three took effect. The fourth struck Hayden, and then Huntington raised the weapon to his own head and fired. He fell to the floor unconscious and remained so until his death.

The two wounded men ran out of the bank, down First avenue, and into the Grand hotel, blood dripping from them every step. They were taken to their rooms and Dr. Donald MacRae, Jr., was summoned. He found that one of the bullets had taken effect in Cromwell's back just to the right of the spine about the waist line. It was found about four inches below the surface and extracted. The second bullet struck in the left side of his cheek, plowed its way around the right side of his neck and came to a stop just after missing the carotid artery. The third struck him in the right wrist, he having thrown up his hand to strike the revolver out of Huntington's hand. It broke one of the bones of the forearm clear in two and imbedded itself in the other bone, almost severing it. Hayden was not so badly injured. Both men will probably recover.

EATEN ALIVE.

Terrible Fate of a Christian in Armenia.

Tiflis, Russian Trans-Caucasia, Dec. 18.—A letter which appeared in a paper here states that for nineteen days the residents of Armenian villages where the outrages were perpetrated fought against the Kurds. The Armenians lost only ten warriors while the Kurds lost 540. When the regular troops under Zekki Pasha appeared the Armenians were compelled to succumb. After Zekki Pasha's treachery in offering peace, sixty young Armenian men were seized and tortured horribly for three days. Then all were murdered and their bodies buried in a ditch. Among the Armenian heroes who lost their lives the writer mentions Derbedrose, who with his own hand killed seven Kurds in a fair fight. He was captured and flayed to the waist. Pieces of his flesh were cut off, broiled and eaten by the savage Turks while he was still alive.

What the Manchester Canal Does.

Liverpool, Dec. 18.—It is stated that the authorities of Liverpool have decided to reduce the dockage and town cotton dues in order to meet the competition of Manchester, to which raw cotton-laden steamers are going direct to the new ship canal.

Killed at a Club.

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 18.—Dock Hampton, a colored coachman, was fatally stabbed to-day in the Mechanics' club by an unknown negro. The club rooms were searched by the police, but nothing definite has been learned about the crime.

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 18.—Joseph L. Shipley, for twenty years editor and principal owner of the Springfield Union, died suddenly of heart disease shortly after midnight.

PINE LAND FRAUDS

THEY EXTEND ALL OVER NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

The Committee Promises a Very Sensational Report—New Suits Involving $200,000 to Be Begun Soon by the State.

Duluth, Dec. 14.—Senator Leavitt, chairman of the subcommittee on pine land investigation, spent a couple of days up here on an important case, and left last night highly pleased with the results of his visit. Next Tuesday the subcommittee will report to the full committee, and within eight or ten days the latter will probably make its report to the governor, with recommendations as to changes in legislation to remedy the evils discovered. Among the recommendations will probably be one to continue the work for another two years, as the investigation, although highly successful, has only begun to lay bare the rottenness in connection with the cutting of timber from state lands. The public knows considerable of the robbery that has been committed through the suits that have been brought by the committee, but its knowledge is but as a drop in the bucket. The report will simply astound the people at the magnitude of the crimes that have been committed against the public school fund. It will not deal in glittering generalities, but give facts and figures in such a way that it will leave no doubt as to their genuineness.

Thus far the state has recovered $30,000 through the investigation and suits are pending involving $20,000 more. Before many days new suits involving another $200,000 will be begun. The committee has been hampered by the fact that the original appropriation of $15,000 was not available on account of the objections raised by the state auditor, but the $8,000 from another appropriation has been used in the best way possible. The committee has worked in connection with the assessment of Itasca county, and it has therefore been a comparatively easy matter to discover whether a particular section was underestimated when the scale was turned in to the state. Wherever circumstances warranted the committee put experts at work who soon got at the bottom of things. Owing to the limited appropriation the investigations have been confined almost wholly to Itasca county, but the committee has incidentally learned enough to know that there have been extensive steals in St. Louis county as well. Indeed, the school lands all over the state have been subjected to depredations, and the Rainy River country will not show up in a favorable light.

The suits instituted by the committee are hurting worse than the public can have any idea of. They are liable to put some concerns in to bad financial condition. On one tract the state recovers at the rate of $11.50 per thousand, an exorbitant price. This was agreed to by the firm sued, because it knew that an investigation in the courts would show a most wretched state of affairs. When the committee set the value of the stumpage it did it with a view to making settlement next to impossible, knowing it had a strong case. When the terms were agreed to the members of the committee felt like weeping.

FIRE SUFFERERS' RELIEF.

The Bill Favorably Reported—How Its Passage May Be Delayed.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The committee on public lands to-day reported favorably to the house a bill introduced on Monday by Representative Lynch for the relief of the homesteaders of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, whose property and timber were destroyed by the great forest fires of last summer. One important provision of the bill is to permit partly burned lumber to be cut immediately, to save it from total loss. Mr Lynch could call his bill up and pass it to-morrow morning if it were not for the fact that Representative English of New Jersey objects to the passage of any legislation by unanimous consent, unless he can get through some private bill of his own. Representative Lynch thinks, however, he can induce English to allow this bill to go through some time this week.

Extends the Service.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The president to-day, after a conference with Secretary Carlisle and Commissioner Miller, of the internal revenue bureau, issued an order extending the civil service law and rules to the internal revenue service. The new extension will embrace 518 storekeepers, 578 gaugers, 1,190 storekeepers' gaugers, and 185 clerks in the offices of the collectors, making 2,471 in all. Deputy collectors, of which there are 963, are not included in this order. Nor are the deputies which will be appointed to assist in the collection of the income tax. Of the latter there are expected to be 199 for field work and 53 for service in the offices of collectors. The new order goes into immediate effect.

Took Belladonna.

Indianapolis, Dec. 14.—Lulu Leslie, a dancer with the Bessie Bonehill company, playing an engagement in this city, is unconscious with little hope of recovery, the result of an overdose of beladonna. She has been suffering with severe headaches and sent a bellboy for anti-pyrene. The boy returned with the belladonna which a druggist's boy had given him by mistake. Miss Leslie swallowed five grains of the drug. The druggist discovered the mistake, but not until Miss Leslie had been overcome with the effects of the poison. The girl resides in New York city.

Decrease in Taxes in Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 14.—The total valuation of this city, as taken from the auditor's books, is $41,116,614, of which $36,262,499 is realty. The tax rate is 27.9 mills. Both the valuation and rate are less than a year ago.

Grocers Fail.

Armour, S. D., Dec 14.—The firm of Bracha & Pratt, the largest and considered one of the most substantial grocery firms in this section, made an assignment to-day for the benefit of creditors.

Springfield advance.—The agitation throughout the state for a primary election law is an omen of political good. Flagrant evils attend the present vicious caucus methods which a good primary election law would remedy. Our law makers in the new legislature can find no better field for their work.

Today Sheriff-elect Steenerson informed a Tribune man that he had selected Arthur Toupin of Red Lake Falls as his his chief deputy. Mr. Toupin was a prominent candidate for the nomination of clerk of the district court on the populist ticket and is highly spoken of as an upright business man of ability.—Crookston Tribune.

Bill Nye wants some one to answer this question: Why should a man whose parents three or four generations back lived in trees and hung by their tails to the branches thereof, vote in America, not knowing a ring worm from a joint resolution, while the mothers of statesmen and warriors taxed without representation, remain dumb during the decay of patriotism.

Austin Transcript.—The subject of the reapportionment of the state is surely coming up for settlement in the legislature this winter. There is an inequality which should be rectified. Some of the counties now have too much proportionately and some have nothing adequate to what they deserve Let there be a reapportionment just to all. Nobody can reasonably oppose this.

The McIntosh people are still agitating county division as though the election was still pending instead of being a thing of the past. A meeting was held at McIntosh on the 8th inst., and it was decided to call a delegate convention to meet at Crookston on the 28th of December "to agree on lines for the division of Polk county." As the question cannot be submitted to the people until two years hence, it is difficult to see what this early aivavamen will accomplish.—Crookston Tribune!

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Polk County Farmer's Alliance will be held at the court house in the city of Crookston Minn., on Friday the 28th day of December 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of electing one delegate and one alternate to attend the state alliance meeting to be held at Minneapolis Minn. on January 8th 1895 and the transaction of any other business for the good of the order. Each local alliance is entitled to send three delegates to the county alliance meeting and the secretaries thereof should immediately call a meeting of their respective alliances and elect such delegates.

For ten years the Columbia desk calendar issued by the Pope manufacturing company has held a unique place among business helpers. Each daily leaf during that time has taught its quiet lesson of the value of better roads and outdoor exercise, and especially the benefits of bicycling. The calendar for 1895, which is just issued, is even brighter than its predecessor, in appearance, as clever artists have added dainty silhouette and sketch to the usual wise and witty contributions that have heretofore given this popular calendar its charm. It can be had for five 2 cent stampes from the Pope Manufacturing company, Hartford, Conn., or from any Columbia bicycle agency.

Down at Richmond, Kentucky, on Wednesday last a man was found guilty of murder committed the preceeding Friday. The dispatch adds that the jury fixed the punishment at death and he will be executed within a month, that's business, where the case is a clear one, and the evidence indisputable the quicker the punishment can follow the crime the better. Such promptness as this is what will satisfy the people to let the law take its course and remove all excuse for mob violence. The law's delay which makes sympathy a potent factor in defeating the ends of justice and allows the nice edge of grief and horror to become blunted, so that justice is finally defeated is the reason and as some think, excuse, for the people to take the law into their own hands, and administer the sentences passed by Judge Lynch.—Crookston Times.

They are having a whole lot of trouble at Thief River Falls over the Jones—Meehan lease. The Meehans have built a shanty and fenced in a ten foot strip on the river and are guarding the place with armed men. They claim that three years ago Chief Moosedung gave them a lease for ten years for a ten foot strip of land facing the river and that the government has given the Chief an absolute deed of the property which made him a citizen. They intend to hold the strip and compel the Jones crowd to bring the matter into the courts. The matter is now before the U. S. Attorney General and will probably not be decided until after the holidays. If Jones wins the Meehans will still probably fight the matter in the courts and the prospects for a good long fight are good.

TO THE POPULISTS.

CHAIRMAN TAUBENECK MAKES A STATEMENT OF INTEREST.

He Advocates an Early Meeting of the Party's Leaders—Lessons Drawn From the Late Election—Men Who Have Loyally Supported the Cause.

[Official.]

The result of the late election is before us. We have increased our aggregate vote about 100 per cent since 1892 and have broken the solid south. We have convinced our opponents and the world that we are a fixed factor in politics and have come to stay. A new party that can double its voting strength in two years shows a vitality that has not been excelled by any new party in the history of our country. Every Populist can be proud of the record we have made this year. The People's Party is the only political organization whose members stand as a unit in all sections on the principles it advocates. The two old parties have their eastern, northern, western and southern factions, each one holding antagonistic views on all the great industrial questions which are forging their way to the front.

In 12 out of the 14 states west of the Mississippi river which in the past have been classed as Republican, the People's Party is first and second in voting strength, all except Iowa and California. In these 12 we have reduced the Democratic strength to a few stragglers, and had it not been for the administration and goldbug Democrats nominating dummy tickets for the Democratic farmers and laborers to support, while they voted with the Republicans, we would have elected our candidates in a majority of these states. In the states south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers we are second in voting strength in 8 out of 14 states, and the Democratic party remains in control by fraud and counting the colored vote.

The Democratic party in the south is the negro party, because without their votes a majority of the southern states would have elected Populist governors this year.

Headquarters of the People's Party were opened Jan. 1. Contributions to defray expenses were made by the Populist senators, representatives and other friends throughout the land. The total amount received from all sources was $1,349.80, an average of $122.71 per month, only a trifle more than a congressman's clerk receives for "spinning yarns." Out of this amount we had to defray all expenses, as room rent and furniture for same, fuel, gas bills, clerk hire, stationery, postage, telegraphing, printing, board and many other incidental expenses.

Any one familiar with this kind of work can readily see that the greatest economy was necessary. Doubtless either of the old parties has used more than this amount in the average county in the United States. In connection with this I wish to thank Hon. Lafe Pence of Colorado, Colonel George C. Ellisba of Washington, Leroy Templeton of Indiana and Thomas Davis of Macon, Ills., who came to the rescue and saved headquarters from being closed in the middle of the campaign. I doubt if the people will ever appreciate or be able to repay them for the sacrifice they have made for our cause. There is one thing that Mr. Pence doesn't know, and that is when to cease giving for the cause.

In many respects this campaign has been a phenomenal and stormy one—in fact; it has no parallel in our history. Many grave questions confronted the committee, which required careful consideration, and perhaps but few realized the critical position the party occupied. The industrial army movement as well as the strikes and general discontent introduced a new feature into the political arena which demanded close attention. On these questions we were flooded with letters demanding that our committee issue an address indorsing the industrial army movement and inviting every one to come to Washington, while others as zealously demanded that we issue an address denouncing it in the severest terms. The same was true of the great coal and railway strikes, which were the cause for some very acrimonious correspondence between some good Populists and headquarters. Although we at the time were severely criticised by both sides for remaining silent, yet I think that time has proved that the policy of the committee was best.

Headquarters will have to be closed after this week, but many suggestions have been made by our press and leaders for a conference composed of the members of the national committee, chairmen of the state committees, representatives of the reform press, congressmen of the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth congresses and other leaders in our party to discuss ways and means for conducting an educational campaign from now until the meeting of the next national convention.

This is very important because during the short session of the present congress and the Fifty-fourth congress questions of great importance will be discussed. The money power is not yet satisfied. They demand the repeal of the income tax, the destruction of the greenbacks and the passage of the national banking bill as outlined by the late Bankers' association held in Baltimore. The financial question will come to the front, and the Republicans will be as servile and do the bidding of the money power as much as the Democrats have done.

In addition to the Populist delegation in congress I am greatly indebted for counsel to Mr. J. M. Devine, Mr. J. L. Johnson and Byron E. Shear. Mr. Devine, as secretary of the American Bimetallic league, has loyally stood by our cause. He is one of the ablest men in our party and will do credit to any cause he may espouse. The people of this country will never learn or be able to recompense Messrs. Shear and Johnson for the sacrifices they have made. They have given their money, time and counsel on every occasion. The American Bimetallic league and all farm and labor organizations, though nonpartisan, have stood by our cause as never before. Their officers and leaders almost without exception are in the Populist ranks.

Populists in making a special and radical study of economic conditions are well aware that not all the evils of our times proceed wholly from one source. Our platform has been a broad protest against the most visible and most piratical forms of present monopoly. At the same time and above all else we have been the only political organization of sufficient capacity and information to comprehend the one paramount question on which now depends not only the immediate welfare of the masses, but even the civilization and Christianity of a great nation. This is the money question. The question as to whether the American people shall be permitted to have the vehicle of exchanging labor and all things produced by labor in such a volume that they can live by honest industry and not be turned, with no fault of their own, into beggars and tramps is paramount to all others.

As the demand for money is equal to the demand for all other things, so is the demand for monetary reform equal to the demand for all other industrial reforms combined. The money question involves all others and is one-half of each industrial question the mind can conceive.

I believe we ought to begin at once to organize for the great conflict of 1896 and concentrate all our force on the money question.

To do this we must have a conference of all our leaders, map out a policy and make a vigorous educational campaign.

H. E. TAUBENECK.

Washington, Nov. 29.

Unite Against the People.

The Times will heartily join The Press (Rep.) in demanding that neither of the leading parties shall trade with the Populists in either senate or house or in any state or district contest. We sincerely rejoiced at the election of the Republican tickets in the western states which had been controlled by the Populists and as earnestly deplored the success of the Populists in the south by the aid of Republican votes. We believe that the two great parties of the country should unite in the senate and in every field of conflict where it shall be a necessity to prevent the success of Populist candidates for any office.

If, when the next senate shall meet, the distinctive Democrats shall have a plurality over the distinctive Republicans, a Democratic senator should be elected president pro tem. of the body by the united vote of both the old parties, and vice versa, and the other offices should be divided between them, and in the legislature of North Carolina the Democrats and Republicans should unite and elect a straightforward Republican and a straightforward Democrat to the United States senate if it can possibly be accomplished. We believe that the defeat of the Populists under any and all circumstances is the first duty of both Republicans and Democrats.—Philadelphia Times (Dem.).

Republicans Saved Sayers.

Representative J. D. Sayers of Texas said the other day to a Washington newspaper correspondent: "The trouble in Texas is easily explained. Hard times and 5 cent cotton tell the whole story. The Populists made immense gains, and while I was somewhat disturbed by the prospect of a combination against the Democrats before I left Washington to enter upon the campaign I had no idea it would amount to so much. They reached for our scalps, I tell you, and if it had not been for Republican support freely accorded me the probabilities are I would have been defeated. Judge Culbertson certainly would have been defeated had not the Republicans reached out and nabbed him by the hair and pulled him through. The leading colored Republican of the state, N. W. Clunie of Galveston, advocated my election, and other prominent Republicans, both in Texas and elsewhere, took a hand in the contest in my district in my favor. I never had such a hard fight in my life."

Dangerous Affiliations.

The wild talk of the Populist Congressman Elect Howard of Alabama that Mr. Cleveland "made $4,000,000 out of monopolies" between the end of his first term as president and the beginning of his present term is of course preposterous. Still the personal affiliations of a president and the associations and ambition of an ex-president who has not done with public life ought to be scrupulously guarded. It is dangerous for such a personage to have Benedicts about him. The atmosphere of "tips" and speculation, of "corners" and combinations for making money rapidly, is not wholesome for a plain Democratic servant and oracle of the people.—New York World.

Got 'Em On the Run.

An editorial in the New York World on the increase of the People's Party vote says:

This increase means for one thing that in the west and south the people are dissatisfied with both the old parties. They have turned from the Republican to the Democratic party without obtaining relief. They believed the promises made them by the Democratic party, only to find them broken through incompetent leadership.

Not Ready to Die.

M. W. Howard, congressman elect from Alabama, was speaking at a People's Party meeting in New York recently when he said, "The Populists of Alabama have carried the last two elections, but the Democrats have counted us out."

"Why don't you kill 'em?" inquired a hoarse voice in the rear of the room.

Admitting the Situation at Last.

It is imperative that congress at the short session shall appoint an expert and unbiased commission to study this delicate and complex problem and indicate the legislation needed to free the treasury from a recurrence of present disturbances and secure to the people a safe, uniform and elastic currency.—New York Herald.

D. 1893, at 4 o'clock p. m., in book 59 of mortgages, on page 574 thereof, which said mortgage was executed to secure that certain promissory note for three hundred and fifty dollars, dated June 1st 1893 with interest annually from date thereof at 9 per cent, and due June 1st 1896, and signed by said mortgagors as makers and delivered and payable to the order of said mortgagee and the said mortgagee by reason of the said default in the payment of said interest has elected and hereby elects to use his option as provided in said mortgage and he hereby declares that the whole sum of money which is secured by said mortgage is now due and payable and there is claimed to be due and payable and unpaid at the date of this notice upon said mortgage the sum of three hundred and seventy-three and 75-100 dollars, principal and interest; and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

SUMMING UP.

An Analysis of Election Returns Which Will Not Be Materially Changed.

As the election returns come in the Populist vote appears more satisfactory. The aggregate vote of 1892 was about 1,042,000, while so far as can be judged from the returns up to date the aggregate vote at the recent elections will reach 2,200,000. This shows a gain of more than 100 per cent, which ought to satisfy the most sanguine, since it is the aggregate vote which discloses the growth of a party. In 1890 the People's Party received less than 300,000 votes. In 1892 this vote had grown to 1,042,000, while in 1894 it has reached 2,200,000. Imagine what will be the result in 1896 if this growth is continued. When the returns are all in and a careful analysis made, it will be found that the real Populist vote has increased in every state, Kansas and Colorado not excepted.

Their defeat in Kansas may be charged principally to the settlement of Oklahoma and the drought. Thousands of Populists from Kansas and Nebraska went to Oklahoma to get cheap land and begin life anew out of debt. There were many also who abandoned their farms because of financial ruin and drifted to other sections. Mr. Simpson, whose district adjoins Oklahoma, was defeated for these reasons alone. The Democrats who to some extent had voted the reform ticket deserted it almost to a man. This desertion, together with the emigration, brought about the Populist defeat, which would have been a victory had either of these not occurred.

In Colorado thousands of miners and operators who were generally Populists were compelled to leave the state on account of the mines closing down. Thousands more were coerced by the Business Men's league and money interests. This, together with the unpopularity of Governor Waite, wrought the disaster.

In the east surprising gains have been made. The south has disclosed a wonderful reaction, which threatens the entire destruction of the Democratic party. We have five senators now, to whom will be added one from North Carolina, making six certain, with a prospect of having another from South Carolina. In the house we have one each from Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Nevada and Alabama, together with five from North Carolina, making ten in all who will be given certificates of election. We shall contest in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Kentucky and probably in Tennessee and North Carolina. Out of these contests we should get not less than 22 members, which will give us all told over 30 congressmen.

How An Omaha Girl Manages to Communicate With the Forbidden Sweetheart.

A friend of mine out in Omaha has a daughter, and that daughter has, among other girlish trinkets, a sweetheart, who is rendered doubly dear to her by the fact that her parents have forbidden her to see him, says the Washington Post. He is, to be sure, a very commonplace person, but no girl can resist a man her parents have forbidden her to see, you know. This particular girl is in Washington now, for safe-keeping in a private school, where incoming and outgoing letters are read by a stern faced teacher. I went to see her the other day just after the mail —was in. She had received a letter from a school-girl friend in Omaha, and there wasn't a noun or pronoun of the masculine gender in the whole of it. The girl read it demurely, and showed it to me. Then we went to her room. The door was no sooner closed than she flew to her curling tongs, heated them, held them close to the written sheet, and read with delight the yellow letters in a masculine hand which appeared between the lines, and faded again as the paper cooled. The moral of this is that love will find a way, and so long as chloride of copper in solution is to be had, I advise every keeper of a girl's school to toast all letters well before she delivers them.

A New York collector owns a Louis XIV. watch that is said to have once belonged to the Empress Josephine. While she lived at Malmaison she presented it to Abbe Blanchard, and he in turn gave it to his niece, Marie Feetig, of Strassburg. This watch, which was purchased at the Feetig sale in Strassburg in 1879, occupies the center of a black enamel and gold cross and is decorated with the figure of a kneeling angel and heads of saints.

The Story of a Woman Who Suffered for Nine Years—How She Was Cured.

Valvular disease of the heart has always been considered incurable. The following interview, therefore, will interest the medical profession since it describes the successful use of a new treatment for this disease. The patient is Mrs. Geo. Archer of Clifton, N. J., and this publication by the News is the first mention made of the case by any newspaper. All physicians consulted pronounced the patient suffering with valvular disease of the heart, and treated her without the slightest relief. Mrs. Archer said: "I could not walk across the floor; neither could I go up stairs without stopping to let the pain in my chest and left arm cease. I felt an awful constriction about my arm and chest as though I were tied with ropes. Then there was a terrible noise at my right ear, like the labored breathing of some great animal. I have often turned expecting to see some creature at my side.

"Last July," continued Mrs. Archer, "I was at Springfield, Mass., visiting, and my mother showed me an account in the Springfield Examiner, telling of the wonderful cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. My mother urged me to try the pills and on November 25 last I bought a box and began taking them, and I have taken them ever since, except for a short interval. The first box did not seem to benefit me, but I persevered, encouraged by the requests of my relatives. After beginning on the second box, to my wonder, the noise at my right ear ceased entirely. I kept right on and the distress that I used to feel in my chest and arm gradually disappeared. The blood has returned to my face, lips and ears, which were entirely devoid of color, and I feel well and strong again.

"My son, too, had been troubled with gastritis and I induced him to try the Pink Pills, with great benefit. I feel that everybody ought to know of my wonderful cure and I bless God that I have found something that has given me this great relief."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of most every ill that flesh is heir to. These pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk, or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

DESERVED HIS PAY AS A COACH.

Street Beggar Who Tried Hard and Fails With an Old Plea Finds a New One.

It was really a sight for the eyes of this degenerate civilization, the magnificent specimen of a man who strode up State street just before 6 o'clock in the evening, with a look and swing that clearly showed he was bound toward home after a day's hard work. A six-footer and more, with broad chest and magnificent shoulders, swinging arms, a cane grasped in the middle and held as lightly as a feather, erect head, and military stride combined to make a figure worth looking at twice, and many persons did look more than once, especially after the young man passed Adams street.

It was cold. The air was called "bracing" by athletes, but most men had coat collars turned up, so the beggar who stood against the wall looked forlorn enough to match his story. He was young and only fairly badly clad. His clothes were good, but clearly insufficient, and his nose and eyes were watery as the wind searched and found him. One glance and he marked the Apollo for his game. His lips could be seen moving as he walked out beside the striding giant and endeavored to keep up with the pace as he told the story which was to draw coin from the other's pocket. The contrast between the men was so great that many stopped to look after them. The homeward bound man seemingly indifferent to his comparatively insignificant shadow, who all the time was walking as for a prize and talking as he would to keep out of jail. The pace was killing the beggar, and before Quincy street was passed he showed signs of wear and tear. He stuck to his task with desperation, though he got no encouragement until near to Jackson, when, as he was beginning to fall behind, he made one last rally and spurt and a final appeal:

"Say, boss, I don't know what the stake is or who you're walkin' against, but you're a dead sure winner, and I think you ought to give me a quarter for pacing you this last block, sure."

He got it.

Shoot Folly as It Flies.

Says the bard. The difficulty is that the folly of some folks don't fly, it sticks. We cite, as a forcible illustration, the folly of people who keep on dosing themselves with objectionable drugs for disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, easily and pleasantly curable with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which not only remedies these, but also restores vigor and strength, and banishes malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

It always puffs a bad man up with self-righteous conceit to find out that he is not quite so bad as his next door neighbor.

In the economy of life it doesn't pay to always be borrowing trouble and paying a high rate of interest on it.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

CHRISTMAS JOLLITY.

PLENTY OF FUN FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

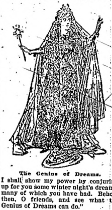
An Entertainment That Can Be Used Wholly or in Part—The Months, Holidays and Seasons in Costume, Santa Claus and King Christmas.

The arrival of the gayest season in the year is the signal for all kinds of merry-making. "What new plan for entertainment can we find?" is a common question among hosts, hostesses and leaders in various public and private enterprises for stimulating holiday mirth. These hints are quite elastic. They will suggest to fertile minds much more than there is space for here. They can be used for a public or private entertainment given in lecture room or parlor, and may or may not accompany gift making. They tell of scenes and costumes suitable for any winter night, but can be presented with best effect between the middle of December and the middle of January. They can, moreover, be used wholy or in part. If the hostess does not wish the trouble of preparing tableaux, she may utilize the hints on costuming to get up a character party with or without masks. These costumes will sugest others. A part of the costume and tableaux descriptions may be employed in givng a children's Christmas or New Year party.

In all these tableaux the only thing necessary besides costumes is a curtain or sliding doors. This will reduce to a minimum the work of getting them up in a private house, while at the same time as many stage accessories as desired can be employed, if the scenes are represented in a public place. Costumes should be kept on after the tableaux are over, lending a brilliant and fancy appearance to the rooms full of guests in the social time that follows.

The Genius of Dreams is dressed to suggest night, and the part should be taken by a slender lady of at least medium height, with dark hair and eyes. The entire dress is made of cheap, black tarleton, with full skirt, and train bordered with stars made of pasteboard covered with the best quality of gilt paper. Similar stars are placed here and there under the tarleton folds of dress and bodice to shine through. The waist is best made with surplice front, the neck opening bordered with stars; a girdle of stars, and a small star or crescent, covered like the rest, or jeweled ornaments of the same shape, complete the dress, unless a long tarleton veil, held in place with stars, is desired. When she enters she takes her place in front of the doors or curtains, behind which tableaux are to be arranged, and says:

"I am the Genius of Dreams. At my bidding come the happy visions of childhood, the more sober dreams of middle life, the hope-crowned revelations made to age in the night hours.



The Genius of Dreams.

I shall show my power by conjuring up for you some winter night's dreams, many of which you have had. Behold then, O friends, and see what the Genius of Dreams can do."

She lifts her arms up slowly until the hands are a little above the level of her forehead, then she claps them loudly. As the curtain is drawn, music, played softly on some hidden instrument, is heard. This is to continue throughout each tableaux or "dream." It changes to something livelier to suit the tableau. First are "The Holidays," representing five great country holidays in the country. Christmas, a man attired in a long, sweeping cloak, flecked to imitate snow, and bordered with evergreen and holly berries, stands watching a child seated on the floor in the act of emptying a Christmas stocking.

New Year, a young boy in white robe, arranged perhaps from sheets in classic drapery and trimmed with evergreens and berries, is pulling on a rope apparently attached to a church bell. If possible, let the sound of a distant bell be imitated. The character of Decoration day is best assumed by an elderly man in military dress, with hands full of flower pieces. He is in the act of laying one on a make-believe grave, if such can be arranged. Thanksgiving is a matronly woman whose plain dress is decorated with autumn leaves or sprays of wheat and wishbones. She may be in the attitude suggestive of prayer, to denote the giving of thanks.

Fourth of July is a young girl wearing a red and white striped skirt, with short blue draperies, a white bodice caught with bunches of the smallest flags, a mortarboard cap of blue and white, with tassel made of white firecrackers. She is in the act of waving a large flag. If preferred, a suitable poem, read by some one concealed, may accompany each picture. Then the low music can be dispensed with. These five may also be given at once.

The Old and New Years will make another good tableau. The Old Year is a very aged man with an hour-glass, whose sands have stopped running. He is wrapping his cloak around him as if to go. New Year, acted by the same boy as before, holds up with a smile another hour-glass, whose sands have just begun to fall.

Several "dreams" about Santa Claus are easily gotten up. He should have a fur-trimmed coat, a rough cap and a pack of toys on his back. First, he may stand laughing while Jack Frost—in costume covered with glistening white flakes, a pot with several brushes protruding hanging on his arm—is touching up his arm with red. Another may show the patron saint hard at work in a make-believe shop on old and new toys, and a third will show the children's favorite dream—Santa Claus filling a row of small stockings.

The last representation is more elaborate—"The Crowning of King Christmas." Around Christmas are grouped the months of the year, shown by their costumes; the other holidays, the four seasons and Santa Claus. These stanzas, by Charles Dickens, are to be recited:

My song I troll out for Christmas stout,
The hearty, the true and the bold;
A bumper I drain with might and main,
Give three cheers for this Christmas old!
We'll usher him in with a merry din
That shall gladden his joyous heart,
And we'll keep him up while there's a bit or sup,
And in fellowship good we'll part.

In his fine honest pride he scorns to hide
One jot of his weather scars;
They're no disgrace, for there's much the same trace,
On the cheeks of our bravest tars.
Then again I'll sing till the roof doth ring,
And it echoes from wall to wall,
To the stout old wight fair welcome to-night
As the king of the seasons all.

At the end two have been selected from those on the stage, perhaps Santa Claus and Old Year, who have held a crown of evergreen and holly berries, place it on his head. Then all mingle with the rest of the company, and a social time begins.

For each one of these tableaux the Genius of Dreams has something descriptive to say. She can compose these and learn them.

If this plan is used for a Christmas or New Year party Santa Claus may proceed to distribute gifts after audience and performers are well mingled. A tree is always delightful, but if you wish to vary the usual order of things have a horn of plenty arranged to hang from one corner of the room, the cone end fastened in the angle, the horn being swung in such a position that the gifts will not fall out but may be easily started by a touch from a cane. Each gift should be firmly wrapped and packed to prevent injury. The horn is covered with green stuff and trimmed with evergreens and imitation snow and icicles.

A very good plan, suitable for use at a children's party or in school or Sunday school, is to have two trees set up—one filled with gifts, the other to be filled at the time with presents for the poor. Discarded toys and mended or refurbished clothing will be very suitable, as well as new gifts of all kinds.

If the little boys present are dressed to represent stars, and the girls snowflakes, it will add greatly to either a juvenile or a mixed gathering. Costumes of many kinds can be devised to carry out this idea, but I would suggest that the boys have Oxford gowns of black calico or cambric muslin, the necks, yokes, flowing sleeves and hems defined by rows of gilt stars made as described above. Mortarboard caps, the skull cap made of black goods, the flat part of pasteboard covered with the same, are used. The flat part can be made square, as usual, with a gilt star cut to fill the surface and tiny ones hanging all around the edges, or its place can be taken by a large five-pointed gilt star, with a small one hanging from each point. The effect of these small stars, glittering with every motion of the wearer, is quite dazzling.

The little girls wear dresses of white muslin, with broad bands around the bottom made of snowy cotton wadding, which has been pulled apart, as the rough inside surface can better imitate snow. These bands and little capes and caps of the same are sprinkled with diamond dust. The hair, worn flowing, is also powdered with it.

A X-MAS WAIL.

(JACK, to his mother.)

I cannot see why Santa Claus,
When I am fast asleep,
My stockings only fills with things
So common and so cheap!

He ne'er brings me expensive toys—
He never brings a sleigh,
A rifle or velocipede,
Or soldiers blue and gray.

He leaves no trains of cars at all,
And I just think it's mean,
He fills my stockings to the brim
With apples red and green.

Now, there is Mr. McAdoo—
He's rich, all people know,
And Santa Claus brings lovely things
Each Christmas eve for Joe.

He brings him hobby-horses, skates,
And boats that go by steam,
And hollow, spotted pasteboard cows
All full of chocolate cream.

And then upon his Christmas tree
He hangs red candy dogs,
Gold cornucopias, rubber cats,
And wind-up jumping frogs.

And I know other rich men's sons
With whom it's just the same:
The high-priced presents left for them
Are more than I can name.

Another poor man's son like me
Is little Jimmie Pott,
And fifty cents would pay for all
The Christmas that he got.

Now, if our fathers were so rich
They didn't know what to do,
Would Santa Claus bring to us boys
Such costly presents, too?

GRIZZLY WHIPPED BY A COW.

Bossy Roused to Terrible Rage in Defense of Her Offspring.

"Usually a cow does not stand much chance when she engages in a hand-to-hand conflict with a grizzly bear," said Michael Ayers, a Colorado stockman to a writer for Dumb Animals, "but several years ago one of my cows killed one of these animals and came out of the struggle without a scratch. The cow had recently given birth to a calf. It being her first-born, the mother was exceedingly vicious, and it was unsafe for a stranger to approach her, as her horns were long and pointed. The cattle shed had a thatched roof and was scooped out of the hillside a short distance from the house. One night a bear, having smelt the presence of a cow and calf mounted the roof of the shed and proceeded to force an entrance by scratching through the thatch. The cow at the same time detected the presence of the bear, and held herself in readiness to receive the intruder. The noise of a terrible struggle aroused me, and grabbing a lantern I rushed from the house, and opening the shed door found the cow in a frantic state, butting and tossing to and fro some large object, which evidently had lost all power of resistance. It turned out to be a good sized grizzly, which had been run through and through the body by the courageous mother. The little calf was nestled in a corner, sleeping peacefully, and seemed unmindful of the maternal struggle. I suppose that as soon as the bear gained an entrance through the roof it was planed to the ground by the cow's horns before it had time to do any damage."

CHILD'S DREAM OF CHRISTMAS.

Without was darkness and silence
And fastly falling snow;
Within a child lay sleeping
In the firelight's ruddy glow.

He thought that a beautiful angel
Just softly touched his eyes,
Then carried him off on her shining wings
To what seemed a paradise.

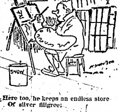
Where does it lie? you ask me,
Ah! only the wild birds know
And they who journey thro' dreamland
With the angel of the snow.

The boy and the beautiful angel
Passed out into the night,
And, climbing a stairway of snowflakes
They came to a palace bright,

All crystal clear were the ice-blocks
Which formed each turret and wall;
All crystal clear were the windows
Flashing from casement and hall.

"This," she said, "is the home of King Winter
And of those who do his will;
Sometimes in broadest daylight,
Ofttimes when 'tis dark and still

"Here Jack Frost has his studio,
And a cunning artist is he;



Here too, he keeps an endless store
Of silver filigree;

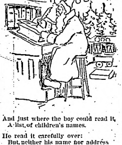
"With which he draws the pictures
You see on your window pane,
Of churches and castles and pine woods,
Which in sunshine vanish again."

Then she showed him Father Christmas,
Who cheerily to and fro
Was passing and giving orders
To his servants high and low.

Then with finger on lip she led him
Where without the slightest noise
Old Santa Claus was making
His wonderful Christmas toys.

And the boy looked on in wonder
At thousands of wagons and sleds,
At multitudes of doll babies
And hundreds of dollies' beds.
There were armies of handsome soldiers
With swords and guns and drums,
There were tops for spinnig and whipping
And the wonderful kind that hums.

There were marbles and balls and puzzles
And ever so many games;



And just where the boy could read it,
A list of children's names.

He read it carefully over:
But neither his name nor address
Appeared on the wonderful paper,
And he said to himself: "I guess

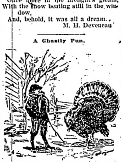
"Old Santa has lost the letter
I posted to him last spring
When we moved. It's nearly Christmas
And I won't get a single thing."

Then, in spite of the angel's warning,
With his heart in his little throat,
He said in a voice all trembling:
"Santa Claus did you get my note?"

Crash! Bang! Hey, presto he's sitting
Once more in the firelight's gleam,
With the snow beating still in the window,
And, behold, it was all a dream.

M. H. Deveneau

A Ghastly Pun.



"Watch me gobble," remarked the fat turkey cock, as he strutted by the small boy.

"That's all right," replied the boy; "but wait till after Christmas Day, and feel me gobble."

A Suggestion.

Head of Firm—You had better give the office boy a couple of dollars, Mr. Penwiper, for Christmas.

Mr. Penwiper (the bookkeeper)—I think we had better make it a New Year's gift, sir. I have just sent him out with a telegram, and I don't think he will get back by Christmas.

The Truth About It.

Stuffer—What do you think? Jones has actually invited me to dine with him on Christmas day at his boarding house.

Dashaway—Ha! ha! Did you ask him if he had a grudge against you?

Stuffer—Yes. He said no; that he had a grudge against the landlady.

A Sensible Gift.

"My pa gave me a dollar for Christmas," said Tommy.

"My, how nice! What did you do with it?"

"I lent it to papa the day after Christmas," said Tommy.

Helpless Ten Weeks

"I was attacked with acute rheumatism and was laid up in the house ten weeks. My right arm was withered away to skin and bone and I had almost lost the use of it. A friend advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and by the time the first bottle was used I was feeling a little better. I could see and feel a great change. The flesh was returning to my arm and the soreness was leaving my body and limbs. Every spring and fall since we have used three to six bottles in our family. I find to use Hood's Sarsaparilla is cheaper than to pay doctor's bills.

CANALS OF THE FUTURE.

They Will Be Large Enough for the Rapid Handling of a Heavy Business.

The history of the struggle between canals of small dimensions and of railroads has been the same in all countries. The fight raged bitterly for a number of years; the canals acting on the defensive, although they had as allies the states under whose patronage they were built and operated. The result has been the same in all cases, the unconditional surrender, of the canals to the railroads. This, however, is not so much the fault of the system as of the management. The railroads have great advantages over canals. They are better able to abridge distances both by reason of superior speed and of facilities for overcoming elevations, spanning streams, free from danger of destructive floods and piercing through the highest mountains; but their great success is mainly due to the fact that they have kept pace with the progress of the world.

Waterways built from the beginning of the eighteenth century to the first quarter of the nineteenth century were regarded ample to meet the requirements of trade at the time they were constructed, and there was in many instances a progressive improvement in their dimensions and appurtenances. But while the industrial, agricultural and commercial development of the world have advanced to proportions not dreamed of a century ago, canals have remained stationary. They are now obsolete, and can no longer fulfill the requirements of cheap transportation in competition with railroads. The canals of the future must have the dimensions and the facilities for rapid transportation to adapt them to the new conditions of commerce. They must not be barge or boat canals, but ample waterways for the free passage of such ships as are now engaged in carrying the world's trade. Of such canals we have now some important types in operation, and others in progress of construction or in completion.—Chautauquan.

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH.

MRS. FRED HUNT, of Glenville, N. Y., says: "I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being so good for a woman with child, so I got two bottles last September, and December 13th I had a twelve pound baby girl. When I was confined I was not sick in any way. I did not suffer any pain, and when the child was born I walked into another room and went to bed. I keep your Extract of Smart-Weed on hand all the time. It was very cold weather and our room was very cold but I did not take any cold, and never had any after-pain or any other pain. It was all due to God and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Compound Extract of Smart-Weed. This is the eighth living child and the largest of them all. I suffered everything that flesh could suffer with the other babies. I always had a doctor and then he could not help me very much, but this time my mother and my husband were alone with me. My baby was only seven days old when I got up and dressed and left my room and stayed up all day."

NEW CURRENCY BILL

A SUBSTITUTE FOR SECRETARY CARLISLE'S MEASURE.

Among Other Changes, It Relieves the National Banks From the Arbitrary Provision of Organizing Under the New System.

Washington, Dec. 23.—After conferences between the Democratic members of the house committee on banking and currency, and with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, Mr. Springer introduced a substitute for the Carlisle currency bill. It is substantially a new measure, although some of the sections of the original measure are retained in the new bill. The new bill is arranged so as to show the new features in parentheses. The first section is as follows:

That (so much of) all acts and parts of acts as require or authorize the deposit of United States bonds to secure circulating notes issued by national banking associations (or as require such associations to deposit or keep on deposit United States bonds for any purpose except as security for public money) be and the same hereby is repealed (as to associations taking out circulation under this act), and such notes shall not contain the statement that they are so secured.

Section 7 is entirely new, and takes the place of a section which has been eliminated. It is as follows:

Section 7—That every national banking association hereafter organized and having bonds to deposit to secure circulation, may withdraw such bonds upon the deposit of lawful money of the United States, now provided by law, and thereafter such association may take out circulation under this act and be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities herein conferred.

Section 8 specifies that the portion of the national banking act to be repealed is limited to so much of section 12 "as directs the secretary of the treasury to receive deposits of gold and to issue certificates thereon."

Section 9 is substantially the same as in the original bill.

Section 10, providing for state banks, is also the same as in the original bill, except that in the restrictions on state banks a new provision is made that the guaranty fund maintained by them may include "currency certificates issued under section 5193 of the Revised Statutes."

"Whenever the secretary of the treasury and the controller of the currency shall be satisfied that any banking corporation duly organized under the laws of any state, and which transacts no other than a banking business, as provided in this section, has been incorporated under the laws of the state in which it is located, which law requires that the stockholders hall be individually liable for the redemption of its circulating notes to the full extent of their ownership of stock, and that such laws require that the circulating notes thereof shall constitute a first lien upon all the assets of the bank, and also that such laws require such bank to keep on deposit at all times with an official of the state authorized by law to receive and hold the same, a guarantee fund as required by the fourth paragraph of this section, they shall issue to said bank a certificate to that effect. Thereupon said bank may issue its notes as provided by this act, and thereafter the tax of 10 per cent. heretofore imposed by law upon the circulation of the notes of state banks, shall not be assessed or collected upon the notes of such bank, unless it appears that said bank has issued circulating notes in excess of 75 per cent of its paid up and unimpaired capital, or that its capital is impaired and has remained so for thirty days, or that the bank has not kept on deposit with the state official authorized by law to receive and hold the same, a guarantee fund as required in the fourth paragraph of this section, or that said bank has not promptly redeemed its notes in lawful money at par on demand at its principal office or at any or more of its branch offices, if it has branch offices, and that no person or corporation, other than the bank issuing such notes, in violation of the provisions of this act, shall be liable to the tax of 10 per cent upon the circulating notes of state banks as now provided by law."

BRAND THE CLAIM AS FALSE.

World's Fair Officials Expose a Pretender to an Award.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 24.—One of the odd results of the World's Fair is the claim now made to awards by some who were not even exhibitors. Officials of the Exposition have not as yet taken final action in the matter, believing the quick wit of the people will detect the spurious claims. But to the case of a New York baking powder, that has been widely advertising an award, the attention of the Chief of Awards of Agriculture, has been directed. He brands the claim of this pretender as false, declaring "Neither the records of this department, nor the official catalogue of the World's Columbian Exposition, show that this New York company was not exhibitor; consequently it could not have received an award at the World's Fair."

Those who fairly won the honors at the Fair seem disposed to treat this fraud as any other fraud should be treated. The Price Baking Powder Company, of Chicago, having received the highest award, say they are convinced their claims, and those of all other holders of rightful honors, will be fully vindicated by the public.

The Bloody Scene at Council Bluffs Takes Away His Reason.

Quincy, Ill., Dec. 23.—Frank Trumble, an attorney of Council Bluffs, and who was present at the recent triple shooting affair in the Council Bluffs bank in which Huntington shot two detectives and himself, has become insane, the attack coming on while at the Newcombe hotel here, en route to his old home at Keokuk. It is thought his mind was shattered by the bloody scene at the bank.

RACE WAR IS NOW ON.

Battle Between Whites and Negroes in Georgia.

Quitman, Ga., Dec. 25.—The lives of seven negroes have been taken in the last twenty-four hours in revenge for that of one white man, and unless all signs fail utterly many more lives are in jeopardy. Two bodies of determined men, between 400 and 500 in all, every one being heavily armed, and each body about equal in numerical strength to the other, separated by less than a mile of country and liable to clash at any time—that is the spectacle presented here in this county to-day. One body is made up of stern, determined white men, bent on revenge for the brutal murder of one of one of the best citizens of this county, and the other is made up of negroes, terror-stricken and fearful lest they or their families be made the objects of the same fate as has already befallen seven of their number, and ready to defend themselves from such fate as well as they may be able.

What the next twenty-four hours will bring forth is causing great apprehension. That there will be an open clash seems very much more than probable at this writing. The authorities are powerless and practically no effort has been made to bring about peace save by the relatives of the man whose murder is the cause of it all.

On Thursday Mr. Joseph Isom of Brooks county, a most prosperous farmer and one of the best citizens, was murdered by a party of negroes, and it leaked out that the killing of Isom was a part of a plot to kill all the whites who were in the posse which, a few weeks ago, arrested Jesse Jeffreth for the killing of T. Mouldon. Isom was one of the most popular men in the county. He lived ten miles north of here in a part of the county where the negroes outnumber the whites, and the killing created a great deal of excitement. When it developed that the same gang of negroes had sworn to kill other white men, the whites gathered together as if by one accord, and the work of death and destruction began. The names of the killed are Sam Taylor, Eli Frazier, Sam Pike, Harry Sheard, and three whose names could not be learned. A reporter visited the scene. Every cross road was found picketed with sentinels and every man in the county is armed to the teeth. When one of these race excitements occurs terror rules in the homes of the whites as well as of the blacks, and that was the case in this instance. There are probably 500 men under arms, covering an area of about five square miles, and a battle may occur at any moment.

KILLED HIS FAMILY

Terrible Deed of a Laborer at Vancouver, B. C.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 25.—The most horrible tragedy ever perpetrated in this city occurred here yesterday morning, resulting in the death of two, if not three, persons. George F. Ashford, a laborer in the employ of the Canadian Pacific railroad, has been a resident here for the past two years, living with his wife and five children in the east end of the city. For some time past he has been drinking heavily. He returned home late last night, and, going up stairs woke his wife, telling her that her end had come, and before she was half awake, he shot her in the head. Then the three-year-old child was killed in a similar manner, and then the nine-year-old girl, Mildred, was shot. The two boys were awakened by the shooting, and escaped, giving the alarm to the neighbors. The fiend made his escape in the direction of Westminister. Seeing a car approaching, he threw himself in front of it, but the motorman pulled up in time to rescue him, handing him over to the police.

His noted sister Lou has reached there and is nursing him. He is suffering from two wounds, and deputy marshals have traced him by bloody bandages. They are now within twenty-five miles of the dying bandit.

A PINE LAND REPORT

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE RECITES WHAT IT HAS DONE.

It Says That Many Frauds Have Been Discovered in the Sale of Pine Lands — Many Suggestions Made by the Committee.

St. Paul, Dec. 23.—The report of the pine land investigation committee has been submitted to Gov. Nelson. It is a most elaborate affair, and covers more than 200 pages of typewriting. The committee first cites the resolution under which it was appointed, the organization of the committee and gives a statement of the funds which the committee had at its disposal. The duties of the committee have been arduous and exacting, and have been of a most unpleasant nature. The report closes with the following recommendations:

"There shall be one surveyor general for the state, who shall be appointed by the governor, to be paid a salary, and all fees turned into the state treasury, and all necessary deputies and employes be paid a reasonable salary; that all deputy surveyor generals shall be required to take oath and give bond conditioned upon the faithful performance of their duties; that the neglect of the surveyor general to report the failure of any parties in complying with the provisions of the permit, or failure of the state auditor to report the same to the attorney general for prosecution, shall be punished by heavy penalties.

"That the governor, treasurer and land commissioner be required to meet as a commission for the consideration of the approval of estimates and appraisals and recommendations of sale; that they shall keep a record of such meetings, and that no stumpage shall be sold unless the same be recommended by the governor and one other member of said commission; that the governor have a sufficient appropriation to enable him properly to investigate the correctness of such estimates by sending an agent of his own to examine any of the lands proposed to be sold, when, in his discretion, it may be necessary to do so; that all estimates now in the state auditor's office, upon which valid permits are not now in force, be canceled; that no permit shall be given to cover more than two logging seasons or more than one description of land, and no extension or cancellation thereof shall be made, and a separate log mark shall be used on each description.

Worthless Bonds.

"That in view of the worthless character of many of the bonds given as surety for the fulfillment of the conditions of the permit, careful legislation shall be had regarding the same.

"That no permit shall be issued except to the party in whose name the stumpage is purchased at the sale.

"That the state treasurer be required to enforce the provisions of the statute in regard to the collection of stumpage drafts; that in the execution of all mineral leases the timber upon the land leased should be reserved to the state, and that pending action of the legislature hereon, in order to prevent the wholesale leasing of land for the purpose of holding such timber, the state auditor decline the issuance of any additional leases for mineral purposes.

"That the incoming legislature pass a stringent law to prevent the kindling of fires where cuttings of pine have been made, even by the owner of the land, unless proper safeguards are established to prevent its spreading to adjoining property.

"That the land commissioner shall cause all permits and the bonds accompanying the same, together with any assignments thereof, to be filed in his office, and recorded in a book kept for that purpose. That the land commissioner shall keep a general index of all instruments, documents and papers filed or recorded in his office showing the date of filing, and the place of record."

The committee says of the state auditor's office: "It is here we find the most palpable neglect of duties, the least regard of the state's interests, the most careless and unsystematic condition of the state's business and the greatest display of either unpardonable ignorance of the duties of the office under the law, or downright official dishonesty."

A chapter is devoted to Matt Clark, the stumpage clerk, in which it is shown that he receives a salary of $1,500, but pays a man named Bates $900 a year to do his work in the office, while Clark has an office down town, where he conducts an office for the sale of pine land, presumably using the information he gains in the auditor's office to aid him in making money on pine lands.

Fraud and Deceit.

The report further says: "We have found obstacles and obstructions in our path that at times seemed unsurmountable. We have met fraud, treachery and deceit at every turn," states the committee in referring to its arduous labors. The committee further tenders the governor its thanks for the personal interest taken in the success of the work.

Following is a summary of some of the most interesting chapters of the report:

All the evidence given before this committee go to establish the principle that these sales are, as a general rule, conducted in the interest of buyers of stumpage, and rarely in the interest of the state. Some of the ills of which we complain are attributable to the defects in the law, but this fact does not in any way relieve the state officers from their culpable, we believe we may truthfully say, criminal negligence during the last twenty years, in the enforcement of those provisions of the law calculated to protect the interests of the state from the depredations of unprincipled men.

The report on the work accomplished shows that in two suits there have been recovered from the Itasca Lumber company $20,000, and from Staples & Mulvy $3,020.29, T. R. Foley $7,500; total, $30,520.29. In addition to the above, we have suits pending in the courts in which the amounts sued for aggregate $157,284.28. Itasca Lumber company, four suits, $30,264.88; Shelvin-Carpenter company, two suits, $47,598.08; S. Reynolds, one suit, $3,000; T. H. Shelvin, one suit, $20,281.22; E. G. Webster, one suit, $1,140.10; Powers & Dwyer, one suit, $40,000; total, $157,284.28.

We may also add seventeen suits in which the evidence is well worked up and the papers nearly ready to serve, which suits will aggregate $205,070.44. This gives a grand total of $393,094.85. The committee also gives a table showing what has been lost by trespass. In one table, covering fifty sections and parts of sections, the scale of the committee shows that 73,173,959 feet have been taken from the land. The annual report to the state auditor from the land, as shown by the surveyor general's report, was 31 per cent of the amount taken, or 23,324,113, a loss to the state of 50,749,848. In another table, covering fifty-eight sections, a shortage of 37,969,433 is shown in the amount reported to the auditor.

CHRISTIE SWUNG OFF.

The St. Paul Boy Murderer Hanged in Montana.

Kellspel, Mont., Dec. 23.—The hanging of Calvin J. Christie, or Charles J. Black, as he was known here, took place yesterday. His iron nerve remained to the last. He walked firmly to the gallows and smiled most of the time. He claimed innocence to the last, and uttered a prayer, after which the trap was sprung and the execution successfully done.

The annals of crime do not record the commission of one more villainous than that which resulted in the death of Calvin J. Christie on the gallows. On April 28 Mrs. Lena Cunningham, the wife of a rancher living in the upper end of the county, left the little town of Columbia Falls to go home. Christie saw her leave, and, taking another route, met her in the woods and brutally murdered her after violating her person.

The court records furnish almost a complete history of the life of Christie from boyhood. He was born in Aurora twenty one years ago. His father died in St. Paul, where the family located in 1875. His mother was afterward married to Albert Brimley, with whom she is now living. The boy was wayward from this time. He first came into prominence as a thief by joining a gang of young pickpockets who did a profitable business in St. Paul. They gave trouble during the days of the ice carnivals. Pocket-picking led to still greater crimes. Christie at one time was a pal of Bill Donaldson, a Boston safe blower. They blew a safe at Hinckley, but were never apprehended. Christie was very successful as a till tapper. He committed a number of crimes in St. Paul, the last being the robbery of a jewelry store on West Third street. For this he was sentenced to five years at Stillwater, but after serving thirteen months was sent to St. Peter asylum as an epileptic, feigning fits. From there he escaped and came West.

VALUABLE LAND INVOLVED.

Secretary Smith Decides the Famous Hartman Case.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The secretary of the interior to-day decided the long-contested case of Hyde, McDonald and others, vs. Emil Hartman et al., involving five quarter sections of mineral land valued at about $1,000,000, near Duluth, Minn. The land was formerly covered by the Sioux half-breed scrip locations, which the secretary held to be invalid in a decision rendered in February, 1889. The main issue was whether the former decision took effect upon the secretary's signature or upon receipt at Duluth land office. The decision holds that it took effect upon signature. It shuts out the claims of Angus McDonald, C. M. Hyde, C. W. Massau and D. M. Sullivan, and finds in favor of William Alden as to three of the five tracts; H. E. James and Emil Hartman as to one tract each.

COMSTOCK COMES OUT

And Raises His Senatorial Lightning Rod.

St. Paul, Dec. 23.—Hon. S. G. Comstock of Moorhead is a candidate for the United States senate.

"After looking the field over," said Mr. Comstock, "I am satisfied that there is room for another candidate, and have decided to enter the senatorial contest. I am not fighting any other candidate, but have entered the race, believing my chances of success to be as good as those of any other man. I do not claim that either the state or the Republican party owes me anything. As far as my canvass is concerned I shall make a clean and as strong a fight as it is possible to make."

Kerr said last night he would call the subcommittee together immediately and proceed with the work. He said all the funds necessary to commence the investigation were in sight.

WEBSTER AND STARK

THE MEMORY OF TWO DEAD STATESMEN IS HONORED.

Speeches Are Made in Congress Presenting to the Government by New Hampshire Citizens the Statues of Daniel Webster and John Stark.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The senate was called to order by Mr. Harris, president pro tem., in the absence of the vice president. The reading of the journal was dispensed with, and on motion of Mr. Cockrell (Dem., Mo.) the senate went into executive session immediately after the meeting. The doors were opened at 12:20 p. m., and the senate considered some routine business.

Mr. Peffer (Pop., Kan.) desired to read at length a communication from certain sorghum manufacturers in his state, but Mr. Gallinger, (Rep., N. H.) objected because of other important business that was to come up to-day, and permission was given to print in the Record.

The senate bill to revive the grade of lieutenant general in the army was reported by Mr. Hawley from the military affairs committee, and placed on the calendar.

Mr. Berry (Dem., Ark.) submitted a minority report favoring the passage of the bill (heretofore reported adversely from the public lands committee) forfeiting certain lands granted to aid in the construction of railroads.

A bill to develop fourteen transportation routes to the seaboard was introduced by Mr. Butler of South Carolina, and one to provide a suitable residence for the president, by Mr. Quay of Pennsylvania.

The senate then proceeded to the special order for the day—the speeches presenting to the government by the State of New Hampshire the statues of John Stark and Daniel Webster.

Mr. Chandler of New York first had read a letter from the governor of New Hampshire, saying that the state had placed in Statuary hall the statues of her distinguished sons. A resolution thanking the state was offered by Mr. Perkins of California, and on this resolution Mr. Gallinger addressed the senate.

Mr. Gallinger devoted himself to a portrayal of the qualities and characteristics and to the relation of many adventures and great military achievements of Gen. Stark, who, he said, was in many respects sui generis among the brave and patriotic men of his day and generation.

Senator Lodge said of Stark that he sprang from that sturdy stock which brought to the North of Ireland the blood of Scotch Covenanters and of Cromwell's Ironsides.

The venerable senator from Vermont, Mr. Morrill, one of the few men now in public life who, having seen Daniel Webster, gave a recital of several anecdotes of the dead statesman. "No man," he said, "who ever looked upon Daniel Webster failed to discover that he was a man of no common mold."

Senator Davis said: "It has been said of Webster that he was not a constructive statesman; that he originated few measures, drafted few statutes, and that he was a mere demonstrator. Exactly the contrary is the fact. He was the most constructive of American statesmen. He construed the constitution constructively in nearly all of its articles. He applied it and expanded it, and to-day his personality is inseparably identified with it as it is."

The house discussed the financial bill, and then speeches were made similar to those in the senate on Webster and Stark.

IT WAS A BLUFF.

A Pretended Bomb Thrower Is Now In Jail.

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 22.—At noon a shabbily attired young man entered the Second National bank and walked directly into the private office of Mr. George W. Davis. Inquiring if Mr. Davis was president of the bank, and receiving an affirmative reply, the stranger said:

"Well, I'm a poor man, and want some money."

"You can't have it," Mr. Davis replied.

The stranger pulled from his pocket a round package, and holding it above his head, shouted, "This is a bomb. If you don't give me money I'll break it on the floor and kill both of us."

Mr. Davis jumped to his feet and ordered the man out of the office. The noise brought the clerks to the rescue, and the man was secured and taken to the police station, where he is held on suspicion. He gave his name as Sam Brown, born in Russia, but residing in New York city. The bomb was a large orange wrapped up in paper. It was a bluff and did not work.

Murderous Assault.

Yankton, S. D., Dec. 22.—John Collins, a laborer, was fatally assaulted last night, and will die. His alleged assailants were John Walloch, a saloonkeeper, and Gaston Foster, a bartender. Walloch has fled, and Foster is in jail.

Limit Their Power.

Washington, Dec. 22. — Senator Pugh to-day introduced a bill limiting the power of United States courts to punish for contempt or misbehavior committed in their presence or so near as to obstruct the administration of justice.

REJECTED BY A GIRL.

Daniel Olson Sought to End His Life by Taking Laudanum.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 22.—Daniel Olson, aged 25, unmarried, who lives at Eleva, was found unconscious this morning in a stall in a stable in this city, with an empty laudanum bottle near by. He had bought the laudanum at a drug store last night. Doctors and a stomach pump saved him. It is said he sought death because a girl of Trempeleau county refused to marry him.

Sixteen years ago two Iowa farmers got into a dispute over the ownership of a calf. The adolescent bovine had wandered from the premises of its owner to those of a neighbor, where it had inflicted some damage upon the "garden sass." The calf was seized by the man upon whose property it had strayed, and the owner refusing to pay the damages claimed, the animal was sold. This gave rise to a lawsuit which has been in progress ever since. Beginning in a justice court, it has been knocked about in all the higher tribunals until a few days ago, when the supreme court rendered a final decision. The costs of the litigation, outside of lawyers' fees have amounted to about twenty-eight thousand dollars Both of the farmers have been ruined, utterly. They have spent all the money they have earned, and have sold their stock, their houses and their farms, and now, with old age creeping on apace, they find themselves destitute. They now fully realize that those who dance must pay the fiddler. Morning Call.

Here's a pretty how-de-do: This great government, some years ago, liberated a great race, which had been enslaved up to that time, and undertook to cherish and protect them. Now the representatives of that race in Alabama have petitioned the governor of the state asking that they be protected from lynching, have an equal share of the school fund and in other ways be allowed the priviledges of American citizens. There is but one conclusion to arrive at: That we have a personal protection law that does not protect; just across the Red river they have a prohibition law that does not prohibit, and all over the Union we have tax laws that do not tax. Here's a pretty state of things.

Near Yankton is the moste remarkable family on the continent perhaps in the world, says the Bridgewater Democrat. It consists of father, mother and 24 children, and the mother of the brood is not yet 30 years old. She is a Norwegian and her husband is a Hoosier. They were born in triplets, and the oldest lot is under 12 years of age, All of them are boys but three one set being girls, They are a sturdy lot of youngsters The gentleman who has started out to be the father of our country: is a well-to-do farmer who is remarkably proud of his progeny. He says if the good Lord continues to smile upon Dakota he may be able to furnish Uncle Sam with a full company of soldiers.—Ex.

It is now asserted and believed that the present session of Congress will repeal the Income tax law; or if it is not repealed it will not be enforced, since money enough to pay the cost of the enforcement was not appropriated by the last session, and will not be by the present one. This is in harmony with the spirit of the times. The income tax law is the only legislation of recent years that is directly and largely in the interest of the mass of our people, the only law really obnoxious to the wealth absorbers of the country therefore it should not be expected to live long or possess much vigor while it does live.

The Fosston and McIntosh people have joined hands in a new county division scheme but they don't seem to be able to harmonize, judging from the following from the McIntosh Times: Inasmuch as Fosston furnished both the president and the secretary as well as a large majority of the delegates to the county division convention held in this city a week ago Saturday, It looks a little out of place for her to be poking fun at the meeting at this time just because her pet scheme wasn't in it at the meeting."—Crookstone Tribune.

THE CARLISLE PLAN.

WHAT IT IS AND HOW THE WISEACRES DISAGREE OVER IT.

They Agree Upon One Thing Only, Which Is That the Populists Are Right In Declaring That Immediate Financial Reform Is an Absolute Necessity.

There seems to be pretty general agreement among those who take an interest in public affairs that the pressing question at this time is the financial policy of the nation. Within less than 30 days after the election that closed a campaign in which the Populist claim that finance was the most important issue before the people was poohpoohed by Republican and Democratic politicians, the leaders of the old parties began a stampede in the direction of the money question, and now the bellwethers of every crossroads bunch of old partyites are shouting for "regulation of the currency." The army of "calamity howlers" has swelled to enormous proportions, but there is danger in this sudden post election awakening. To have admitted during the recent campaign the Populist claim that the financial question is of first importance would have given a prestige to the party which raised the issue and invited attention to its proposals. It was safer to conduct the campaign on sham lines or no lines at all, and to wait until the people were again bamboozled at the ballot box, and then to suddenly discover the necessity for some sort of action. Old Pluto knows his business, and the "two leading parties" are in his employ.

But the purpose of this article is to give the views of well known men and leading journals upon Secretary Carlisle's proposal, which has the indorsement of President Cleveland and is, with some differences, the same as that made by the recent convention of national bankers, known as the "Baltimore plan." The indorsement which the president in his message gives the Carlisle plan, and which states it in clear and concise form, follows:

> It is proposed to repeal all laws providing for the deposit of United States bonds as security for circulation; to permit national banks to issue circulating notes not exceeding in amount 75 per cent of their paid up and unimpaired capital, provided they deposit with the government as a guarantee fund in United States legal tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890, a sum equal in amount to 30 per cent of the notes they desire to issue, this deposit to be maintained at all times; but whenever any bank retires any part of its circulation a proportional part of its guarantee fund shall be returned to it; to permit the secretary of the treasury to prepare and keep on hand ready for issue, in case an increase in circulation is desired, blank national bank notes for each bank having circulation and to repeal the provisions of the present law imposing limitations and restrictions upon banks desiring to reduce or increase their circulation, thus permitting such increase or reduction within the limit of 75 per cent of capital to be quickly made as emergencies arise.
>
> In addition to the guarantee fund required it is proposed to provide a safety fund for the immediate redemption of the circulating notes of failed banks by imposing a small annual tax, say one-half of 1 per cent, upon the average circulation of each bank until the fund amounts to 5 per cent of the total circulation outstanding. When a bank fails, its guarantee fund is to be paid into this safety fund, and its notes are to be redeemed in the first instance from such safety fund thus augmented, any impairment of such fund caused thereby to be made good from the immediately available cash assets of said bank, and if these should be insufficient such impairment to be made good by pro rata assessment among the other banks, their contributions constituting a first lien upon the assets of the failed bank in favor of the contributing banks. As a further security it is contemplated that the existing provision fixing the individual liability of stockholders is to be retained, and the bank's indebtedness on account of its circulating notes is to be made a first lien on all its assets.
>
> For the purpose of meeting the expense of printing notes, official supervision, cancellation and other like charges, there shall be imposed a tax of, say, one-half of 1 per cent per annum upon the average amount of notes in circulation.
>
> It is further provided that there shall be no national bank notes issued of a less denomination than $10; that each national bank, except in case of a failed bank, shall redeem or retire its notes in the first instance at its own office or at agencies to be designated by it, and that no fixed reserve need be maintained on account of deposits.
>
> Another very important feature of this plan is the exemption of state banks from taxation by the United States in cases where it is shown to the satisfaction of the secretary of the treasury and comptroller of the currency by banks claiming such exemption that they have not had outstanding their circulating notes exceeding 75 per cent of their paid up and unimpaired capital; that their stockholders are individually liable for the redemption of their circulating notes to the full extent of their ownership of stock; that the liability of said banks upon their circulating notes constitutes under their state law a first lien upon their assets; that such banks have kept and maintained a guarantee fund in United States legal tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890, equal to 30 per cent of their outstanding circulating notes, and that such banks have promptly redeemed their circulating notes when presented at their principal or branch offices.

Out of the many editorial comments which have fallen under the editor's eye the following are selected as fairly representative of the varied thoughts expressed:

There is one vital issue confronting the people of this country today that rises above all party considerations and interests. It is a question that must enlist the efforts of every patriotic lawmaker. No party can succeed that obstructs the solution of the problem, and the party that commands the highest measure of the confidence of the people will be certain to win the great battle of 1896. This vital issue involves a sound financial system. We cannot move on with safety on our present financial basis.—Philadelphia Times.

The plan of currency reform which has been formulated by the secretary of the treasury and received the approval of the president is objectionable to many financiers, for the banks would get the profit on the circulation while the government would have to maintain the parity.—Rochester Post-Express.

Reserving the intrinsic merits of the scheme for further consideration, it strikes us as a shrewd effort to put the money question ahead of all others, to unite eastern Democrats and Republicans in support of the administration's financial policy, to monetize private credit in preference to the credit of the

ALL AT SEA ON MONEY

STATESMEN WHO DON'T KNOW WHERE THEY'RE AT ON FINANCE.

"Elasticity" Appears to Be the Principal Stumbling Block Just at This Time. Will the Plutocrats Succeed In Haltering the Nation's Credit?

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The "demnition grind" is resumed, and the burden of congressional talk is money, money, money. Each alleged statesman starts in by protesting that "so vital a matter ought not to be a political issue. It really ought not to be agitated this way year after year," and then proceeds to agitate it with all his force. The cold, hard truth that the money question is vital, and they cannot get away from it, is what they do not want to admit, because party lines are not yet drawn on it, though geographical lines are, and the question of the hour with the Democrats is, "How can we get together?" and with the Republicans, "How can we keep together?" An average Democrat going westward and southward from New York would, if finance were permitted to be the main issue, slough his political skin as he went, and having passed the eighty-sixth meridian or the thirty-sixth parallel would be a high caste Republican, a regular yellow skinned Brahman, and only lacking a gold ring in his nose to be a truly aboriginal hard money savage. Realizing this fact, they all try to talk away from it, but start where they may the gruel of their conversation soon runs thick and slab with "dollars."

Cleveland's message was a great disappointment. Wonderful things had been promised and weighty hints thrown out that he would present a marvelously comprehensive plan, unite the party and start a movement similar to that inaugurated by his message seven years ago. The mountain labored, and the result was not even a mouse. There was no plan and no suggestion save an indorsement of Secretary Carlisle's. That proved to be the Baltimore plan with a state bank attachment, the bankers to issue 100 promises to pay, based on 30 promises to pay and certain presumed assets. No gold basis is required, and silver is not in it. The proposed currency would not be fiat money—oh, no, of course not!—or, if fiat, it would be bankers' fiat. Reduced to its lowest terms, the logic of it runs thus: Inflation is a great evil if it be inflation of silver or government legal tender, but bankers inflation is the dandy, oh! It would puzzle a very wise man—a regiment of them, in fact—to find out just what congressmen think of this scheme. In the house committee on banking and currency there are 17 opinions, and there would be more opinions if there were more members. Omitting minor variations, however, these 17 opinions are reducible to four.

There is the old Whig or Alexander Hamilton idea, which was once supposed to have been killed in this country by the Jackson-Benton hard money Democrats. The national banker's idea as advocated by Mr. Walker of Massachusetts and Mr. Warner of New York is as simple and explicit as a patent medicine. It runs thus: Retire the greenbacks, kill silver once for all and let the bankers manage the currency. There are, of course, advocates of the state bank system on the committee, and Mr. Cox of Tennessee is confident a bill embracing the general principles of the Carlisle plan could be put through this congress, because it would make an opening for state banks. The other side, however, assert with almost profane positiveness that no bill shall pass the committee, much less the house, that leaves any hope of state banks. There is also a silver sentiment in the committee, but it is extremely feeble at present.

The variations of opinion outside of congress are quite curious. At first expressions were 10 to 1 that the Baltimore plan would be rejected with contempt. A shrewd minority, however, and among them Mr. Taubeneck, said that Cleveland patronage would bring in a few; that a few more would be enlisted by mere force of his leadership, and that cold cash would catch some. So many men are going out of office to stay that several may be counted on as anxious to get something to quit on. And, sure enough, the message and Carlisle proposition were followed by several Democratic accessions. On the other hand, Republicans began to look cross eyed at the scheme as soon as it promised to become a Democratic measure. There is one very weighty factor in favor of the scheme—the extreme anxiety of the Democrats to get some measure on which they can unite in 1896 and the belief of many of them that the national bank part of it will satisfy the east, while the state bank part will capture the west. On the other hand, the Republicans are naturally anxious to prevent such a consummation and do not hesitate to say that their policy is to have the matter thoroughly discussed by this congress and the Democrats split on it, after which their own congress, instructed by events and the discussion, can pass a truly comprehensive bill. It is a safe bet that they will have their wish on the first part of this.

Is it not strange that not one of all these talkers can see that banks of issue are obsolete, whether national, state or private? The world has outgrown them. They are either unsafe or unnecessary, and generally both. A thousand columns of speeches in The Congressional Record on the safety of the national bank system are answered by this solitary fact: In the year 1893, 360 banks west of the Alleghanies, owing $125,000,000, went to smash, and, according to the best of my recollection, 11 national bankers are now in prison or exile, while many more escaped, as it were, by fire.

Even from the hard money standpoint the proposed system is unscientific, unsafe and un-American, besides

OFFICIAL NOTICE OF THE
WORLD'S FAIR AWARD
TO
Dr. Price's
Cream Baking Powder.

JOHN BOYD THACHER, Chairman of the Executive Committee on Awards at the Columbian Exposition, writing from Washington, D. C., to the Price Baking Powder Company, says:

"I herewith enclose you an official copy of your award, which in due time, will be inscribed in the Diploma, and forwarded to your address, unless otherwise indicated by you."

Thus are the honors awarded
Dr. Price's Baking Powder
at the World's Fair fully verified.

On the other hand the claims to awards at the Fair by a New York Baking Powder are proven wholly false. Official records show it was not even an exhibitor. Was it because it contained Ammonia?

STRIKE IN THE KITCHEN.

The Lady of the House Takes a Lesson in Labor Troubles.

An odd thing happened the other day in a Brookline family, a something which the lady of the house isn't particularly anxious to talk about, especially when her husband is around. Not long ago the help in the factory went on a strike, and though they did not remain out long, the affair being mainly "sympathetic," yet it bothered him quite a bit, to the dislike of his wife. She remonstrated with him frequently over his silliness in allowing such a small thing to bother him, and guyed him still more when the affair ended amicably. A few mornings later the lady went into her morning room and rang the bell to give the cook her day's orders, when, to her astonishment, the ring was answered by all the help in the establishment, including the scrub girl and the boy who walked errands. The cook was spokeswoman.

"If you please," she began firmly, but respectfully, "we've come to say that we're on a strike. We don't like what you did in taking away Charlotte's Saturday night out and giving her Mary's Friday. By Mary having Charlotte's Saturday she gets a chance to meet Mrs. Smith's Henry, and as Mary's her rival, we don't think its giving either of 'em a fair chance."

The mistress looked at the company and saw that Charlotte and Mary were the only two absent; she reflected that she had by no means been aware of what affairs of state she was upsetting in changing the "evenings out" without any particular reason, and she decided that it was better to arbitrate than delay lunch, and possibly dinner, so she gracefully acceded to the demands of the assemblage, and restored Charlotte her Saturdays.

Still, when any one says strike to her now she shivers. For—"What is home without a dinner?"—Home Journal.

When Buying Furs.

In buying furs especially for trimming, go to a first-class place, inasmuch as the furs that are apparently sold for cheap prices are usually found lacking, writes Isabel A. Mallon in an exquisitely illustrated article on "The Correct Use of Furs," in the December Ladies' Home Journal. Frequently they have not been taken care of during the summer, and the moth has made his home among the hairs, and in a short time you will find your gown or skirt continually covered with them, and wherever you sit, or whoever may be near, will also suffer from the rain of loose fur. If a good effect is produced by an imitation fur, buy it, but examine it well. Mink is particularly well imitated, and as the real fur is quite expensive it may be taken for granted that on nine out of ten gowns the fur has never been acquainted with that sharp-looking little animal whose head just now is of so much value. The imitations of ermine are never good, and therefore not to be thought of. Astrakhan is sufficiently low in price to permit any one getting a gown trimming to have the real article itself. By-the-by, in speaking of laces and furs, I forgot to mention that over the deep fur capes, those reaching far below the waist, it is considered in perfectly good taste to wear a shoulder cape of lace. Usually one of the sharply-pointed designs is chosen for this purpose.

Property Rights Among Birds.

Birds and other creatures apportion the earth among themselves just about as man does. A bear has boundaries beyond which his fellow bear does not trespass with impunity—the wild rabbit you see on your lawn in the moonlight is the same little innocent creature you have been seeing every night all the summer time—and, even the robin that gathers the early worm for his breakfast from your garden, will show fight when another comes marauding on his preserve. Nor does this last a year only, for there is good evidence that the same bird will come back to the claim it staked off the year previous.—Meehan's Monthly for December.

A DELAYED TRIBUTE.

ONE year before Clara Lester's father had died, leaving his children orphaned, and almost friendless. He had been accounted a rich man. His house on the boulevard had been a marvel of almost barbaric magnificence. But after his death the knowledge came to his children that the only heritage their father left them was that of bitter poverty. Their only relative, an uncle, because of former enmity with his brother, refused to aid them.

So, with childish pride, taking the small portion remaining to them, they went out into the world alone. But slowly their slender purse grew lighter and lighter, and would have totally collapsed were it not that Max Marsden came forward with kindly offers of assistance. He was only a struggling, unsuccessful journalist, but he was an old friend of the family and they looked up to him and trusted him accordingly.

Many the little comfort which found its way from his hands to this upper story room. Cora got work, painting porcelain for a city house. Often after offering to deliver it, she would cry out in surprise at the ample pay her friend brought back.

"They had a customer who was willing to pay a good price for suitable work," Max would answer gravely.

Chicago was not at its pleasantest this sharp, unlovely evening. Winter had come upon it suddenly. Gusts of wind whirled the brown leaves madly down the avenues. The very car bells jingled mournfully. Once the girl glanced up at her companion in quick questioning.

"Where is your overcoat, Max? You will perish!"

"It's—it's a bad habit to muffle up early, and—I am not cold."

He had no overcoat, but there was a well-filled pocketbook in Cora Lester's desk, the contents of which did not come from the sale of placques.

They passed into the theater, a blaze of light, as into fairyland. But Max did not look at the stage or the house. He did not listen to the music. He saw only one radiant, girlish face, one bright, listening head. Many a blase theater-goer turned to look at her—at the lissome, girlish figure leaning slightly forward, at the little clasped hands, at the flushed cheeks, scarlet lips and brilliant eyes. Like Pygmalion's statue thrilled into life, she sat there startled and intoxicated by the music.

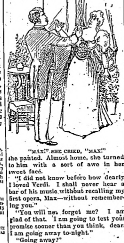
It was over. The curtain had fallen. The people were leaving. The child put out one hand blindly. "Oh Max!"



"MAX!" SHE CRIED, "MAX!"

she panted. Almost home, she turned to him with a sort of awe in her sweet face.

"I did not know before how dearly I loved Verdi. I shall never hear a bar of his music without recalling my first opera, Max—without remembering you."

"You will not forget me? I am glad of that. I am going to test your promise sooner than you think, dear. I am going away to-night."

"Going away?"

The young voice was sharp with a quick, constrained pain new to it.

"Yes; I have obtained on trial the position I went to New York to procure. I sail for England on Tuesday. And now here is a piece of good news to counteract the other. I went to see your uncle to-day and had a long talk with him. He is not such a grim, hard man as they say. He is very lonely and childish. He promises all luxury, all kindness, if you will go to him and be as his own children. Seeing him as I do with unprejudiced eyes. I think he regrets his past heartless conduct."

"But, Max ——"

"My child, I know all you would say; but Cedric is not strong enough to work, and I cannot go away leaving you so lonely and helpless. Besides, it is not wholly dependence. In his hands is some money of his father's on which you have morally a claim. Believe me, it is for the best."

He went into the house and shook hands with Cedric, then he stooped to Cora and reverently touched her forehead with his bearded lips. A moment more and the great shabby figure had burst out of the room and was striding rapidly away under the blue, star-studded sky.

She stood and watched him out of sight with eyes growing strangely dim. Once he paused and looked backward. She was still standing there, a slim, dark figure against the patch of sky.

"Oh, my love, God bless you," he whispered.

Five years later. The curtain at the Grand opera house in Paris rose on as fine an audience as had ever assembled within its walls. In one of the boxes on the grand tier sat three gentlemen. One, a tall, bronzed, soldierly man, noticing many glasses being leveled at an opposite box, lifted his lorgnette and looked across the stage.

A lady with a little coterie of admirers had just entered. She wore some soft, silken dress, all aquamarine and silver. There were water-lillies in the golden hair and emeralds on the white neck. A childish face for all its pride, and that peculiar poise of the head. A face with luminous blue eyes, a snowy, stately throat and cheeks just dashed with rose.

"Who is she?" Max Marsden questioned breathlessly.

"Ma foi!" cried a vivacious little Frenchman, "you do not know? She is a compatriot of yours—la belle Americaine. Her name is Lester—Mademoiselle Lester."

"Ah!" And then, after a pause, "Who is that gentleman leaning over her chair?"

"Ah, that is Savagneau," answered a member of the American legation. "The comte de Savagneau. He is heir to half a dozen princely estates, and is mademoiselle's devoted slave. But she will have none of him. She is a beauty and an heiress, and half Paris is mad about her. But one might as well adore a statue. No marble is colder than she."

Max Marsden, the celebrated journalist, the literary lion of the day, looked with keen eyes across to that dainty vision with water lilies in her hair. Dreamily he murmured a few lines of Meredith's:

> She was there, and I was here,
> And the glittering horseshoe curved between——.

"What the deuce are you mumbling, Marsden?" demanded the attache.

"Never mind!" curtly.

He was thinking of that other night when together they heard "Il Trovatore." It was the same opera to-night, but how differently she listened now, languidly, almost inattentively, leaning back in that graceful way of hers.

During the last act she arose and gathered her rich wrap around her. All the pretty bloom had faded from her cheek.

Mademoiselle, trailing her sheeny silks and laces along the corridor, paused in amazement at the message. Then she bowed wearily and passed on to the grand saloon.

"Max!" she cried, "Max!"

Her face was transfigured. She held our both hands in her old frank, fearless way.

He caught them tightly in his own. All his soul was in his eyes as he looked on the lovely lifted face. Just one glance. And over brow and cheek and white throat flamed a rich color.

"Cora," still holding her little hands in his own and speaking hoarsely, "to-night has recalled the other night—when I left you for your own sake—because I dared not stay. Perhaps the music has made me mad, for I am daring, oh, my love, to bring you now the tribute I could not offer five years ago."

For one moment she was silent. Then she lifted those truthful eyes of hers.

"Max, I think that night my soul awoke; for since then"—ah, me, the womanly shyness that crimsoned her cheeks—"for since then I have been—waiting!"

The Grain Habit.

"Billy, what became of these samples?"

"They ate 'em up sir."

"Is that so? I'll have to put a sign on these sacks and warn people that this isn't a feed barn."

This dialogue took place over in one corner of the board of trade where the tables are laden with paper sacks containing samples of grain. The favorite pastime of the expert is to grab a handful of wheat, blow away the dust and chaff, and then, after a careful examination, fill his mouth with the grain. Some of the traders seem actually addicted to the "grain habit," and that is why the samples disappear so quickly.—Chicago Record.

Negro Children.

At birth a negro child is of a reddish nut-brown color, which turns to a slaty gray in the first week of the child's existence. The black color is not fully developed for a period varying from two to three years, according to the nature of the locality and the influence of the climate. Darwin says that the children of Australians, immediately after birth, are yellowish brown, and become darker at a later age. Those of the Guaranys of Paraguay are whitish yellow, but they acquire in the course of a few weeks the yellowish-brown tint of their parents. It is curious to notice that the eyes of a negro child are blue at birth, his hair of a dark chestnut color, being only curled at the ends.

Chestnut Flour.

An old German who recently came to this country from the fatherland, has begun a novel industry in a little shanty in Pegg street, Philadelphia. This is nothing more or less than the manufacture of "chestnut flour." The flour manufactured from dried chestnuts has for many years been in great demand in Germany. A delicious sort of sweet bread is made from it by those who are familiar with the old-fashioned method of preparing the dough. The product of the old German's establishment is much sought after by the Germans in the neighborhood, and the supply is far below the demand.

Poor Mr. Biggar.

When Disraeli first set eyes on Mr. Biggar in the house of commons, he said to his fidus Achates: "What is that?" "That, sir is the honorable member for So-and-So." "Really!" replied the other; "I thought it was a leprechaun," which is a small but malignant species of Irish fairy.—Argonaut.

Teaching a Calf to Drink.

There are just two things required in teaching a calf how to drink; the first is a little common sense, the second is patience. The common sense comes in when you consider that its nature is to look up for its food supply, and if you touch the top of its head or nose you must expect its tendency will be to follow up that direction to find what it is after. Don't think a calf a day or two old can have a great amount of experience, so don't expect to show very much reasoning power. You must do that for them. When your patience begins to waver, just ask yourself how much more you knew when you were at the calf's age, and it may help you to credit the calf with a little sense and enable you to overlook a good deal that you might otherwise attribute to pure cussedness.

Butter and Cheese Making Machinery.

Chicago contains the largest manufactory in the world for the production of butter and cheese making machinery. The firm is known as the Davis & Rankin Building and Manufacturing Company at 240 to 254 Lake street. In the several departments of its factory, are turned out everything required in the production of butter and cheese. The farmer can find here, at insignificant cost, useful devices for converting his milk into marketable form, and the community that wishes to establish a creamery large enough to take care of its entire produce is accommodated with equal facility.

The Spanish Ladies and Their Vase—But That Was Nothing to What Happened When George Crocker Sat Down in Josiah Belden's Parlor.

"Perhaps you have never noticed it," said W. H. L. Barnes to a company of friends with whom he was passing an evening not long ago, "but if you begin to talk about a felon on your thumb you will find that nearly everybody has had one. It's just the same with every other kind of calamity."

Four of the half dozen ladies and gentlemen immediately emphasized the attorney's assertion by showing felon scars upon their digits, says the San Francisco Examiner, and the conversation at once turned upon the subject of peculiar coincidences, pleasurable and otherwise, but Barnes told the most interesting story of all.

"I had been invited to make some sort of a speech at a Masonic banquet," said he, "and had dressed myself in my best bib and tucker for the occasion. I always did have an idea that I was irresistible in evening dress, this with a smile of mock complacency, and I felt as if it would be really too bad to waste all my sweetness on a lot of men, even though they might be Masons of high degree. It so happened that on my way down town I had to pass the home of two most delightful little Spanish ladies, people of the old school, direct descendants of a famous family, though somewhat reduced in circumstances. They were clients of mine, and I felt privileged to pay them an unprofessional visit.

"Now, these dear ladies occupied a comfortable little apartment filled with many relics of their earlier prosperity. Among the articles of virtu cherished in this household was a beautiful Sevres vase, which occupied a prominent position in the parlor on a pretty but unsubstantial center table. It was the feature of the room.

"In the midst of their household treasures the two little Spanish ladies sat all unconscious of my approach, and I was equally unconscious of the impression I was about to make. The dim light from a mantel lamp was sufficient for their contemplation of each other, but, coming in out of the street as I did, it seemed as if I were entering a dark pocket.

Both ladies met me at the threshold and invited me with all their native grace of manner to enter. As I advanced into the parlor I stumbled clumsily over a leather hassock, fell against the frail center table, upset the beautiful Sevres vase upon the floor and broke it into a thousand pieces.

"You can imagine my consternation," continued the narrator. "The ladies did their best to put me at my ease, but that was out of the question. They bustled about picking up the pieces of their shattered household idol, assuring me meanwhile that it was a matter of no consequence at all, though their chins quivered with an emotion they were far too polite to express in words. I don't think I ever felt so mean in my life. There were two reasons why I could not offer pay for the broken vase. One was that I hadn't the money: the other was that the ladies were not people to whom I could offer recompense of that kind. Of course they said and did everything to save me from mortification, but for once I had nothing to offer in excuse for my awkwardness, and, as soon as I could do it decently, I bowed myself out, both the little ladies escorting me to the door and renewing their assurance that the loss of their $500 vase was not worth mentioning.

"Just before I reached the Masonic temple I met Dick Pease. He noticed my distraction and asked me what in the world was the matter. So I poured my tale of woe into his willing ear, and the story he told me in the line of solace went a long way toward proving that, no matter what happens to a fellow, something just as bad probably happened to some one else.

"'Seems to me you're making a mountain out of a mole hill,' said Pease. 'Wait till I tell you the experience George Croker and I had in New York last winter. Josiah Belden, you know, made his millions out here, and went to New York to spend them. He had bought a nice house on Madison avenue, furnished it up beautifully and was enjoying life as only a rich man can. George Croker and I happened to have nothing to do one night and he suggested that we go around and call on Belden and we did. We found the wealthy Californian sitting in his parlor with other members of his family and they seemed really glad to see us. The parlor was full of beautiful things, but perhaps the most notable feature was a handsome piano lamp with a cut-glass globe and a shade as big as an umbrella. Josiah pushed an easy chair toward me and asked us to make ourselves perfectly at home.

"'Now, you know George Crocker is no sylph. When he began to look around for a place to sit he wanted something substantial. There was a comfortable-looking chair near by, but it was one of those beautifully upholstered, easy-castored things that will fly across the room if you breathe on it. When George sat down the chair shot away with him as if it had been fired out of a catapult. Of course it made straight for the big piano lamp. The lamp upset, the globe was broken, the oil was spilled on the carpet, the carpet blazed and the house caught fire. It cost Josiah Belden $10,000 to repair the damage.'"

Changed Conditions.

"This business ain't what it used to be," wailed the fortune teller.

"So?" responded the clairvoyant.

"No, indeed. It has got to be now so you can't tell whether a young woman wants you to predict she will marry a rich man or that she will be president of the United States."—Indianapolis Journal.

In Our Great Grandfather's Time,

big bulky pills were in general use. Like the "blunderbuss" of that decade they were big and clumsy, but ineffective. In this century of enlightenment, we have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver, stomach and bowel derangements in the most effective way.

Assist Nature a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, or dyspepsia, biliousness, pimples, blotches, eruptions, boils, constipation, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequaled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity, with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

A free sample of the "Pellets," (4 to 7 doses) on trial, is mailed to any address, post-paid, on receipt of name and address on postal card.

Perfect House Unearthed Near Pompeii.

A valuable discovery has been made at Pianella-Bettelmini, near Pompeii, on the property of a certain Vincent de Prosco. A house has been unearthed which was covered at the time the city was buried, and it is said to be in a more perfect condition than any building yet discovered. It contains several large apartments, and three bathrooms with the basin in sculptured marble, and with leaden pipes ornamented with bronze faucets. The three rooms correspond, says a writer in describing the discovery, to the "calidarium, tepidarium and frigidarium, which were always to be found in ancient houses of the first class. In consequence of the eruption of Vesuvius in A. D. 79, the Pompeiian houses brought to light heretofore have been roofless, almost without exception. Fortunately, however, that on the property of M de Proco is perfect, and archaeologists are happy over that fact. The roof measures almost forty-four feet in length."—New York Tribune.

THEY ARE STARVING

GREAT DESTITUTION IN PORTIONS OF NEBRASKA.

A Dozen People Have Perished in the Past Few Days for Want of Food and Fuel—Six Hundred Families in One County Are in Want.

Denver, Jan. 1.—The Rocy Mountain News has received special dispatches from Western Nebraska telling of destitution and distress prevailing among the inhabitants of the drouth-stricken districts. A dispatch from Hastings says: "Terrible destitution exists in Perkins, Chase, Dundy, Lincoln, Hayes, Hitchcock and Frontier counties and the worst feature is the people in several localities are afflicted with scurvy for want of wholesome food. The state relief committee find themselves unable to relieve all the people in distress so great are the demands for aid.

The railroad men report that since the cold snap no less than a dozen people have perished in the above county in the past two days for want of food and fuel. Hundreds of families are without coal and in the border counties where no trees or brush exist the poor people had a hard time to keep from freezing to death. In Perkins county destitution is complete. Over 600 families are appealing for help.

Near Lisbon the wife and two children of Settler Burns suffered for want of proper nourishment and clothing to cover them.

In Hitchcock county the wife of one of the settlers gave birth to twins during the storm, and before the neighbors could reach the home of the poor woman she expired for want of sufficient food and attention. The twins are still living and in charge of charitable neighbors.

Coal is most needed in the drouth-stricken district, and Mr. Ludden, of the state relief committee and General Manager Holdredge, of the Burlington & Missouri River, are doing everything in their power to forward supplies to the most desolate localities. Very few of the farmers in the border counties have any stock left, having let their cattle and horses roam at large. Stock is being driven out of the state to prevent starvation.

Corn planted in eight or ten of the western counties never reached a height of over six inches and contains no more nourishment than sage brush. People are leaving in covered wagons by the hundreds rather than face starvation and freeze to death.

ALL ON BOARD LOST.

A British Bark Goes Down in the Irish Sea.

London, Jan. 1. — Severe weather has prevailed throughout Great Britain since Saturday, the heavy gale being accompanied by hail and snow, rendering navigation along the coasts both difficult and dangerous. All vessels that could do so made for havens of shelter. Some of them, however, did not succeed in reaching port, but were wrecked almost in sight of safety. This was the case of the British bark Osseo, Capt. Boggs, which sailed from Taltal Aug. 15 for Androssan. She made the long voyage safely until this morning when she was wrecked on the Holyhead breakwater, and every soul on board, twenty-four in all, were drowned.

The Norwegian ship Frey, Capt. Hansen, from Darien, while riding at anchor off Tron, was dismasted. Her crew were taken off in a lifeboat. The boat capsized and one man was drowned. The other fifteen reached the shore safely. The Frey has since dragged her anchor and gone ashore at Devil's Dyke, four miles from Ayr.

The British bark Bonita, Capt. Thomas, from Galveston, was run into off Falmouth this morning and damaged by the schooner Carrie Harvey. A dispatch from Londonderry says that nothing has been heard of the Mississippi and Dominion line steamer Sarnia which lost her rudder at sea, and which, after being taken in tow by the Anchor line steamer Anchoria, was dropped about 130 miles west of Tory island owing to heavy weather which made towing dangerous. The Anchor line steamer Furnessia, from Glasgow for New York, which sailed from Moville this morning, has orders to keep a sharp lookout for the Sarnia. Tugs are lying in Lough Foyle in readiness to proceed in search of her as soon as the weather permits.

The storm inland has done immense damage. Trains have been blocked by heavy snow drifts, and in many places in Scotland the telegraph wires are down.

ROBBER GETS A DRINK

In the Shape of a Bullet Straight Through the Heart.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—A gang of four robbers started out last night to raid the saloons on the North side. The net result is one bartender fatally wounded and one robber dead. The gang early in the evening entered the saloon of M. I. Melin at 29 Kinzie street. Nelse Beck, the bartender, was alone. He showed fight and was shot through the body. Later the gang entered the saloon of Austin McGrail, No. 57 Huron street, and ordered him to throw up his hands. McGrail remarked:

"Oh, I guess not. You are going to have a drink with me."

The gang apparently acquiesced, and McGrail, seizing his revolver, shot one of them through the heart and bombarded the others as they flew through the doorway. The police are now trying to round them up.

Nail Mill Burned.

Sunbury, Pa., Jan. 1.—Van Ilien Nail mill at Northumberland, twenty-five miles south, was totally destroyed by fire to-day. The fire originated in the engine room. Four thousand kegs of nails were destroyed. The loss is $100,000; about half-insured. The mill employed 200 men and boys.

What Came of It?

Constantinople, Jan. 1. — United States Minister Alexander W. Terrell had an audience with the sultan yesterday.

NOTED HOTEL BURNED.

The Delavan House in Albany, N. Y., in Ashes.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1.—The Delavan house, that famous hostelry known from Maine to California, the mecca of politicians and the center of all big state political events for forty years, was completely destroyed by fire last night. It was 8:20, and the political headquarters of both Mr. Fish and Mr. Malby, candidates for speaker of the assembly, were filled with politicians and newspaper men. State Factory Inspector Connolly, who had been in the lobby with a number of people, started to come up the elevator. He remarked that he smelled smoke, and suggested an investigation. Before it could be begun there were cries of fire from different parts of the house simultaneously. The outburst of flames before an alarm could be given to arouse the inmates of the rooms was something appalling. Up the elevator shaft there shot a solid column of flame, up the staircase near this shot another column. As the mass of white-hot flame reached each of the five doors it branched out into tongues of leaping destruction and it seemed as though the whole interior of the structure was a seething mass. Fortunately the guest list was not very large and the majority of those registered were politicians and were down on the second floor where Mr. Fish and Mr. Malby had headquarters. There was a rush for the stairs in the front and the servants' stairs in the back where the flames had not yet reached, and in a few minutes there was a tumbling mass of humanity coming down. Those on the two upper floors could not avail themselves of the stairs for the flames were rushing through corridors, and people on the streets who had noticed the flames, heard the crash of glass and saw figures come tumbling out of the windows. Mrs. H. A. Foakes of Cleveland and B. F. Heilman jumped from the windows and were fatally injured. Several others were badly burned.

The department with nine streams of water pouring into the building, could do absolutely nothing at all to stop the onslaught of the flames, and the only work was to save the surrounding property. The hotel takes in the entire block, about 110 by 450 feet, and this was in fifteen minutes a seething cauldron only bound by the four walls. The wires of the electric light company were destroyed and a section of the city was in darkness, save for the light of the fire. Of the 100 or more guests of the hotel not one is known to have saved more than the clothes on their person.

The Delavan house was fifty years old and was one of the most famous hotels in the country. It is a part of the estate of Edward C. Delavan, Hurly & Moore, the proprietors, paid $40,000 a year rental, and lately had made vast improvements in expectations of a big winter season. The total loss is estimated at $500,000, with an insurance of $300,000.

There are rumors that there are bodies in the ruins and that quite a number of people did not escape. The clerk says that he is positive all the guests escaped, but does not feel so sure about the help, of which there was a great number. There is no way of finding out positively whether the rumors are true or not, and it will take a day or two to determine.

ISSUE AN ADDRESS.

Close of the Populist Conference at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 1.—The Populist conference has adjourned, after issuing an address, in which the party is congratulated upon the fact that "the rapid increase in our vote in every part of the Union, and the startling events of the past two years, vividly justify both the existence and necessity of the People's party. The contention of the party that one of the great needs of this country has been and is an enlarged volume of circulating medium is now practically conceded by all parties and by the government. The gold power and banking interests are insisting, through the president and secretary, that the enlarged issue of our money supply shall be given exclusively into the hands of the banks; that silver shall be excluded, all treasury notes retired, and that gold alone should be a legal tender, thus making the monetary question an issue which must be met at once."

The administration is denounced for using troops in the recent strike and for its financial policy. The address declares for free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1; opposes further bond issues; denounces the railway pooling bill, and closes as follows:

"We ask the people to forget all past political differences and unite with us in the common purpose to rescue the government from the control of monopolists and concentrated wealth, to limit powers of perpetuation by curtailing their privileges and to secure the right of free speech, a free press and a trial by jury, all rules, regulations and judicial dicta in derogation of either of which are arbitrary, unconstitutional and not to be tolerated by a free people. We recommend the immediate organization of an educational campaign by the national, state and local committees."

Fritz Had Enough of Life.

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 1. — Fritz Baehl, a bachelor with $4,000 in the savings bank, committed suicide by strangling himself with a few strands of cord fastened to a bedpost not over five feet high.

HIS WIFE INSTEAD.

An Iowa Woman Gets an Office Inadvertently.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 1.—As the result of a clerical error in an election ballot, Iowa will for the first time in its history have a female justice of the peace, Mrs. L. E. Castle of Callender being sworn in to-day. The intention was to nominate her husband, but by mistake his wife's initials were used, and she was elected. As there was no legal obstacle to her filling the place, she was sworn in.

TOLD BY BIERMANN

MINNESOTA'S STATE AUDITOR ISSUES A REPORT.

He Reviews the Work of His Office and Makes Recommendations to the Legislature—The Sale of Swamp Lands Discussed.

St. Paul, Dec. 29. — State Auditor Biermann, in his biennial report, gives the state some advice on guarding what is left of its wealth of timber. He says the law should require that examiners give bonds for the faithful performance of their duties, and that examination be made from actual view and in detail, in tracts not larger than forty acres. These reports should be verified by affidavit of the examiner. A minimum price per thousand feet for virgin white pine should be fixed at $3, and for inferior qualities not less than $1.50.

"Permits to cut pine timber," says the auditor, "should not be given for a term longer than two years, and extension beyond that period rarely, if ever. It should be within the power of the state land commissioner to cause all cuttings being done to be examined and scaled under oath, independent of the scaling of the deputies of the surveyor general of logs, at least twice during the cutting. In this way errors, whether accidental or not, could be guarded against and the state assured of fair treatment. All logs cut should be marked with a bark mark duly recorded in the name of the state, and this mark should not be allowed to be used but for the logs from one section or tract being cut and landed at any particular landing. The deputies of the several surveyors general should be placed under bonds and their report verified by affidavit. All bills from the surveyor general for scaling should be filed in this office by April 1 of each year, and all stumpage should be made due on May 1. If not paid at that time a penalty, say of 5 per cent, should immediately accrue, with interest from date of delinquency."

Swamp Lands.

He finds from the records of the state land office and from other sources that the state has suffered great loss in the disposition of swamp lands granted by congress. Redress should be sought, he says, either from the secretary of the interior or through congress. He continues:

"Under the law of 1889 regulating the sale and lease of mineral and other lands belonging to the state, 2,085 prospective leases and 331 mining contracts have been executed. Naturally, much of the land covered by these leases has been abandoned, so far as the search of mineral is concerned, and, in some cases, the annual payments due the state under contract remain unpaid. Where the abandonment of the land embraced in these contracts is conclusively shown the contract has been sometimes canceled, and new issues have been allowed to be filed. The mining of iron ore on state land has been reduced to the product from one quarter-section of land, and if the sentiment prevailing among operators that the royalty exacted by the state is too high is worthy of attention, I submit it to you for such consideration as you may deem for the best interests of the state."

The taxable valuation of all property on the lists of 1893 was, in round numbers, $643,000,000. That for the tax of 1894 will show an increase. In his opinion a conservative estimate of the taxable value of all property in the state for the tax lists of 1894 would be $650,000,000. That for the 1895 and 1896 lists at $660,000,000 and $670,000,000 respectively.

A tax commission, whose duty it shall be to codify the somewhat involved laws is a growing necessity, he says.

The auditor suggests the consideration of some plan to enlarge the scope of powers of the commissioners for the investment of moneys so that loans may be made to municipal corporations within the state.

In the matter of selections of lands to which the state is entitled under this head, this office has been under a disadvantage and the interests of the state languish for want of money. It seems to me that an appropriation made for the continuance of examination of lands in the interest of the state institutions' grant of swamp lands might well be made applicable to the selection of indemnity school lands conjointly.

The permanent university fund now amounts to $1,034,007.05, an increase of $33,621.32 since my last report, and will, in all probability, grow to amount to $1,500,000.

FILLED CHEESE.

Seizure of a Consignment of the Spurious Article.

Minneapolis, Dec. 29.—E. B. Williams, of the state dairy and food department, yesterday came to Minneapolis and seized 1,500 pounds of filled cheese. This spurious article had been shipped on a consignment from Chicago to C. E. Marvin, dealer in dairy products. Mr. Marvin being suspicious of the article, refused to place it on sale. The manufacturers and dealers in this vile stuff—so-called cheese—are active enemies of the pure dairy product, and are continually sending out on consignment their "filled cheese" into all parts of the West and Northwest. The state dairy commissioner says that dealers in pure dairy goods need be on their guard and watch with unflagging zeal these suspicious agents and guard well their customers, who invariably want the pure, well made, full cream cheese.

OPPOSED TO FOOT BALL.

Drastic Resolution Adopted by Indiana College Presidents.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29.—At a meeting of the college presidents of the state, just held in this city, it was decided to forbid intercollegiate foot ball. An order of this kind will at once go into effect. A long series of resolutions adopted by the college presidents prohibit games of athletic sports with athletic associations, or any semi-professional organizations, but exhibition games will be allowed.

LOCKED IN THE SAFE

Narrow Escape of a County Treasurer in California.

Santa Rosa, Cal., Dec. 30. — Santa Rosa had the biggest sensation in its history yesterday. The county treasury was robbed of nearly $8,000 and County Treasurer Stofen was left insensible in the vault to suffer death by the robbers who locked the vault door on him. The robbery occurred about 9 o'clock in the morning, but was not discovered until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. All this time County Treasurer Stofen lay on the floor of the vault gasping for breath, fearing every moment during conscious intervals, would be his last.

Had it not been for the timely arrival of his wife, the only person in town who knew the combination, he would have been dead. She had been at Cloverdale and on her return here about 4 o'clock, learned that the treasurer had not been home to dinner. The children said they had taken his dinner to him and left it in front of the office, but they could not get in. Mrs. Stofen, suspecting something wrong, rushed down to the office, which is in the southeast corner of the court house, and adjoining the sheriff's office. The door was locked, but with the aid of the janitor she opened the door. Between the front part of the office and the treasurer's front office is a wicket gate. This also was locked. Once inside Mrs. Stofen found her fears realized. On one desk was her husband's coat and hat. On the floor in confusion were money trays in which the treasurer carried money from the vault, which is in a rear office, to his desk in the room. About that time a faint knocking was heard inside the vault. Mrs. Stofen cried out that her husband was in the vault, and that she could save him if she could remember the combination. The first time she tried, she failed, owing to her great excitement. Next time, realizing that her husband's life depended upon her coolness, she was successful, and the big iron doors of the vault slowly swung open. Treasurer Stofen was found on the floor of the vault unconscious. The safe door was open and most of the money removed.

Treasurer Stofen, as soon as he revived, said he opened up the office as usual about 9 o'clock. As he was carrying one of the trays with money from the vault a tall man in stocking feet stepped into the door of the vault, and with uplifted dagger in his right hand told him to drop the trays, which he did. As he stooped over to lay the trays down the robber struck him a powerful blow on the back of the head which rendered him unconscious, for how long he could not tell. He says the man was tall and wore chin whiskers, and must have gained admittance to the office during the night and waited for him to open the safe.

Officers are scouring the country for the robber, but no trace of him has been found.

FORTY-ONE ARE DEAD

Holocaust at a Christmas Entertainment.

Klamath Falls, Or., Dec. 30.—News has just reached here that a most horrible holocaust at Silver Lake, Lake county, Or., on Christmas eve, in which forty-one persons were burned to death and sixteen badly injured, five of whom will die. A large crowd had assembled in Chrisman Bros.' hall to attend a Christmas tree festival. While the festivities were at their height, some one climbed on a bench from which point he expected to get a better view of what was going on. In doing so his head struck a lamp hanging from the ceiling, overturning it. The oil immediately caught fire and everything in the room being dry, the room soon became a mass of flames. Some one shouted: "Shut the door and keep quiet; it can be put out." By this time the confusion was so great that people began scrambling in a wild endeavor to reach the door. Women and children were trampled under foot, and as there was only one exit to the hall and the fire being between the majority of the crowd and the door, many rushed headlong into the flames. The dead are:

Mrs. John Buick and two children; Mrs. Owsley and two children, J. J. Buick and daughter, Mrs. Snelling, Mrs. Howard and two children, W. O. Heart and wife, Mrs. Gosbow, Frank West and wife and two children, Ed Bowen, Miss McCauley, T. J. Labrie andchild, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. U. B. Abshir, Frank Horning, Mrs. Payne, Mrs. Nettie Williams and child, W. Clay Martin and wife, Robert Small, Mrs. Ella Ward and child, Frank Ross and mother and sister, a child of Roy Ward's, Ira Hamilton, Mrs. Gus Schroeder and child.

The five injured and likely to die are Mrs. T. H. Labrie, Robert Snelling and sister, Edward Payne and son.

The building, a two-story frame structure, contained Chrisman Bros.' store. On the second story was the hall, which was rented for gatherings of all kinds.

Silver Lake is a small village in Lake county, Or., of about 100 inhabitants, and it is 150 miles from the nearest telegraph office.

Lexowing in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—The civic federation has decided to appeal to the Illinois legislature to send a committee to Chicago empowered to probe into every public office about which there is any suspicion of rottenness. This decision is announced by the federation committee on political action, which has decided not to participate in an investigation by a committee of the city council.

On Historic Ground.

Washington, Dec. 30. — An opera house to cost $250,000 is to be erected on the site of the Blaine residence on Lafayette Square, in which the statesman died, a permit for the building having been issued to-day. The Blaine property has been leased for 100 years to Wood & Lavelle, Chicago. The historic mansion now occupying the ground will be torn down, the work beginning about Jan. 1. The new building will be constructed so as to allow a roof garden, the first of the kind in Washington.

TWO STICKS HANGS

CHA-NAPA-UHAH IS IN THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND.

The Leader of the Gang of Indians Who Killed Four Cowboys Goes to His Death Singing and Declaring His Innocence.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 30.—The Indian Two Sticks, was hanged, protesting his innocense until the last. Thursday afternoon he was converted and baptized by Father Digman, the priest from Pine Ridge. He was restless all night, not sleeping at all, and arose at 4 o'clock. After the arrival of the priest he became quieter. At 10:05 the death warrant was read to him by United States Marshal Peemiller, after which he made a speech in which he said: "I am innocent. My heart is not bad and never has been. There are lots of good white men around here and there is nothing the matter with me. God is good, and if a man tell a lie he drops dead that minute. I can hold up both hands and say I was not at the cabin that night. The four boys did the killing. I am not afraid to die and am ready to die. God made all people and put the same heart and the same blood in all of them. When the reservation is thickly settled and big towns are scattered on it, the descendants of my people will say, 'Two Sticks is not here, he was hanged.'"

He made an effort while being pinioned to hang himself, but was prevented. At 10:27 he sang a song of praise and when he mounted the scaffold looked around at the people and said: "Lela washta, you bet. All things are good." On the scaffold he sang the death song. At 10:28 the drop fell and at 10:53 he was pronounced dead and was cut down.

Two Sticks' Crime.

The crime for which Cha-Nopa-Uhah (Two Sticks) suffered the death penalty was committed Feb. 2, 18[illegible]. On the evening of that day R. Royce and E. M. Bennet were entertaining in their dug-out on Trail creek two other cowboys named J. Bacon and William Kelley, who had arrived during the afternoon in search of a stray bunch of cattle that had escaped from a herd further down the river. It being too late to return that day the visitors were invited to spend the day in the dug-out. Royce and Bennet, after rounding up their cattle and attending to their chores about the ranch, prepared the evening meal of hardtack and coffee. Supper over the boys lit up their pipes, swapped stories and took life easy around the log fire. About 9:20 Two Sticks and two sons, Kill-the-Two and Fight-With, accompanied by White-Faced-Horse and First Eagle, came to the dug-out, rapped on the door and were admitted. They grunted out the usual "How," and arrayed themselves around the stove. The cowboys furnished them with tobacco, with which they made cigarettes, and treated them hospitably. When the Indians got through smoking they turned to leave the place. Suddenly they wheeled about and began firing at the cowboys with their Winchester rifles, killing all four of them instantly. They then went to the stable, took the horses, wagons, harness and other portable property which they found lying about the ranch. They then returned to their camp, which was located two miles down the river. The next morning they took down their tepees and moved fifteen miles up the Great Sioux reservation. The bodies of the murdered young men were not discovered until the next afternoon, when an Indian policeman happened along, noticed the deserted appearance of things about the place, looked into the dugout and discovered the corpses strewn about the floor.

He immediately started for Pine Ridge agency and notified the agent who sent out a squad of Indian police to look for the guilty parties. They came across Two Sticks and his party, and finding the dead men's property in their possession proceeded to arrest them, when the Indians resisted and a pitched battle ensued which resulted in the killing of First Eagle. White Face, Kill-the-Two and Fight-With were sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Two Sticks is the second Indian judicially executed in the Dakotas, the other one being Brave Bear, who was hanged at Yankton twelve years ago.

Desperado Captured.

Muskogee, Ind. T., Dec. 30.—Mose Jamison, a Creek Indian, was to-day furnished with a commission as United States deputy marshal and a writ for the arrest of Bus Luckey, a member of the Cook gang. After summoning two men as a posse they surrounded a house where Luckey was. Luckey surrendered and was lodged in jail. He will be taken to Fort Smith to-morrow.

Murder and Suicide.

Monroeville, Ala., Dec. 30—News has been received here that at Hunter's Hill, Monroe county, Ross Matts in a fit of jealous rage, shot and killed his fiancee, Lizzie Smith, and committed suicide. They were to have been married on New Years. Some trifling attention received by the girl from another suitor precipitated the tragedy.

Gone Out of Business.

Kansas City, Dec. 30. — The lottery firm of E. C. Fox & Co., with offices in all the principal cities in the United States, has gone out of business. Many complaints of nonpayment of premiums made by outside agencies led to an agitation that has now ended in the firm going out of business.

Visit the Pen.

Stillwater, Minn., Dec. 30.—Nearly sixty superintendents and teachers attending the meeting of the Minnesota Educational society in St. Paul, visited the prison yesterday. They made a thorough tour for the purpose of acquainting themselves with the manner of conducting it. Dinner was served.

Reports of the most exaggerated character about the wonderful value of wheat as hog feed continues to circulate, and to mislead, too. It is possible of course for wheat to be so low and hogs so high of price that it may be more profitable to feed it than to sell it by the bushel, but it does not follow that it is a cheap or desirable hog feed as the reports of its results as a pork producer seem to indicate. When the relative average cost of producing wheat, corn, barley or millet is considered, wheat becomes the most costly hog feed, and therefore it should not be grown for that purpose, nor should the farmer regard it a profitable crop to grow because it is worth more just now as hog feed than as human food. Farm Stock and Home.

In about two weeks after the gold "reserve" in the national treasury was replenished up to several millions above the required $100,000,000 by selling $50,000,000 of government gold bonds it was down again to several millions below that requirement, was down, in fact, to the point that precipitated the panic in the spring of 1893, and is still going down at a rapid rate. There is no occasion to precipitate a panic now for there is no silver coinage to knock on, or any other banker's purpose to serve, and so the gold reserve may disappear until it gets down to a point that the authorities will call "dangerous", and then more bonds will be issued to buy more gold to be rapidly filtered out of the treasury in readiness to buy more bonds, and so on in a never-ending cycle! How slick it is, to be sure!

In the United States circuit court this forenoon suit was begun by P. and J. Meehan against Roy W. Jones to settle the title to the disputed lands at Thief River Falls and to obtain an injunction preventing Jones from attemping to enter upon it. This afternoon Judge Nelson made an order restraining Jones and his employes from molesting the Meehans, pending a hearing in court. John C. Judge, attorney for the Meehan was seen this afternoon in regard to the significance of the action and said:

"The suit is not brought in apprehension of an adverse decision by the secretary of the interior, but because no decision of his, whether in favor of Mr. Jones or the Messrs. Meehans would have prevented the controversy from being taken to the courts, ultimately We deemed it prudent at once to place the whole matter under the control of the court, so that order may be preserved and a breach of the peace prevented."

The Swedish Luthiran.

Festival in the Lutheran Church, last Friday evening was a very well-attended and a highly successful affair. The program which chiefly consisted of music was exceptionally well rendered and was enjoyed by all. The Black church is deserving of commendation as their singing was a fitting tribute to Rev. Moody who is respected and esteemed not only by his own congregation but by the entire community.

The most important question in the state today is "who will be our next U. S. Senator." Candidates are coming forward every day and a large list is already in the field. It seems to be anything to beat Washburn. Is a man up a tree it looks as if the next senator would either be Washburn or a man who has stated that he would not be a candidate—Knute Nelson. It is significant that all of Nelson's friends are against Washburn and he is being mentioned as a dark horse in case of a deadlock. To the people it matters little as either man would not be their representative but the servant of some corporation.

WANT A MILL.

St. Hilaire is Now a Candidate for Saw and Flour mill.

While the other towns in the country adjoining the pine woods are agitating the matter of new saw mill enterprises St. Hilaire has not been idle, and work looking to the location of mills there has been quietly going on. The townsite belongs jointly to Harry Ives, and President H[illegible], of the Great Northern, and the former has made what seems to be a very fair proposition looking to the erection of a dam across the river at that point. The offer was his share of the townsite and the shore rights, or he would accept the dam himself. The offer is a give or take affair and looks very fair, indeed. With suitable and sufficient power there would be but little trouble of locating both a saw mill and a flour mill at St. Hilaire. The pine timber is in easy reach, and a mill located there would have sufficient business to operate many years.—Crookston Times.

Washington Dec. 23.—Secretary Smith today rendered a final decision in the celebrated Mosseding lease for a millsite on Thief River, in Minnesota. He states that after the full investigation he is satisfied that the interior department has authority to approve the lease of this property. This is a great victory for Attorney Kellogg, of Minneapolis, who represents Ray W. Jones lease of this millsite.

The case has been pending in the department for six months. It has created more than ordinary interest in Minnesota, Washington and Milwaukee during this time, Milwaukee Lumbermen here have been fighting the Jones claims, both and the Minneapolis people have scored an unusual in such cases in the interior department. Attorney Kellogg who has managed the fight for Jones' interests since last February, will leave for Minneapolis tomorrow.

I hope all your [illegible] Populist Party are as [illegible] [illegible] credit [illegible] [illegible] vs. 6,266 in your column, but I have personally seen returns that aggregated 2,720 sent to headquarters by [illegible] and town clerks, with some still unreported. These, be it understood, were for the gubernatorial candidate. The total vote reckoned by congressional candidates would be much larger. For instance, my own vote was about double that of the candidate for governor in my district, the Eighth.

The People's Party cannot die. It is the only sworn foe to corporate fraud, the only sworn friend of government ownership of the means of living, without which one half our people will be crushed under the feet of the other half. I expect to see the day when the New York World, even now the most fearless of the great political journals, will openly cast its influence on the side of Populism. The issue is constantly narrowing. It will soon be "Plutocracy or Democracy," and you will have to swing to the right end of the line.

nation, to transfer control over the volume of the paper currency from the people's representatives to the money power of Europe and America, and at the same time to divide western and southern voters with the promise of local bank currency inflation.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

By no means its least merit is that it contemplates the retirement of the government from the national banking business, and its confinement to the duty of seeing that all currency issued under its authority is sufficiently secured to prevent its depreciation or loss in the hands of the people.—Detroit Free Press.

It is believed that this plan if carefully worked out in all of its details by congress will provide a safe, satisfactory and elastic currency. The recommendations of the president and the secretary of the treasury are worthy of careful consideration, and they unquestionably are founded in wisdom.—Buffalo Enquirer.

There is little doubt that the bankers are trying to use the depleted condition of the treasury to obtain legislation in regard to the currency which will be more favorable to them. That they control Cleveland absolutely, and through him the secretary of the treasury, is beyond question.—San Francisco Chronicle.

We fail to see how such a scheme as this would take the government out of the banking business. The treasury would continue to provide all the smaller circulating notes, and the banks would provide the larger ones. The bulk of the annoying legal tenders would remain to be used in drawing gold out of the treasury every time it was needed for hoarding or export, as at present. If all the national banks as they exist today should take out the maximum circulation allowed under this scheme, the amount would be $310,660,000 as against existing circulation of $207,000,000, and the proposed deposit of 30 per cent in legal tenders would take up little more than $90,000,000 of them, leaving $150,000,000 outstanding to play the mischief, as at present, with the treasury's gold. Even the small amount taken up for deposit would not be canceled. This plan, then, neither divorces the government from banking nor retires the legal tenders.—New York Herald.

The scheme meets some of the more serious objections that have been urged against the Baltimore plan. Besides it seems well adapted to obviate the continually recurring necessity for issuing bonds to maintain the public credit.—Louisville Courier Journal.

The second point to be considered very carefully is the abolition of the requirement of a reserve against deposits. That has a double bearing. On the one hand it is to be questioned whether such a change would be safe for national banks remote from the financial centers. In New York and perhaps in all cities where a well developed clearing house system exists, it may safely be assumed that the vigilant supervision due to common interest will prevent abuse. But will it do so in the case of outlying banks, which, though in point of capital and deposits far less important, are, in point of number and of possible influence on the general prosperity of business very important indeed? On the other hand, is it prudent or just to abandon in federal legislation all care for the depositor? It may be said, and with some truth, that depositors can, if they will, protect themselves [illegible] the resources and management of their banks and act on that knowledge. But here again it is in the smaller [illegible] banks [illegible] when depositors have little or no chance for specific knowledge, and no great choice, if any, as to the banks with which they will do business. We are confident that this radical change in the law will meet with decided opposition.—New York Times.

The struggle is evidently to be between two great powers—on the one hand, the government issuing its own paper notes and having the benefit of the paper circulation as a loan from the people without interest, and, on the other hand, the great lending power, struggling for the transfer into its hands of the government's power to create money, and banking on its own promise to pay dollars indorsed by the government.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The treasury should not be dependent upon Wall street or the banks for its gold. The people should support their government in peace as in war.—New York World.

This country has no absorbing anxiety to confer upon banks or lenders additional benefits. If it ever has to choose between the Populist notion that currency should be issued by government alone and the Democratic wildcat theory that issues against "general assets" should be permitted everywhere, it is likely to choose government money. A wise reconstruction of the banking system will not tend to strengthen that vicious tendency by increasing the risk of [illegible] currency and rendering it more costly to the people and more profitable to bankers.—New York Tribune.

The St. Paul Globe says: "Republicans and Democrats are at opposite poles of principle as to the tariff and other material uses of the government, but they are in substantial agreement as to the currency and the principles on which it should be based. Partisanry will be misplaced if it intrude itself in this matter."

There doesn't appear to be a great deal of "substantial agreement" among the editors, Republicans and Democrats, if the foregoing editorial comments are good evidence. Now let us see how prominent individuals who are not editors substantially agree:

The recommendations which Mr. Carlisle makes seconding those of Mr. Cleveland contain much merit. The Baltimore plan, upon which their recommendations are founded, is a very good one—also of the best so far proposed. It came from practical bankers, who knew thoroughly the subjects which they were considering, and who were not influenced by any political considerations.—Henry Clews.

Secretary Carlisle has undertaken a difficult task. His report indicates close study of the subject by the president and himself. I cannot approve of the plan, because I fail to see in it a promise of substantial relief. The practical disadvantages of the plan, notably in its reserve and redemption features, detract so much from its good features that I cannot perceive in it any real improvement over the present system.—W. W. Sherman, President Bank of Commerce, New York.

The plan proposed will be acceptable to the banks as a measure of relief. A permanent solution of currency problems would be to take the government at once and altogether out of banking and retire outstanding issues by gold bonds, substituting a well secured, elastic currency.—I. N. Seligman, Banker.

The secretary's plan, while nominally combining the national system and the state system, will in effect be a revival of state bank notes and the strangling of national bank notes, because the state bank notes are to be exempt from the national supervision and taxation imposed on national bank notes. This makes the Carlisle plan one, ultimately to revive state bank circulating notes and strangle the national bank circulation. I have only to say that this prominent feature of the plan is unwise and unsound and can never be approved by the majority of our people, who want one uniform national bank note system under national authority and supervision, and not 44 different state systems under the supervision of as many different states.—Congressman Dingley of Maine.

The plan has undoubted merits, and it is ably presented, but I doubt the practicability of some of its features. The secretary's object is obviously to relieve the treasury of the drain upon it. That purpose is laudable, but it must be worked out with great care. The provision for state bank circulation is not set forth clearly enough. If the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller of the currency must be satisfied of the condition of these banks, a process would seem to be involved which would practically turn these banks into national banks. This and other features of the plan need elucidation.—A. B. Hepburn, President Third National Bank, New York.

It seems to me that the plan would not work as well as Secretary Carlisle thinks, because it does not provide for safe operation in detail. Besides failing to be satisfactory in its redemption and reserve features I think that the release of government bonds held in the treasury to secure national bank circulation might work embarrassment, especially if they were to be thrown on the market in large quantities.—Harvey E. Fisk, Banker.

There are 44 states in the Union and 44 kinds or possible kinds of state bank legislation. If the present prohibitive tax of 10 per cent on state bank note issues be repealed, as Secretary Carlisle's scheme for currency reform provides, there would be 44 kinds of currency in addition to those already existing.—George Rutledge Gibson.

I doubt the necessity of a 30 per cent guarantee fund. Of course it will be readily understood that the object is to "tie up" legal tender notes. In this respect it is commendable, but if the banks are to keep one-quarter of their deposits in cash and 30 per cent of their circulation in the treasury, in addition to the safety fund, it certainly will "tie up" a large amount of money, and I am one of those who believe that there cannot be too much good money in circulation. It seems to me that it would be better to authorize the secretary to retire the legal tender notes by the sale of the government's credit, or by surplus revenues, as new circulation is taken out by the banks, and to do away with the provision of a guarantee fund. I believe that under proper safeguards notes might be issued by state banks, but in practice it will be very difficult to enforce such a provision. Just as state banks can under existing law become national banks it seems to me it would be better to confine the issue to banks holding a national charter. I think that the provision that no bank note should be of less value than $10 is wise and will provide a vacuum in this growing country for the use of all our silver currency and eventually the utilization by coinage of the silver bullion which we now hold in the treasury.—E. O. Leech, Ex-Director of the Mint.

The present national bank circulation is really a government issue, for the banks must tie up with the government more money than they can put out. It would be a great benefit to business if the banks could expand and contract the currency as business may need it.—Cashier Sherman, Gallatin National Bank.

The so called Baltimore plan of finance is not likely to be accepted by this or any future congress. No financial plan exclusively dictated by bankers' associations is calculated to bring the needed financial relief to the country. No relief can come from any plan that does not first broaden the basis of the money of final redemption. What is needed is bimetallism. The way to secure this, in my judgment, is by an international agreement between Germany, France, Italy and the United States, leaving England out of the question altogether. The latter country will never agree to bimetallism until forced to do so by sheer necessity. An agreement between the countries I have mentioned, excluding England, would give a new lease of prosperity to the countries to the agreement and cause an emigration of people from England which would soon bring that gold basis country to her knees. The Populist party is the outgrowth of the financial tyranny which naturally accompanies the adoption of the narrow gold standard. If the great nations of the earth are to continue this policy, then we will have more Populism.—United States Senator Hansbrough.

The Discredited Oracles.

Final returns show that the Wisconsin Populists cast 25,330 votes this year. In 1892 they cast 9,909. Figures of this sort rather shake one's confidence in the oracle who proclaims loudly that Populism is dead.—Chicago Times.

Populists Will Sweep the South.

Congressman Elect Howard of Alabama delivered an address to a large audience in Faneuil hall, Boston, last week, in which he predicted that the People's Party will carry every southern state in 1896.

A Model Young Man.

A good old gentleman who was very strongly opposed to tobacco chewing and to liquor drinking, met a lady friend in a car recently, and their conversation was as follows:

"Have you any children, madam?"

"Yes, sir; a son."

"Ah, indeed! Does he smoke?"

"No, sir; he has never as much as touched a cigarette."

"So much the better, madam; the use of tobacco is a poisonous habit. Does he frequent the clubs?"

"He has never put his foot in one."

"Allow me to congratulate you. Does he come home late?"

"Never. He goes to bed directly after dinner."

"A model young man, madam, a model young man. How old is he?"

"Two months."—Exchange.

A Blind Rat's Guide.

A touching story of a rat comes from Richmansworth. The hero is old and blind. He lives with his family on a sewage farm, and since he lost the use of his eyes he has taken his daily airing with two of the younger members of his family. To guard against misadventures the three go abreast with a piece of stick in their mouths which the youngsters use as a tiller to steer the blind gentleman with. Thus fortified, the afflicted rat is enabled to take his walks over his native sewage farm, crossing planks and eluding dogs, as in the days of his youth and vigor.—London Chronicle.

Red-Haired Girls.

History shows that the red-headed woman is fascinating. They say that the locks of Helen of Troy were of that color; also those of Mary Queen of Scots. There was, not so long ago, a time when this tinge was mocked at by the vulgar. Happily this period is past. Without making odious comparisons with her darker or golden-haired sisters, we confess to being admirers of the red-headed girls, whom the impressionist painter have taken as their halo-crowned ideal. Therefore we hold that whereas the number has increased and is increasing, it ought not to be diminished.

Centiped Killed by Ants.

"Did you ever see a battle between the venomous centiped and red ants?" asked Charles Clarke, former a resident of Arizona. The gentleman to whom he addressed the question replied that he had not, and Mr. Clarke continued: "Several years ago when I was up in the Santa Cruz Valley, some twenty miles from Tucson, passing a few days with an old friend of mine, At noon one day a Mexican ranch hand brought up to the cabin a centiped fully 8 inches long. The Mexican placed the centiped near an ant hole, and in a second the ants were hurrying to the centiped.

They formed in a body a few inches from the insect. All at once the army marched on him, and the struggle was on. Vainly the centiped tried to free itself of the ants, but its efforts were unavailing, and in three minutes from the time of the first attack the centiped was dead. The ants cut off the hundreds of legs and carried them down their hole. In one hour by my watch after the grand attack was made not a piece of centiped remained. I am told these ants serve a tarantula in the same way."—Tucson Star.

Wanted an Exchange of Confidence.

In an account of the campaign in Georgia, Gen. J. S. Fullerton tells this story: "The strain was constant day after day. There was no straggling. Every man on both sides was required to be in his place. It was while moving back from one position to another that the incident occurred of which some of you have heard. Hardee—you know what a disciplinarian he was—came upon a great, gaunt fellow in butternut squatted down in a fence corner, puffing away at a pipe. 'Why aren't you in your command?' thundered Hardee; 'who are you?' The loose-jointed soldier straightened up slowly, and, removing his pipe from his mouth, said: 'I am the chaplain of the Sixth Arkansas. Now, who the —— are you?'"—New York Tribune.

His Little Joke.

The train was just ready to start for Boston, when a detective from Supt. Byrnes's office got on one of the smoking cars and said: "Be careful gentlemen, I believe there are a couple of sharpers inside!"

"Good gracious!" exclaimed a very stylish-looking gentleman, preparing to get out; "I'd no idea there were such people here. I'm sure I shall get out."

Another who was sitting in a seat opposite, exclaimed:

"I have a large sum of money with me, and I have no wish to lose it." Whereupon he, too, got out.

"All right, gentlemen," the officer calmly remarked, "they are both gone now.—Harlem Life.

A WRONG PASSENGER.

"Gerard St. Albans is coming here," said Isabel Marsh, a bright smile lighting up the soft, languid beauty of her face.

"Col. St. Albans!" cried Annie Grey, the young and lovely cousin of Miss Marsh. "How delightful! It is five years since he went away to that horrid India, and I was just fifteen then—a mere school girl—but still I remember that he was one of the handsomest men in the city! How pleased his sister Helen will be!

"Certainly. This note is from her, saying that they—herself and Col. St. Albans—will do themselves the pleasure of calling here day after to-morrow."

"Splendid! I'll set my cap at once!" cried the gushing Annie.

"Don't be absurd, cousin! Mr. St. Albans is a traveled man, and quite familiar with pretty faces by this time. Besides, he is an artist of no mean ability, and his character for gallantry in action stood very high when he was in the army."

"Heigho! well, I only wish there had been a hero in our family! But what makes you look so grave, Aunt Letitia?" addressing a serene-faced, brown-haired woman of past thirty, who sat by the window engaged in sewing.

Miss Letitia lifted her sad brown eyes, soft and beautiful still, and glanced at her young relatives from beneath the long black lashes.

"Oh, let Aunt Letitia alone," cried Isabel, half pettishly; "she is sewing and dreaming dreams, as usual. And she is too old to care anything about brave and handsome gentlemen like Col. St. Albans."

Letitia's pale cheek blushed rose-red; her eye gleamed with fire; for the moment she was far more beautiful than either of the girls beside her. She made no reply, but directly gathered up her work and left the room.

Annie gazed after her with wide eyes.

"Good gracious! what have I said? She looked like a young girl who has just met her lover. Did you see that red on her cheek, Isa? Brighter than the rouge in my toilet case. Letitia must have been handsome once."

"She was the beauty of the city. She is elegant now, though everybody knows she is passee. There was some gossip about her and this Col. St. Albans once, you know. She saved him from drowning on one occasion, and he was the prince of devotion for a week; then, manlike, he forgot his gratitude, and sailed for India. Men are very consistent creatures, ma belle."

Meanwhile, Letitia Marsh, who was the sister of Isabel's father, went to her chamber, and laid her work carefully away in its neat basket, for she was an old maid, and old maids, you know, always do everything with care, if we may credit tradition.

She unlocked a drawer, and took from thence a small escritoire, which opened to the touch of a key which she always wore attached to a slender gold chain around her neck.

The lifted lid displayed a few letters, a bunch of faded flowers tied with a blue ribbon, and a miniature case of dead gold. The case she did not open—perhaps even yet she could not trust herself to look upon the face hidden there, but she pressed the faded flowers to her lips, and held the yellow letters a moment against her heart. Then, with nervous haste, she flung all those souvenirs of a dead day back into their receptacle, and snapped the casket together rudely, hiding the key again in her bosom.

"Yes," she said, sadly, "I am too old. The girls were right. And I am so very slow to learn the lesson of growing away from youth. Too old for love, but not too old for suffering. Heaven help me!"

She rose and looked in the glass. A stranger would have pronounced the face reflected there fair, and sweet, and youthful still, but Letitia Marsh—stern critic upon herself—saw only the lines of care on the white brow, and the transient threads of silver in the dark, bright hair.

"Yes," she said, wearily, turning away, "I am too old. And yet, despite it all, I love him still. Oh! Gerard! why did you win my heart and then cast it back to me desolate and unblessed? Oh, heaven! why are women created with these intense longings for love, love, always love—and then suffered to drag out a dull existence, missing always all that can make existence life?"

She paced the floor softly, her eyes weeping tears bitter than those which come to younger eyes, her woman's heart wrung with a pain fiercer than anything which comes to her sex in careless girlhood.

But when the storm was over, and that was soon, for Letitia Marsh's was a well disciplined nature, she went down to the parlors just as serene, and quiet, and self-possessed as usual.

And when, three days later, Col. St. Albans called, and was devoted to the young ladies, and coldly courteous to herself, Miss Letitia met him with stately grace, and no feature of her face betrayed that any old, sweet memory of him lay hidden in her heart.

Nobody minded her, and after the first polite greetings St. Albans did not address her. She was very glad of this, inasmuch as it saved her from the necessity of talking, and she knew that there would be a suspicious tremble in her voice, and, besides, she wanted to soothe her sore heart with watching St. Albans.

He had grown very handsome in those five years of absence, but she saw there were wrinkles about his eyes, and white hairs among the brown on his temples. Time had not left him untouched.

This first visit was like all the others, so far as Letitia was concerned. He was courteous to her but never friendly, and some fine self-consciousness of her weakness for him made Letitia avoid him.

He visited at Mr. Marsh's frequently, and Miss Isabel Marsh was very generally supposed to be the attraction. Indeed, the young lady herself was very sanguine of her success in winning the gallant colonel, and on one occasion she was gushingly girlish enough to assure Aunt Letitia that when she was mistress of the new house which the colonel was building at Salisbury Point, nothing could afford her more pleasure than to give her "dearest aunt" a home there.

When the snow fell and there was sleighing, Col. St. Albans invited a party of his friends to the new house for a sort of "house-warming" supper, Letitia among the rest. At first she thought she would not go, but Isabel declared it would look "odd," and people would think that she had not forgotten that "old romantic episode;" and Miss Letitia decided not to give "people" any chance to talk.

Isabel went with the colonel in his own sleigh, and was as happy as a queen, and all the other girls were ready to die of envy. The sleighing was one of the best, for a new snow had fallen, and the weather had not yet cleared. The wind was blowing furiously, and the air was thick with flying snow. Somehow in the darkness the colonel's horse managed to upset the sleigh, and in consequence a half-dozen more sleighs shared the same fate, and half the merry party were mixed up together in inextricable confusion.

The re-embarkation was of course hurried, particularly on the part of Col. St. Albans, who had a restive horse, and one quite indisposed to wait patiently for passengers in such a furious wind as was then raging.

They had gone fully a mile, the colonel holding the reins with both hands, when he heard a low and tremulous voice say:

"Pardon me, Col. St. Albans, but I fear that you have taken the wrong passenger."

"Good heaven!" he cried, in strong agitation, "Letitia!"

"Yes. Do not be offended; I was not to blame for it. The snow blinded me, and I thought surely you were Brother John."

Though the robes had been wrapped around her, St. Albans was sure he felt her tremble. He drew closer to her side, moved by some uncontrollable impulse to speak what was in his heart.

"Letitia," he said hoarsely, "once we were not strangers!"

"But that time is past."

"Yes," he said, bitterly. "Your caprice ruined my happiness, and made me a dissatisfied and useless wanderer."

"My caprice!" she said, slowly. "I do not understand."

Letitia was growing dizzy, and the world of snow spun round and round before her bewildered eyes. He turned upon her sharply.

"You do not understand? Then let me explain. Why did you not answer my letter? the letter in which I told you I loved you—in which I asked you to be my wife? I was a coward, Letitia! Love made me distrust myself, else I surely should have spoken to you instead of writing. But I wrote, and asked you to answer me as you felt, and I told you if you rejected me, you need only keep silent. And you kept silent."

"That letter never reached me," she said, faintly.

"It did not? But if it had? if it had?"

His hand sought hers, all unmindful of his horse; and the animal took the liberty of deciding his own course, and went off in the very opposite direction from the right one, but St. Albans did not observe it. He was too intent on Letitia to observe his horse.

"I loved you, Gerard," she said, softly. "My answer could have been nothing but that."

"My darling! change that form of expression," he cried eagerly. "Say 'I love you, Gerard'"

And she said it, with his lips holding hers so close they dared not make a mistake in the words he dictated. But she added immediately:

"It is too late to dream these dreams, Gerard. I am too old!"

He laughed gleefully.

"Just four years younger than your Methusaleh of a lover!" said he, pressing her closer to his heart. "It's all right now, dearest, and I thank heaven for sending me the wrong passenger, for she is the right one, after all."

Of course the girls were all greatly surprised at the turn affairs had taken, and were ready to exclaim against the impudence of that "awfully designing old maid;" but Letitia was so happy she could afford to be talked about, and love, the great rejuvenator, made her young again.

TOO TOUGH FOR THEM.

How a Hungarian Statesman Got Rid of Visitors.

A Hungarian paper says that Francis Deak, the Hungarian statesman used to get rid of troublesome visitors by telling them the following story: "Once, when in Paris, Napoleon I, paid a visit to a hospital for old soldiers. Here he perceived among the rest a man who had lost one of his arms, and he entered into conversation with him. "Where did you lose your arm?" asked the emperor. 'At Austerlitz, your Majesty.' 'Then, no doubt you curse the emperor and your country every time you look at your mutilated limb?' 'No, indeed,' protested the veteran, 'for the emperor and my native land I would readily sacrifice my other arm if needs be.' 'I can hardly believe that,' the emperor quietly remarked, and passed on.

"But the soldier, anxious to prove that he was in earnest, immediately drew a sabre from its sheath and lopped off the other arm." Here Deak would pause and fix a penetrating look on his visitor. "Well, what have you got to say of such a man and such an action?" "A most sublime act of self-sacrifice! A truly noble character!" This was the style of reply invariably given. "But the story has one flaw," he would gravely add. "What is that pray?" "It is simply impracticable. How could a one armed man contrive to cut off his only remaining arm?"—New York Tribune.

Judges of Terrapin

"I doubt if there are a hundred first-class judges of terrapin in the United States," remarked a well-known dealer in game and fish last Saturday, as he called attention to a fresh lot of the aristocratic crustaceans. "I know this because the clubs, restaurants and hotels use vast quantities of Texas, Florida and other common terrapin and serve them as bona-fide diamond-backs. The finest diamond-backs range in price from $40 to $100 a dozen, and one terrapin when properly cooked, will make about three plates, so that the cost of a dish of stewed terrapin must necessarily range from $1 to $3.50 and whatever is charged above these figures represents the profit. Many a man who smacks his lips over the terrapin he gets in a restaurant doesn't know the difference between that and a mud turtle, which latter, I dare say, he often gets. Terrapin is one of the articles in our business which is an all-the-year-round luxury, and has no seasons."—Philadelphia Record.

The Money-Making Nose.

Said a business man of wide experience and observation the other day: "Have you ever observed the money-making nose? It is a strong, well-formed nose, invariably curved somewhat like a beak. That crook in the nose is the unfailing sign of money-making ability. I have observed it for years. If you doubt look about you and you will find that every wealthy man who has made his own money out of nothing has more or less such a nose. A very fine example of the money-making nose is that which adorns the face of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who, though born with a golden spoon in his mouth, has shown very marked ability in the increase of his fortune. Most of our bankers and railroad presidents have similar noses."—New York Herald

A NOBLE FIGHT.

AN EMINENT SOUTHERN LAWYER'S LONG CONFLICT WITH DISEASE.

Twenty-five Years of Prosperity, Adversity, and Suffering.—The Great Victory Won by Science Over a Stubborn Disease.

[From the Atlanta, Ga., Constitution.]

Foremost among the best known lawyers and farmers of North Carolina stands Col. Isaac A. Sugg of Greenville. Mr. Sugg has resided in Greenville twenty-two years. While nearly every one in Pitt county knows Mr. S.'s history, perhaps all do not know of his return to business again after an illness of sixteen years. Noyman has gone through more than he and lived. It was a case of the entire breaking down of the nervous system, attended by excruciating, agonizing, unendurable pain. Opiates and stimulants only quieted temporarily, and all treatments failed him. Only his love of family and friends prevented suicide. He told a reporter the following interesting story:

"I kept at my work as long as I could, but nature gave way at last, and I succumbed to the inevitable. My entire nervous system had been shattered by the stimulants and opiates I had taken, my blood had actually turned to water, my weight had dropped from 173 pounds to 123 and it seemed to everybody that the end was in sight. Why, I could not bear the gentle hand of my wife to bathe my limbs with tepid water. I was simply living from hour to hour. I had made my will, settled my business and waited for the last strand of life to snap.

"It was at this time that a somewhat similar case as my own was brought to my notice. This man had suffered very much as I had, his life had been despaired of as mine had, and yet he had been cured. Think what that little word meant to me—CURED. The report stated that the work had been accomplished by a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I investigated the report thoroughly and found that it was true in detail. Then I procured some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and began taking them and began to get better. I began to sleep like a healthful child, sound, calm and peaceful. My appetite came back and my nerves were soothed and restored to their normal condition and I felt like a new man. But the greatest blessing was the mental improvement. I began to read and digest, to formulate new plans, to take an interest in my law practice, which began to come back to me as soon as my clients realized that I was again myself. After a lapse of ten years I ride horseback every day without fatigue.

"That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life is beyond doubt, and I am spreading their praises far and wide."

Inquiry about the town of Greenville substantiated the above facts of Col. Sugg's case, and that many others are being benefited by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A Faithful Veteran Fire Horse.

The intelligence of the horse under systematic and careful training was strikingly illustrated at the house of Pioneer Hose Company, No. 1, on Monday. Having an extra horse which was idle, and desiring to gradually train him for fire purposes, he was substituted for the veteran fire horse, Samuel.

For five years Samuel has been called out by an alarm drill each day at noon by Driver Albert Glatz, but on this day was taken out and securely tied in the stable about 100 feet in the rear of the engine house, where he seemed to feel lonely, dispirited and forgotten.

When the usual noon alarm was turned in and the firemen were instructing the new horse, a struggle was heard outside, and through the rear doors, the middle room and his stall, thundered Sam with broken halter. Straight to his place he ran, pushed the new horse out of the way and placed himself beneath the harness.

He seemed to resent the intrusion of the late arrival, and anxious to do his duty. It is the intention to break the new horse in and use him while resting the others. Neither horse in the department has been relieved from duty one hour in over five years.—San Bernardino (Cal.) Sun.

A Traveled St. Bernard.

A St. Bernard dog whose acquaintance any one might be proud to make has lately given evidence of unusual canine intelligence. Once or twice he has accompanied his master to Newtonville, the latter riding out on his wheel, and both returning by rail and getting off at Huntington Avenue station. The other day the dog in some way missed his master in the park and proceeded on to Newtonville as had been his wont. Whether he did not enjoy his call, or perhaps felt anxious about the one who always looked to his welfare, is uncertain, but after waiting a proper time Mr. Dog trotted off to the station, jumped on the first inward train that stopped and, when it reached Huntington avenue, got off and went home like other folks. The only thing about the performance that reflects discredit on his dogship is that he didn't buy a ticket, but just "hooked" his ride.—New York Herald.

Balmoral Tartan.

Several of the rooms at Balmoral were redecorated this year with the "royal Balmoral tartan," the pattern of which was designed by the late prince consort for the exclusive use of members of the royal family, as he considered that the old "royal Stuart tartan" had become too common. Several shawls and plaids of this tartan invariably figure among the wedding gifts of the queen to members of the British royal family.

JOHN BOYD THATCHER A WITNESS.

He Fully Verifies a Disputed World's Fair Award.

John Boyd Thatcher is laconic and decisive in his statements. During the lively campaign just closed in New York, this marked him especially as chairman the Democratic State Committee. It was equally true of him as Chairman of the Executive Committee on Awards at the World's Fair. This is the positive and sententious way in which he verifies in an official letter, the honors won by Dr. Price's Baking Powder: "I herewith enclose you an official copy of the award, which in due time will be inscribed in the diploma and forwarded." Thus the question respecting the award, raised by an envious New York rival, is settled beyond cavil. This same rival, by the way, is widely advertising an award for itself. The official records prove this claim wholly false, as they show the New York pretender was not so much as an exhibitor at the World's Fair.

HELEN KELLER.

Blind, Deaf and Dumb, But Has a Marvelous Mind.

The chief interest of the commencement exercises of the Perkins Institute for the blind centered in Helen Keller, the little girl made deaf and dumb and blind by illness at the age of nineteen months. During the last three years Helen had learned to articulate, and her contribution to the afternoon programme was a selection from Longfellow's poem, "Flowers," thirty-six lines in length, read in a clear and natural voice. When it is remembered that three years ago Helen's audible vocabulary consisted of only five words—"papa," "mamma," "baby," "teacher," and "sister," what she has accomplished seems the more wonderful. In March, 1890, she took the first eleven lessons in audible speech. These lessons are all that she has taken, for her success is largely due to her own indefatigable zeal. At the end of a month she could speak to those about her so as to be understood, and to-day she can express all her thoughts in fluent and intelligible speech. She likes to have people talk to her orally, rather than by signs, and she gets their meaning by reading the motion of their lips with her fingers. The most intelligent of deaf mutes hitherto taught to articulate have never equalled Helen's quickness, and she shows the same quickness in every branch. Three months after receiving her first lesson in French, she was able to write a correct and easy letter in this language. Her memory, too, is marvelously retentive. One of her feats was the committing to memory of a carol by Dr. Brooks, which had been read to her only twice.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE FAT WOMAN'S REFENSE.

How She Got Even With the Between Act Bore.

Apropos of the theater, I saw something one other night within the last seven that filled me with a totally unholy glee, says a writer in the Washington Post. A woman sat in front of me. She was decidedly plump—in fact, she was what Illinois people call cornfed. She was bareheaded, too, by the way, and before the play began and after, every act she had to stand up and let a man who sat near her pass out. It was a tight squeeze every time, and as the man did not say "Pardon me," "Beg your leave," or anything else to show the faith that was in him, I could see that the tide of that fat woman's wrath was rising, until its crimson edge made the straggling fringe below her back hair bristle indignantly. At last the play was over, and the man wanted to rush out to join two women friends—undoubtedly he'd have called them "lady friends"—whom he had noticed near. But did he rush? Well, if he did his rush wasn't visible to the naked eye. That fat woman sat down and put on her rubbers. Then she replaced her gloves, which she had taken off. Then she stood up, blocking the passage, while she put on her hat, adjusted her veil, and buttoned her cloak. And all the while the man was dancing with impatience, unable to get out, and the two "lady friends" were passing out of the door. At last the fat woman moved, and the man—well, inasmuch as nothing so much angers a man as a punishment he knows he deserves, you can imagine how he looked. For my part, I thought it was delightful, and if I ever meet that fat woman I mean to tell her so.

The Ant-Eater.

A strange looking creature is the ant-eater. His name describes his habits, and nature seems to have designed him for exactly the work which he performs. He opens ant hills and kills, by making his dinner of them, all of their inhabitants. He is certainly a useful animal, although a most unpleasant and peculiar looking one.

He resides in Brazil. Perhaps he lives there because ants and ant hills are there in plenty, or perhaps the ants and ant hills are put there because he lives there to exterminate them. For ants are terrible pests in that hot country. They swarm through the houses and eat everything which comes in their way. Clothes, books and furniture, wool, paper and wood, even to the beams of the houses, are not safe from destruction by these terrors. And so, of course, the animal who lives but by their destruction is considered a most necessary friend.

He has curious long, sharp claws with which he tears open the ants' homes. He has a very long nose, half as long as his body, and he can poke it far into the ant houses in his search for food. And he has a very long, slender and sticky tongue, which he darts in and out very rapidly, catching up with it dozens, perhaps hundreds of ants, at every motion.

Another odd thing about him is his tail. It is a busy one, covered with long gray hair. It looks like a monstrous gray mat, and when he lies down it covers him completely, serving the excellent purpose of keeping him warm and helping to conceal him. He makes his home in the woods, and it is usually at night that he prowls about, devouring a few million ants in the course of his search for enough dinner.

Cooking by Electricity.

Did you know they cooked by electricity now, on stoves built for that purpose? First in order came wood long ago, then coal, then oil, and as each was used some one in the scientific world would sit down and make a calculation, announcing in an article or book that we were using up all the earth's supply, and that in a little while, they always gave the dates and numbers, we would have no more wood, coal or oil to burn. And now comes electricity just in time to show people how silly it is to worry at all; that when one thing goes another comes. We can never be told that electricity will be consumed, for it's everywhere—in the very air we breathe. Nothing is better to cook by. Best of all, the room never gets overheated from the stove.

Horsepower

The difference between nominal, indicative and effective horsepower often puzzles people. Nominal horsepower is an assumed quantity used for the convenience of makers and buyers in describing the dimensions of the engines. Indicated horsepower is the amount shown by computations of the indicator diagram. Effective, or actual, horsepower is the work an engine can do, or the difference between the indicated horsepower and the horse power required to drive an engine when unloaded.—New York Tribune.

Pains in the Back

"I had been afflicted for several years with what the doctors called Diabetes, and suffered terribly. The pain in my back was agonizing in the extreme. Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills cured me. Now I can go to church and attend other meetings with pleasure. I always keep Hood's Pills by me. In my whole life, I never met anything that did me so much good as Hood's Sarsaparilla. 'Experience teaches a dear school, but fools will learn by no other.' I was once foolish enough to listen to a druggist who claimed to have something superior to Hood's, and took another medicine. Hint to Theater Managers.

More people are driven away from the theaters by bad or suggestive titles, repulsive, tasteless and vulgar picture posters, than are ever drawn to the box office by such pictures and titles. The great mass of the American people are right minded, clean thinking, self respecting men and women who want the best—not the poorest. For every quarter of a dollar drawn to the box office by an indecent or suggestive poster, $100 is driven away. For one man or boy who goes to see a play of suggestive title, 300 women and matinee girls, and at least half as many men stay away. These are the eternal verities of the modern theater.—Dramatic Mirror.

Gutta Percha Clubs.

French footpads have adopted a new weapon with which to assault travelers at night. It is a hollow gutta percha cudgel, and has the advantage over the old time sandbag and loaded stick, of inflicting fully as stunning a blow without producing any visible wound. It was with difficulty that the belated wanderer who had been robbed in some street of Paris can persuade the authorities that his tale is a true one, being able to show no evidence of having been struck. An entire gang was captured in Paris a short time ago who were using these weapons.

Plans for "Artistic One-Story Houses." We believe the only publication relating to this very desirable style of house is published by E. S. Childs, Architect, 62 New street, New York. It contains designs, floor plans and descriptions for houses between $500 and $3,000, and is sent by mail postpaid for $2.

Living Abroad.

A woman who has tried to live abroad in "retirement and strict economy," epitomizes as follows: "In Italy, well, there are many families who take pensionnaires, but comfort is not always great there. England, without a shadow of doubt, provides the best comfort all around, the best table with the most wholesome food, and the most refined style of living. After this comes Germany, with a bountiful table; France, with a more delicate one, perhaps, and Switzerland, with a combination of the two."

D. S. Hopkins, Architect, Grand Rapids, Mich., publishes a series of books with floor plans and exterior views of Cottages, Houses and Residences of all classes. Any one intending to build should write him for a copy.

PHYSICAL STRENGTH, cheerful spirits and the ability to fully enjoy life, come only with a healthy body and mind. The young man who suffers from nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and the thousand and one derangements of mind and body that result from, unnatural, pernicious habits usually contracted in youth, through ignorance, is thereby incapacitated to thoroughly enjoy life. He feels tired, spiritless, and drowsy; his sleep is disturbed and does not refresh him as it should; the will power is weakened, morbid fears haunt him and may result in confirmed hypochondria, or melancholia and, finally, in softing of the brain, epilepsy, ("fits"), paralysis, locomotor ataxia and even in dread insanity.

To reach, re-claim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book of 136 pages, written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home-treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of this notice with ten cents in stamps, for postage. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

For more than a quarter of a century physicians connected with this widely celebrated Institution have made the treatment of the diseases above hinted at their specialty. Thousands have consulted them by letter and received advice and medicines which have resulted in permanent cures.

Sufferers from premature old age, or loss of power, will find much of interest in the book above mentioned.

RESTORE THE QUEEN.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND SAYS THE ATTEMPT WAS MADE.

He Tells Hawaiian Royalists So, but Says That the Plan Failed and That the Matter Was Then Turned Over to Congress.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The attention of President Cleveland having been called to a hint thrown out in the senate discussion on Friday that the visit of a certain "committee of royalists from the Hawaiian islands" was connected in some way with the departure of American ships from the locality, the president said to an Associated Press reporter:

"Of course such an insinuation is very absurd. Its propriety and the motive behind it, I am sure, can safely be left to the judgment of fair and right-thinking Americans. I am entirely willing that all our people should know everything concerning the visit of the so-called 'committee of royalists.' Last year, in the latter part of July or early in August, three gentlemen from Hawaii arrived here and asked, through the secretary of state, my designation of a time when they could have an interview with me and present a message from the deposed Hawaiian queen. Though I could not with propriety recognize them officially, I was not disposed to refuse them personally the courtesy of an audience. Therefore a future day and hour were fixed for the interview. Meantime at my request, transmitted through the secretary of state, these gentlemen made known the precise purpose of their visit in the following note:

"'Washington, Aug. 1, 1894.—To the Hon. W. Q. Gresham, Secretary of State—Sir: We, the undersigned, commissioners sent by her majesty, Queen Liliuokalani, request an audience of the president of the United States. We desire to ask his excellency whether there is any hope for his doing anything for the restoration of the constitutional government of the Hawaiian islands.

"'—J. A. Cummings,
"'—H. A. Wideman,
"'Samuel Parker.'"

A Written Reply.

"After this note had been submitted to me I prepared in writing, with some care, a reply to the question it contained to be read by me to the commissioners at our meeting. I intended to avoid all misunderstanding and misconception by absolutely confining myself to such written reply, of which the following is a copy:

"'Gentlemen: You must permit me to remind you that this interview is not an official one, and that instead of receiving you in any representative capacity I meet you as individuals who have traveled long distances for the purpose of laying a certain matter before me.

"'You ask me if there is any hope of my doing anything for the restoration of the constitutional government of the Hawaiian Islands? I suppose that this question is largely prompted by the fact that soon after the overthrowing of the late government of the queen I investigated that transaction and was satisfied that there had been such an unjustifiable interference of aid of that movement on the part of representatives of the government of the United States in its diplomatic and naval service as to call for correction, not only to rectify what seems to be a wrong done to others, but also through that rectification to ward off what appeared to be danger to American honor and probity. Fully appreciating the constitutional limitations of my executive power and by no means unmindful of the hindrances that might arise, I undertook the task.

Committed to Congress.

"'Having failed in my plans, I committed the entire subject to the congress of the United States, which had abundant power and authority in the premises. The executive branch of the government was thereby discharged from further duty and responsibility in the matter, unless moved therefor by congressional command. The congress has, both by its action and its omission to act, signified that nothing need be done touching American interference with the overthrow of the government of the queen.

"'Quite lately, a government has been established in Hawaii, which is in full force and operation in all parts of the islands. It is maintaining its authority and discharging all ordinary governmental functions. Upon general principles, and not losing sight of the special circumstances surrounding this case, the new government is clearly entitled to our recognition without regard to any of the incidents which accompanied or preceded its inauguration. This recognition and the attitude of the congress concerning Hawaiian affairs, of course, led to the absolute denial of the least present or future aid or encouragement heretofore existing in the Hawaiian islands.

"'—Grover Cleveland.'

"When the day appointed for the meeting arrived I was confined to my bed by illness and was unable to keep my engagement. I therefore signed the paper I had expected to read, and it was delivered to the commissioners, who, I believe, returned at once to Hawaii. I never saw any member of this commission or committee, and have never had any communication or transaction with any of them, directly or indirectly, except as I have here stated."

BIG FIRE IN TORONTO.

One Life Lost and Much Property Destroyed.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 8.—A few minutes before 3 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the basement of the Globe building, on the corner of Young and Melnd streets. The alarm was given, but before the first reel arrived flames were pouring from every window from garret to basement. As the wind was blowing briskly from the south and the fire threatened to spread, another alarm brought the entire fire department to the spot. Chief Ardagh and five men mounted upon the cornice around the first story of the Globe office and were breaking windows to introduce the hose when the northwest wall, from the cornice up, five stories, fell with a crash. The men leaped into the pile of bricks. Chief Ardagh was badly hurt about the head. Robert Bower received injuries from which he soon died. Chas. Smedly, Francis Forsythe, Robert Foster, James Davidson and Harry Saunders are severely injured.

The Globe building, erected at a cost of $90,000, with a plant valued at $60,000, was soon a complete wreck. The Toronto Lithograph company, which occupied a floor in the building, loses its presses and many valuable stones.

From the Globe building the flames crossed the street and gutted Webb's restaurant. Loss on building, $20,000; on stock, $50,000. In the rear of Michie & Co.'s wine store, the building was also slightly damaged.

The wind then changed, blowing from the east and McKinnon & Co.'s new wholesale dry goods store was soon wiped out. Loss on building, $70,000; on stock, $100,000. Owing to Chief Ardagh having to retire early from the scene the fire brigade worked at a disadvantage, lacking direction. The World and News have offered their services to the Globe to enable them to produce their edition as usual.

TRUCULENT TURKS.

Armenians Meanly Betrayed and Then Butchered.

London, Jan. 8.—Prof. Minas Tcheras, editor of the Armenia and professor of Armenian at the University of London, has received the following advices from Armenian sources:

Zekki Pasha, commander of the Fourth army corps, has had given to him by the sultan the medal of husbandry. Chendi, a Kurdish brigand at Boghazkesen, ordered an Armenian named Aplear to be killed for protesting against Chendi's misdeeds. The Kurds have assassinated two Armenians at Daghvergan, one at Armition and another at Keuchar. The number of men, women and children who were cut down by sabers or bayoneted in eleven villages of the Sassound district was 750.

It is now proved that the people from the Sassound district, who, during the retreat to Mount Andok, fought bravely for nineteen days and who gave themselves up to the enemy on Aug. 27, were deceived by the proclamation of Zekki Pasha, promising them amnesty. The Turks then outraged the women and starved and tortured them for three days. Sixty young men were finally killed by the sword and their bodies were thrown into a well.

TWICE HANGED.

And Then Left by His Tormentors to Freeze to Death.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8.—The story of a startling outrage was received here to-day from Upelik river. At Coonskin, about 2 a. m., Dec. 29, four men went to the house of John Mourning, a harmless white man who lived alone, dragging him from bed, tried to make him confess to the murder of Simon Wallace and his mother in the suburb of this city four years ago. Mourning denied all knowledge of the crime, whereupon the men put a rope about his neck and hung him to a rafter. Taking him down, he still asserted his innocence, whereupon he was again strung up, and this time when taken down was unconscious. The men laid him down and left him half naked as he was lying on the floor, the thermometer being below zero. When he was found later, he was still unconscious and his legs were frozen to above his knees, and his ears and hands were frozen. He was taken to a friend's home. A deputy and a representative of the prosecuting attorney have left for Coonskin and an investigation will be made.

ONLY AN ACCIDENT.

So Says the Arkansas Man Who Killed Two Women.

Newport, Ark., Jan. 8.—Saturday night S. L. Swin shot and killed Widow Cooper and her daughter at the McDaniel farm in Cape township, about twelve miles from this city. Swin came in this morning and surrendered to Jailer Forshee. He stated that the killing occurred as follows:

"Jim Field and I had been chums for some time. He claimed that I owed him, and took my clothes. Field married a Miss Cooper last summer, and myself, wife and mother and two daughters were living on the McDaniel farm. I went over to get my clothes and took my shotgun with me. I found Feld sitting on the bed with a pistol. I pointed my gun at him and demanded my clothes. Old Lady Cooper grabbed the gun and it went off in the scuffle. I never meant to harm any one." The prisoner is about twenty-four years old, and although illiterate, does not look like a bad man.

GOV. NELSON IS IN IT.

HE IS AFTER THE UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP.

Minnesota's Governor Announces That He Is a Candidate to Succeed Senator Washburn—Col. Gibbs Out of the Speakership Fight.

St. Paul, Jan. 5.—Gov. Nelson is out as an avowed candidate for the United States senate. A rumor started in the Windsor during the morning that the governor would be a candidate, and a number of the mutual friends, and Senator Washburn himself, went to the capitol to verify or obtain a denial of it.

Senator Yale of Winona was the first, and he asked the governor point blank if he was to be a candidate. The governor very promptly replied that he was now an avowed candidate for the office.

Senator Yale said that this was a surprise to him; that he had supposed that there was nothing at all in the talk about his becoming a candidate. The governor replied that two days ago there was not, but that he came to a decision last night, and that he should now make the race.

Senator Washburn saw him soon after, and in reply to a similar question from him the governor made the same answer. He did the same to other friends who called later.

Relating the interview with Gov. Nelson, the senator said:

"I am a candidate for United States senator," said Gov. Nelson in confirmation of the report which had spread about the hotel corridors earlier in the day. "And I have but one other statement to make," continued the governor. "I never at any time agreed to support Mr. Washburn."

The above interview was had with Gov. Nelson as he was leaving the state capitol for his hotel. He had no other statements to make. He said he had so lately decided to become a candidate he was not in a position to say anything in regard to the inauguration of his campaign. He would determine later where and when to open headquarters.

Col. Gibbs Is Out.

Col. John L. Gibbs has withdrawn from the contest for the speakership of the house of representatives. Late this afternoon, after a consultation with his friends and with the friends of Candidate Shell, he decided to release his friends from their promised allegiance and withdraw from the field. To a reporter he said:

"I do not wish to embarrass my friends nor stultify myself by conducting a hopeless and losing fight. It has become apparent that I cannot receive the support I expected from the Twin Cities, and I believe that Van Sant will receive a majority of the votes. It would embarrass my friends, under ~~the circumstances, for me to continue~~ longer in the field, and I have determined to withdraw my name entirely and leave my friends free in the matter."

Daniel Shell was seen late this afternoon regarding the retirement of Mr. Gibbs. He stated that he would remain in the race for speaker.

LOVE WITHOUT LUXURY.

Did Not Suit the Taste of a Young Bride—Divorce the Result.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Mrs. Albert L. White, daughter of Millionaire Hurley of Detroit, was granted a divorce and allowed to resume her maiden name to day, and her husband has resumed piano tuning, which profession he followed when he first met the wealthy Detroit girl. White eloped with Miss Hurley in 1883, and after being forgiven the young couple took up their residence with the bride's parents. White declares that he was recently thrown out of his father-in-law's residence, and that his wife refused to follow him, saying that she preferred the elegance of the paternal mansion to Mr. White and piano tuning. The divorced husband has removed to Chicago, and the ex-wife returned to Detroit to-day.

Quite Romantic.

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 5.—Joseph Murphy, a newspaper reporter of Austin, Tex., and Miss Julia Nussol of Louisville were married here to-day. There is a tinge of romance conected with the wedding. The bride is a daughter of wealthy Louisville parents who objected, and she left home ostensibly to visit friends at Savannah, Ga. She remained there a couple of days, and then came to Atlanta, where she took a train yesterday for Mobile. Murphy did not know that she was in town until he met her on the street. They repaired to a justice court and were married. The couple left for Texas on the next train.

LYNCHING OF SCOTT

One Arrest for the Affair in Nebraska.

O'Neil, Neb., Jan. 4.—Mose Elliott, a well known farmer, has been arrested as one of the lynchers of Barrett Scott. The driver of the Scott carriage is said to have recognized him. There are no further developments in the case, though excitement is intense.

It is believed now that Burnett Scott has been murdered and his body thrown into the Niobrara river. Sheriff Hamilton and men tracked the wagon in which Scott and Schmidt were taken to within a few miles of the river, when all trace was lost. The quicksands in that section of the river would quickly swallow any body thrown in. Residents of the country in which the crime was committed say say for the last three or four days a large number of men have been riding through that portion of the country, all being heavily armed.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 4.—Officers from O'Neil, Neb., are here looking for Bartlett Scott, the embezzling county treasurer supposed to have been captured by a mob and lynched. They say they have no faith in the lynching story. Scott was convicted and sentenced to five years in prison. He was out under a heavy bond, and it is their theory that his abductors were his friends. They think the job was put up to get him out of the country and at the same time make it appear that he was lynched, so as to relieve his bondsmen. At last reports no trace of him had been found, although the entire country around O'Neil has been scoured in the past two days.

ELECTION FRAUD.

How the Ballot Box Was Stuffed in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Jan. 4.—Thomas C. Kanny, a judge of election in the Ninth ward, to-day gave most sensational testimony before Commissioner Evans, who is hearing evidence in the Jamison-Bremmerman contest for the office of county prosecutor. He declared that 217 ballots which had already been voted for Republicans were deliberately taken from the ballot box before the polls had closed, and Democratic ballots substituting the name of Bremmerman for that of Jamison, were put in their place and the Republican ballots destroyed. Kanny said he complained to the other judges at the time, but Arthur Moses, alias Morrison, one of them, said he "did not give a damn for the law." Kanny declared that there were Republicans in the Booth during the day. The judges, he said, were "instructed" before-hand not to let any witnesses get in the booths, the remark being made that "if there is any monkey business some one will get shot." Kanny says he was afraid to protest further at the time, as Moses had displayed a big six-shooter. "I am still in fear of my life," added Kanny.

WANT HIM REMOVED.

New York Financiers Want Cleveland to Fire Carlisle.

Washington, Jan. 4.—A special to the Chicago Daily News from Washington says:

"Leading New York bankers have made a formal demand on the president for the removal of Secretary Carlisle. The request was made Monday by J. Pierpont Morgan, who came on from New York for that purpose.

"Mr. Morgan, whose name is familiar in financial circles of the country, was the chief factor in the late syndicate which took the last issue of bonds. There have been many informal demands for Secretary Carlisle's retirement coming from Wall street in the last year, but this is the first time the movement has taken organized form.

The New York financiers charge that the secretary broke faith with them on the recent bond issue by springing his currency plan before he had disposed of the bonds and depressing the price on the market, resulting in the dissolution of the syndicate. The president informed Secretary Carlisle to-day for the first time of Mr. Morgan's modest request, and indicated that he had no intention of asking Secretary Carlisle to quit.

West Superior, Wis., Jan. 4.—Martin Green of this city, who was sent to the asylum for the insane at Oshkosh six months ago arrived home last night nearly dead from cold and exhaustion. His feet had been so badly frozen that he could no longer walk, and was assisted on his journey by kind hearted railroad men. The escaped patient seems to be all right mentally. His insanity was caused by sunstroke. Physicians say he will fully recover from the effects of exposure.

DOZEN PEOPLE DEAD

Report of a Holocaust in North Dakota.

D., Jan. 4.—Meager reports come from the old Sisseton reservation that at a point nine miles south of Ransom a terrible fire occurred last night in which it is reported many lives were lost. The names of those of the persons said to have perished are Sam Gibson, white; Peter Resau, Indian; Labelle, Indian. Just how the fire started is not known, but it is reported that the county coroner and a body of citizens have started for the scene. It is said that a carousal, in which the tough white and Indian element predominated, was in full blast when, in some way, the building took fire and cremated a dozen or more human beings.

Cardenas has been arrested.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

LAST SESSION OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

A Condensed Record of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Matters of Importance, Dealt With.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The resolution heretofore introduced by Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.), relating to the occupation of rooms in the basement of the senate wing of the capitol for restaurant purposes gave rise to an interesting debate during the mornig hour of the session of the senate. Mr. Allen severely criticised the practice of furnishing to the proprietors of the restaurant free of cost his furniture, ice, etc., and asserted it was a violation of the statutes and constituted larceny of the public funds. Messrs. Hale (Rep., Me.) and Manderson (Rep., Neb.) replied to the observations of Mr. Allen and defended the existing practice. No action was taken on the resolution. The remainder of the day was taken up by Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.) in a speech on the Nicaraguan canal bill, in which he replied in detail to the arguments advanced by Mr. Turpie (Dem., Ind.) in opposition to the bill.

The proceedings in the house lacked marked incidents of any kind. The debate on the currency bill continued all day, but was generally spiritless, and the attendance, which was large at the beginning, dwindled to almost nothing. The speakers were Messrs. Black of Georgia, McCreary and Buckner of Kentucky, in favor of the bill; and Messrs. Haughen of Wisconsin and Adams of Pennsylvania, in opposition to it. No other business was transacted.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The general debate on the currency bill will continue until the caucus is held. Then if the present plans of the advocates of the bill are endorsed, the debate will go on under the five-minute rule until Thursday of next week, when the final vote will be taken. The feature of the day's debate was the speech made in opposition to the measure by Representative Hendrix, a New York banker. He declared that the bill would be inadequate at a measure of relief for the treasury, and besides, would provide an unsound currency. He suggested as the only measure of relief the passage of a bill to fund the greenbacks. The other speakers were Messrs. Hepburn of Iowa and Dingley of Maine and Gresham of Texas.

The Hawaiian question was again brought before the public in the senate by the discussion of the resolution introduced by Mr Lodge of Massachusetts, calling on the secretary of the navy for information as to why the United States battleships had been withdrawn from Hawaiian waters. The debate, which was interesting throughout, consumed the greater portion of the morning hour, and at its close the resolution took its place on the calendar and now can be taken up only by unanimous consent. The debate was listened to attentively by senators and the visitors in the galleries. Mr. Morgan concluded his speech on the Nicaraguan canal bill, after which the bill making appropriations for support of the military academy for the fiscal year, 1896, was passed. It carries an appropriation of $420,000, a reduction of $41,800 as passed by the house.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Another day in the house was consumed by debate over the Carlisle currency plan, in which Representative Cockran of New York was the most conspicuous figure. Mr. Cockran held the floor for more than an hour, spoke with his accustomed vigor and eloquence, provoked many questions from the opposition, and held the attention of members and galleries closely. He opposed the bill throughout, and declared himself in favor of the Baltimore plan.

Mr. Lacey (Rep., Iowa) also spoke in opposition, while Mr. Boatner (Dem., La.) and Mr. Catchings (Dem., Miss.) exhorted their party to unite in support of the measure. Mr. Boatner expressed surprise at the opposition to the measure which has developed on the Democratic side. He paid a tribute to the abilities of secretary Carlisle and dwelt upon the duty of supporting him which, he said, rested upon the Democrats.

ACTRESS AND MILLIONAIRE.

Miss Jane Stuart to Wed Gen. Auer of Milwaukee.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Miss Jane Stuart, of Richard Mansfield's company, gave up her position at the close of the performance in this city Saturday night. It is said that Miss Stuart is to marry Gen. Auer, a millionaire of Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Jan. 8.—Gen. Louis Auer, who, it is said, will marry Miss Jane Stuart, of the Richard Mansfield company, met Miss Stuart in Milwaukee two years ago, and was very attentive to her. Gen. Auer owns an establishment of considerable renown on Pewaukee lake, where many celebrities have been entertained in recent years. He is about thirty-five years of age and has a comfortable fortune. He has been very prominent in the Wisconsin national guard, and up to a few weeks ago was quartermaster general. He was reported engaged to Odette Taylor at the time young Howard Gould and Miss Taylor were engaged Gen. Auer is now in the East.

Strike Broken.

Pittsburg, Jan. 8.—The strike in the Edgar Thomson Steel works at Braddock is broken. About 250 furnacemen have returned to work and additional furnaces have been put in blast.

To Divide Polk County.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—Four petitions for the division of Polk county, making five counties where one is now, were filed with the secretary of state. The proposed names of the four new counties are Nelson, Red Lake, Garfield and Hill.

Lost Oranges.

New York, Jan. 8.—The fruit exchange has advices that the orange crop in Florida is a complete failure owing to the freeze of the last few days.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. C. G. Rapp wishes to express his sincere thanks to the many friends who so kindly assisted during the illness and at the funeral of his beloved wife.

January 3rd 1895.

Governor Nelson has entered the race as a candidate for U. S. senator and the fight is getting to be a hot one. Nelson it is claimed promised Washburn he would not be a candidate but a little thing like that dont bother Knute. The fight is between Nelson and Washburn but Comstock and McCleary are also in the race. The two prominent candidates seem to be well backed and money will probably be easier after the election is over.

A REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

The annual row over the county printing contract occured yesterday at Crookston and resulted in a signal victory for the republican newspapers. The printing was let to the Fertile Journal, Thirteen Towns, Fisher Bulletin, Thief River Falls Press and Crookston Tribune. There is evidently a mistake somewhere. It is either the Polk County Journal instead of the Fertile Journal which received the contract for printing or the county commissioners deliberately snubbed Editor Cook. Polk county has five republican newspapers and it is a victory the republicans may well be proud of when four of them secure the county printing at the highest bid from a board of county commission rs composed of three populists two democrats and no republicans. A victory of this kind clearly shows that no one but a republican has any right to be alive even in the populist stronghold of Polk county.

Rev. Hicks the famous St. Louis weather prophet, has the following to say about the weather for 1895.

Those who have our diagram for February and March, are prepared for the predictions we here make—that the roughest and most trying part of the present winter will fall in those months. Let all concerned make a note of this. We believe that April and May will usher in an early season and that the condition will be good for pushing agricultural pursuits. Heavy hail storms and marked tendency to cloud bursts will characterize the precipitations of these months. June will prove the most stormy month of the summer and the heaviest rain falls of the season will occur in that month.

A couple of days ago a man calling himself John Wilson and claiming to be a lumberman at Thief River Falls, dropped into Attorney Steenersons office and said he had a contract for the purchase of 6,000,000 feet of lumber. He wanted a letter of introduction to Ray W. Jones, of Minneapolis, which was furnished him. Before leaving he gave his check on the Polk County Bank in payment for the trouble he had caused. Later Mr. Wilson had various business transactions, in which he gave his checks, including one for his expenses at the Commercial hotel. It is rumored that there are checks to the amount of nearly $300 given by him in circulation. Last night Mr. Wright from Thief River Falls, came to Crookston looking for Mr. Wilson and had a warrant for his arrest on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, but the lumberman was not to be found. It is reported the good people of Thief River Falls are sufferers to the extent of about $600 by cashing checks that there was no money on deposite to pay. It is also claimed that John Wilson is an assumed name and that the supposed lumberman's true name is John Sullivan and that his home is in Minneapolis.—Crookston Times.

Whereas, eternal vigilence is the price of liberty, resolved that we would impress upon the alliances throughout the county the necessity of keeping their alliance in good standing and working order by collecting the small amount of dues to state and county alliances, and inasmuch as the state legislature convenes this winter the alliances are a proper place to discuss their doings and present our demands.

Resolved, that we heartily approve Judge Ives' noble effort, at the last session of this district court to keep law and order enforced by discharging the grand jury at said session and instructing the sheriff to call a new one for the balance of the continued term of court in hopes that they might indict those houses of ill fame and saloons and gambling dens which the discharged jury failed to indict.

Resolved, that we are opposed to the practice of charging usury or illegal interest and would recommend that the alliances contribute towards a fund wherewith to fight in the courts all such cases. And we farther recommend that the farmers organize and incorporate themselves as a banking firm and get money from places where they can get it at more reasonable rates of interest and loan it here to such farmers as actually need it, at legal rates.

Resolved that the supreme court have often userped the powers given to the law making bodies, and as this is dangerous to our liberties, we demand that the powers of said courts be curtailed so that the rights of the people may be protected.

Resolved that we are in favor of the free coinage of silver and the issue of legal tender treasury notes based upon the wealth of the nation to such an amount as to bring the per capita circulation up to fifty dollars.

Resolved that the general favor with which the Carlysle plan meets is evidence that the old parties admit the need of an increased circulation; but are not willing to let the people have it without paying a tribute of probably one billion dollars to the banking interests of the country and foisting upon the people a system which has none of the merits and all the demerits of what has been characterized wild cat money. That while the adoption of this plan might bring temporary relief it would leave with the banking interests the power of contraction and would eventually result in ruin and disaster to the producing classes.

Resolved, that we are unequivocally opposed to the adoption of what is known as the township system for the common schools of Minnesota as the present system is less cumbersome is fair in regard to the distribution of money raised by taxes and gives the districts who desire to raise the standard of their schools by recognizing the individual merits of a teacher an opportunity to do so.

Whereas it appears that the railroad and warehouse commission is not vested with the power to reduce freight rates, therefore, be it resolved that we demand that the next leislature enact a maximum freight rate law reducing the present freight rates to a reasonable compensation only, for the carrier.

We the undersigned respectfully submit the foregoing report.

THE MEEHAN'S WIN.

Some time ago Meehan Bros of Thief River Falls asked for an injunction in the U. S. circuit court restraining the Jones—Maxfield company from building a mill on the chief's section. The case was argued in the U. S. Court at St. Paul yesterday and today a telegram was received stating that injunction was ordered permanent until next October. This will keep the Jones party out another year at least and is a big victory for the Meehan's. The chances are also good that Meehan's lease of the property which was made in 1891 for ten years will hold. It will now be in line for the Meehan crowd to hold the final jollification.

Attorney Richardson was in town last Friday on his way to Red Lake Falls to defend L. A. Threine in a civil suit brought by A. A. Erickson and John Hodlund for damages for setting prairie fire last August. Both cases came before Justice Toupon and were both decided in favor of the defendant.

being extremely un-Democratic. Convertibility in a paper currency, as seen from the hard money standpoint, is like conscientiousness in a man—it has many grades and is valuable in proportion as it is strict and always responsive to demand. But credit in a currency is like chastity in a woman—it is either beyond all question or nobody knows just what it is, and ere long it is not worth talking about. The New York Tribune has put the thing in a nutshell in saying that under this scheme "the bankers are to have free issue and when one fails the government is to collect from other banks and redeem its currency, but in time of panic government couldn't and wouldn't do that." The interested parties would make it impossible. We should have irresponsible men inflating recklessly in inflation times, and when the pinch came the law would be suspended, just as it has been here before.

Another old, old delusion which has been revived and is having a great run just now is that of an elastic currency on a gold basis. The Republicans are promising a self evident impossibility—to maintain an increasing volume of coin based currency on a decreasing volume of coin. Exports of gold have begun earlier than usual and in larger volume, and it is as certain as any future event can be that between this and the close of the fiscal year the amount exported will be twice as large as usual. In fact, prices of commodities are so low that gold is the only profitable export. Elasticity (in the sense they use the word) in a currency is not even an idealist's dream. It is a superstition as baseless as the belief in witchcraft. Professor William G. Sumner in his very able work in favor of a gold currency has shown this so conclusively that I wonder how any goldbug could have overlooked it. After giving the history of all the attempts to produce such a currency from 1630 to 1876 he says:

"No device whatever can make the currency elastic. An elastic body is one which will both expand and contract, but a paper currency never contracts itself. Any device which has elasticity for its object will have expansion for its effect." He might have added that under this new system the plutocrats would expand until they had carried the western producers completely off their feet and then contract credits so suddenly that debts would virtually be doubled, and thus would they alternately raise us and drop us till they cracked our bones on the rocks of bankruptcy. This kind of "elasticity" is only too practicable.

J. H. BROWNING.

A Populist Conference.

By the request of the members of the national executive committee of the People's Party and at the suggestion of the chairmen of the state committees I hereby call a meeting of the national central committee of the People's Party to meet in the ladies' ordinary of the Lindell hotel, in the city of St. Louis, Dec. 28 and 29, 1894. In addition to the members of the national committee, the chairmen of the state committees, members of the Reform Press association, People's Party senators and representatives of the Fifty-third congress and those elected to the Fifty-fourth congress and all others who have taken a prominent part in organizing the party, and also those who are willing to work and vote with the People's Party in the future for monetary reform, are invited.

The object of this meeting is to map out a policy for an educational campaign between now and the meeting of the next national convention and any other business which may come before the committee. The committee will discuss and act upon every phase of the present political and industrial situation of the country. This will be the most important meeting held since the Omaha convention.

J. S. Gollett, Equitable building, St. Louis, has charge of arranging all the details for this meeting.

Populists Given a Show.

Judge Scales has appointed Christian Meier a member of the board of election commissioners to succeed Henry Schomer, whose term of office has expired. Mr. Meier belongs to the People's Party.

Judge Scales thinks he has acted for the best in giving the People's Party representation on the board and in thus making the board as nonpartisan as possible. Mr. Meier has filed his $10,000 bond, with Frank A. Stauber and Frederick Heinberg as sureties.

The new commissioner is a practicing attorney and has been prominent in politics for many years. He served one term in the legislature and was for a time a member of the city council.—Chicago Post.

The Bond Shark's Toll.

The Stewart syndicate, which has bought the $50,000,000 issue of bonds at 117, intends to peddle them out, it is said, at 119. If I am right, this means a profit of about $2 each on 500,000 $100 bonds, or a gain of $1,000,000 to the syndicate without a single return to the public, out of whom the profit must come. So the government, by the method it has chosen to adopt, has given us a good object lesson of the middleman and his opportunities for grabbing. It has raised up a gigantic middleman to whom it says: "Take this. The people can spare it. Never mind about making a return."—Taxpayer in New York World.

The Dispensary Law.

John Gary Evans, South Carolina's new governor, [illegible] of the Tillman dispensary law in his inaugural address:

"I am [illegible] satisfied that the dispensary [illegible] now written in the hearts [illegible] favored by fully [illegible] of the population. It shall be my duty and pleasure to see that the remaining 15 per cent respect and obey it."

GOVERNOR WAITE.

He Scorches the "Redeemers," Who Have Displayed Their Real Natures.

It will be remembered that a short time ago—in fact, right after the recent election—a petition signed by bankers, business men and others of Denver's "best" citizens, asking that gambling halls be allowed to reopen in the city, was presented to Governor Waite. The governor's reply to the petition was a strong and straightforward document and showed up in a clear light the hypocrisy of the men who used every foul means known to gang politicians to "redeem" Colorado and the city of Denver from what they called "Waite rule." In his reply Governor Waite said in part:

"To compel the gambling halls of Denver to remain closed is without doubt detrimental to some of the business interests of Denver. To the extent that the suppression of gambling has made hard times in Denver I have never hesitated to acknowledge my full share of responsibility. It is no wonder that every gambler in Denver, every pimp and prostitute, every confidence man, bunko steerer and thief joined the 'redeemers' to redeem the state from Populist misrule and furnished money and men and women to colonize the city with fraudulent voters in the interest of the Republican party.

"The Protestant religious element of this city, represented by its doctors of divinity, by the Y. M. C. A. and the W. C. T. U., protest against the protection of the gambling business by the police on the ground that gambling is immoral. My own action as governor was not based upon any such consideration. I suppressed it simply because it was contrary to law. The religious sentiment of Denver may be correct in opposing gambling and lewdness in the city, but they have been exceedingly tardy in their manifestations. They were all arrayed against me in my attempt in 1893 to remove Martin and Orr, commissioners who were conniving with the gamblers.

"The Populist state administration, the fire and police board and the chief of police will continue to enforce the Populist policy to close public gambling houses and shut up whisky saloons on Sunday and after midnight not in consequence of the rather late but loud outcries of the Denver doctors of divinity, the Young Men's Christian association, the Women's Christian Temperance union, the Prohibitionists or any other class of people whatever, but because it is a duty imposed on us by the law."

Millionaires Not Wanted.

That the people do not want an increase of millionaires is found in the general distrust in which they are held. And it is a sign of industrial and intellectual awakening when the powerful daily journals feel it necessary to apologize for the millionaires and to descant upon the amount of good which a rich man can do if he tries. It is quite in keeping with the character of these apologists that they should try to put the growing hostility to millionaires upon a false basis. No objection can be made against a man accumulating every dollar which he has created by his energy and intelligence. How many millionaires would the world ever have known if each one had relied upon his own exertions entirely? Men grow immensely rich only by levying toll upon the industry of hundreds of their fellow men. Even when wealth thus obtained is spent in doing good, who shall say it would not be better spent by those who were its creators?

Under the present industrial system $1,000,000 in one man's hands may become a menace to the community. Through it he becomes an arbiter of the prosperity of thousands, and at his beck they go unclad and hungry. A hundred millionaires can and do control the destiny of a state, and a few hundreds hold in their grasp the welfare of our nation.

Some one has wittily said that nothing is so cowardly as $1,000,000 unless it be $2,000,000. Nothing is so grasping or so tyrannically selfish. Possessors of vast wealth are too selfish by nature to be patriotic. History is full of wrecked civilizations that perished only because the wealth of the people went into the hands of a few. A living proof of this is seen in the late civil war, in the different bargains secured by those who offered their lives and those who offered their money to their country.—National Watchman.

The Money of the Banks.

The treasury issues a statement showing that June 30 last national bank notes, based on bonds deposited in the treasury, were in circulation to the amount of $180,568,584. This money was put in circulation by the banks in the shape of loans to the people at rates of interest varying from 5 to 10 per cent. On the bonds deposited to secure this circulation the government pays interest to the banker, and that individual thus enjoys his profit doubly. In theory this national bank circulation is supposed to supply a flexible currency, always ready to expand when money is needed and to be retired when there is a plethora of the circulating medium, if such a thing be possible. But the theory and practice of national bank control of the currency are widely different. It generally results that the money disappears when it is needed most. Even the treasury officials who try to defend the national bank system admit in this latest bulletin that there was only a slight increase "during the money stringency, but the increase came too slowly to do much good." That sort of currency regulation is scarcely serviceable enough to justify the people in paying for it the interest on something more than $180,000,000.

The national bank system is merely a device for enriching a few at the expense of the many. It should be abolished and all money issued direct to the people by the national government.—Chicago Times.

Populists Will Contest.

The seven Mississippi Populist candidates for congress at the last election will, it is understood, contest the seats of the seven Democrats declared elected on the ground that the franchise clause of the new constitution disfranchises more than half the citizens of the state.

Nothing but words of encouragement and determination are heard on all sides. While some good men have fallen for the time, there have been some good men elected to fill their places. Taken as a whole, the People's Party is the only one that can point with pride to the methods and results of election.—National Watchman.

Intense Headaches

"For four years I have been a constant sufferer. My head ached from morning till night. After trying everything I could think of, the only thing that gave me any relief was to keep my head bound with a cloth to keep the air from striking it. The nasal passages of my head and my throat were very sore and gave me intense pain, expectorating much corrupt matter. I was told that the weight of my hair was the cause of my trouble, and I had it cut off; but this gave me no relief. Reading about a lady similarly afflicted who was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, I began to take it. Before I had taken one bottle I felt greatly im-

Girls Who Attract Men.

The girls who attract the best men are almost always a source of surprise to their feminine friends, who are often lost in wonder as to why so many more patent charms should have been passed over in such selections, writes Mrs. Burton Harrison in the January Ladies' Home Journal. It is the little mouse of a woman, the shrinking, shy creature left in the background by her bolder sisters, we constantly see brought to the front by the man who has won her love. And men prefer to any such coquettish invitation as that extended by Mrs. Bond of the nursery rhyme to her ducks when decoying them to come and be killed, the uncertainly hanging around a being to whom they have to sue.

Every man's ideal of a wife—I mean the normal, honest citizen of our Republic, who looks forward to making of himself and his line, stones to support its bulwark—is a girl who may be pretty, who might be brilliant, but who must be good. He also recognizes instinctively that her graces should not be too costly to wear every day. That she shall be cheerful of temper, inclined to take short views of human infirmity, and sound of health, he is apt gravely to consider, within himself, as essential. If all those who, before marrying, as essential. If all those who, before marrying, omitted to think about these things had done so, it is possible we should hear less to-day of the incompatibility of man and woman.

Dr. PIERCE'S Golden Medical DISCOVERY

Cures Ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of Consumption, in all its Earlier Stages.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. Address for Book, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION

AN EARLY CALL.

He proposed to her in the conservatory after supper; he did not go down on his knees to declare that life would be nothing to him without her, but he told her, simply and earnestly, that she was very dear to him; that he had always loved her, and that as his wife it would be his care to guard her from the world's rude buffetings. "I think I could make you happy," he said. "I am not as clever as some of the men you know, but I love you."

"Yes," she murmured, "I know you love me—you have always been good to me; you must know—you must see that I appreciate it. It touches me to have you care for me—I wish I could make you understand that I am grateful."

"Grateful! But why should you be? Could I help loving you? Could I know you and not care for you? You are so unlike other women, so free from envy and petty malice. I have watched you with your girl friends—I have seen you do many a kindness that you thought nobody knew anything about. I think it was your goodness that charmed me first."

She looked up — was he really in earnest?

"Don't praise me," she said; "compliments from other men are well enough, but not from you."

"Is it a compliment to tell you what I think? And it seems to me I have said so little. Ah! if you could know what is in my heart—but no doubt," as she made an impatient movement, "you have heard all this before—a twice-told story wearies. What can I say to win you—you who are so used to being loved? To another woman I might speak of my wealth, of all that I could give her, but not to you."

"You think too well of me," she broke in.

"No, Edith; I understand you, and that is why I want you all for mine, to have and to hold, to love and to cherish; say that you like me a little, that you will be my wife."

She leaned toward him; the words that would send him from her and end forever the friendship that had become a part of her life were trembling on her lips, when he, guessing her intention, perhaps, said hurriedly: "Some one is coming — your german partner, I think. Don't answer me now; later on will do as well."

She breathed freely. It was natural for her to postpone unpleasant things—to put off the evil day as long as possible.

"As you wish, then; will you call to-morrow?"

"Yes, in the morning at 11." He bowed and withdrew just as her next partner came hurrying up.

"The cotillion is about to begin, Miss Alton," he said, taking Manning's chair, "but I think we have time for a short chat. You don't mind talking to me for a few minutes, do you?"

"Why, no," she answered, for she liked the lad not only for his own sake but because of his friendship with that other, whose image was never long absent from her mind.

"By the way," he said, as if reading her thoughts, "I got a letter from Agnew to-day. I thought you might care to hear from him; you always seemed such friends."

"Yes," she responded idly. "How is he?"

"Very well; but growing homesick. Think of it? He has been away six weeks."

"No doubt he is enjoying himself."

"Oh, Carl will always get the best out of life; that's his way, you know."

"Yes, I know."

The answer was given so carelessly, with such apparent indifference, that he was about to speak, to tell her the tidings that his letter contained, and which so, for some instinct made him withhold, when his hostess appeared at the doorway.

"Come, you two," she called; "the others are waiting for you."

"Dear Mrs. Danton," said the girl, rising, "Mr. Lane and I are such old friends that we sometimes forget how time flies."

"You young dissembler," laughed the older woman; "you know, Herbert Manning was in the conservatory with you."

A sudden blush stained Edith's cheek—she hated herself for it, it was so apt to mislead—but Mrs. Danton seemed in no way surprised.

"There child don't look frightened," she said. "No one wishes you happiness more than I."

"But, Mrs. Danton—"

"Really, Miss Edith," put in Lane, who had been a puzzled and uncomfortable listener, "I don't like to hurry you, but we shall surely be late."

She turned away; after all, what did it matter; by to-morrow the world would know the truth, Manning's face would tell the story of his rejection, and a few hours' misconstruction could harm no one. But late that night when she stood in her own pretty room she felt vaguely dissatisfied with herself; she could not put the feeling from her.

"I have not acted honestly," she said aloud. "I should have answered him; it was not kind to put him off; it may lead him to hope, he may have misunderstood me." She was silent a moment, then went on contritely: "And I do like him. He is the kindest, truest friend, but love—" She rose and crossed the room.

When she came back she carried a photograph, a man's cold clever face—the face of one who knew the world and perhaps was not on the best terms with it.

"But for you," she said, gazing into the unresponsive eyes, "I had loved that other man; if you had not shown me so clearly that I was dear to you, I might still care for him, for he loves me dearly; but it is too late now—too late to talk of what might have been." She stopped and laid her lips on the picture's.

* * * * * * * *

The next morning she was idling over her fire, when the man brought up a bunch of heartsease and a card: "Mr. Manning's compliments, ma'am, and will you see him?"

"Yes; say to him I will be down in a moment."

When the door closed she lifted the heartsease tenderly; a mute appeal, they seemed to her from the giver.

"Poor fellow," she thought regretfully. "I should have told him; however, there is no use keeping him waiting. I might as well get through with it at once."

She pinned the heartsease in the lace at her throat, cast a parting glance at the mirror and started down the stairs.

As she reached the lower hall the front door opened and a servant admitted a girl in grey with a bunch of roses thrust into her muff.

"Why, Edith," she said rapidly, "I never thought to find you down so early. If you are going out don't let me keep you."

"I am not going out; come into the sitting room and get warm."

"No, I won't sit down, I only want to see you a moment. I came to ask you to join our house party—there will only be eight of us, the same old crowd we had last year."

"The same crowd? How delightful!"

"The same, and not the same. I won't invite Mr. Agnew now."

"And what has poor Mr. Agnew done?"

"What has he done?" Oh, nothing unusual; they all do it sooner or later, but an engaged man is de trop at an affair of this kind. No girl wants him for her partner, and, really, one can't blame them."

"An engaged man!" For one horrible moment Edith Alton thought she was about to faint; the next, however, the tables and chairs righted themselves, her visitor's face ceased its grotesque gyrations and she was conscious that she was speaking.

"So! Where did you hear that pleasant bit of news?" she asked, seating herself on the arm of a chair.

"Why last night; Mr. Lane told me coming home. Strange he never mentioned it to you. I am horribly disappointed. Fancy Charley Agnew married to a Boston girl. You remember her—a terrible little creature who visited the Mores. Wealthy of course—trust Charley for that—but oh! so plain."

"Beauty is in the eye of the beholder," quoted Edith lightly. She felt a longing to cry out, to bury her face somewhere instead of which she must smile and look unconscious and discuss this love affair with the indifference of a mere acquaintance. "If I remember rightly, she was a nice little thing."

"Nice? Heavens! Fancy Charley's coming to that—actually to marry a 'nice' girl! His best enemy couldn't wish him worse luck. He has disappointed me dreadfully. I thought," significantly, "he fancied some one else, somebody nearer home."

"Somebody nearer home—oh, do you mean myself? How awfully funny! Why, we are very good friends, we have always been friends; but I——" a rapid flash of thought; then with rising color. "I'm going to marry another man!"

Her visitor's face expressed intense surprise! "Going to be married," she repeated; "I had not heard——"

"No one has heard," said the other, with some emotion, "and, by the way, Mr. Manning is waiting for me in the library. I must ask you to excuse me."

"Mr. Manning!"

"Did you not guess? I thought of course you would. Don't speak of it, Janet. I only told you because (slowly) you are such a good friend of mine."

"And I appreciate it accordingly. I wish you every happiness"—she laid her hand lightly on Edith's arm—"you know that don't you?"

"Why, yes—you have always wished me well, haven't you? See how potent your wishes have been! But to return to our first subject. I shall be glad to go with you to Arley. Last year's visit was a dream."

"Then I shall count on you. Come, you will have to let me out; I am not au fait with your latch."

"What a strong wind there is—draw up your wraps. Good-bye, and again thank you for thinking of me."

The front door slammed and Edith stood a moment in the hall, gathering courage for what was to come; then she turned and went into the library.

Manning, who was standing at a distant window, came forward at her entrance.

"I am afraid I kept you," she said giving him a trembling hand, "but I was detained by an 'early call' from a friend."

"An early call," he repeated; "then what do you think of me?"

"Ah, but I told you to come; that is altogether different. I wanted you."

"You wanted me?" he cried eagerly; "my darling may I interpret that after my own fashion? Do you really care for me a little?"

She could not speak, but for answer she came to him, laying her beautiful head on his breast.

"Love me," she whispered, passionately, "only love me, and you can make of me what you will."

"Do you know," he said to her about an hour later, "at first you frightened me, but when you didn't say 'No,' at once, I began to hope. I knew it wasn't like you to keep me in suspense—you are too true of heart for that."

"Too true," she thought, remorsefully. "Oh, Herbert, Herbert."

But aloud she said, smiling half sadly into his loving eyes: "To think of your being afraid of me—of poor little me—who am not half worthy of you."

A Barrel of Flour for a Bear.

A Presque Isle merchant recently carried out a satisfactory transaction on the principle that a bear in the bush is worth a barrel of flour in the hand, although in theory it was contrary to the maxims of Poor Richard and all the other philosophers. A long, lank fellow from the backwoods, whose garb bespoke the healthy and rugged poverty of pioneer life, came into Barker's store and wanted to get a barrel of flour on credit. Being asked what security he would give for the bill, he admitted that he had no real estate, neither a hoof nor head of stock and no personal collateral of any description, except a wife and a large brood of children, but he added that he had just got on the track of a bear, and if Baker was willing to take the bear as security he would shoulder his gun on next Monday morning and camp right on his track until he got him. It was a trade which the bear squared up with his skin two weeks later and Presque Isle honesty and sagacity were both vindicated.—Lewiston Me., Journal.

A Dog Story.

"Before my wife died," said the man with the ginger beard, sadly, "I owned one of these here little woolly Scotch terriers, that was one of the smartest animals you ever see. Funny thing—one day my wife was readin' in the paper that woolly dogs wasn't goin' to be in fashion that summer, and she says to me, in a jokin' sort of a way:

"'I suppose we will have to sell Dagobert'—that was his name—'and git a nice fashionable, smooth-haired dog.'

"'All right says I, still keepin' up the joke.

"Now what do you suppose that there dog went and did?"

"Mebbe he committed suicide," ventured the grocer; "I have heard of dogs havin' their feelings hurt so bad, that they killed theirselves."

"Not much he didn't. Didn't I jest tell you he had a lot of sense? He jest snaked twopence out'n the box where we kept the small change to pay the milkman and the newspaper boy, and went down to the barber's shop and had his hair cut—that's what he did."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Fact or Fiction About Two Great Fair Awards.

A newspaper paragraph denounces as "false" the claim of a baking powder company to an award at the World's Fair. Whom can it mean?

Certainly not Dr. Price's. Why? Because, as the records show, Dr. Price's exhibited, competed and received the highest award, both at Chicago, and the California Midwinter Fair. The award in California included Gold Medal. The official examiners pronounced it the strongest, the purest, the most wholesome and efficient of all the baking powders. Its title to confidence is unquestioned.

Can it be the manufacturers of a New York powder, fictitiously labelled "absolutely pure," who are making "false" claims? That would be strange indeed, inasmuch as they were not even considered in the awards.

Was it Ammonia in the New York powder that prevented its makers from competing? If not what?

A MUCH SURPRISED CAT.

The Exciting Results of Setting Off a Burglar Alarm.

A big six-toed cat which belongs to Jackson & Co., the furriers on Tremont street, set off their automatic burglar alarm last night and created no end of disturbance there. Pussy is of a shy and gentle disposition, and has never courted publicity, and the attention which her actions drew to her last night has probably made her resolve never to go near a burglar alarm again.

Since the day of her birth she has never been outside the store. In the daytime she sits about in the store and shames the rich furs with the gloss of her own skin; and in the night she prowls about, upstairs and down, in a tireless search for rodents, for she is a skillful ratter, and takes great pride in keeping the store free from these vermin.

It was this prowling last night which was the cause of her publicity. After everybody had gone home, and the store was dark, she went her rounds without event until at about 11 o'clock she happened to go down the cellar stairs. If she had gone down as she usually did, one step at a time, all would have been well, but she probably thought she saw a rat, and, being in a hurry, jumped for some distance, alighting on one of the bottom steps. Never, never again will pussy do such a thing. The three bottom steps of the stairs are arranged to set off the burglar alarm when any considerable weight is put upon them, and the impetus of her jump was sufficient to achieve this result. In an instant the whole store was filled with the blinding glare of the electric lights, turned on by the alarm, and the great gong over the door was clanging out its harsh warning.

The first persons on the scene saw the store brilliantly lighted on the inside and a temporarily insane cat tearing about from floor to counter, and from counter to shelves, in a vain endeavor to get away from the fierce glare and the hideous noise. People gathered like magic. Theaters were just out, and the streets were more crowded than at any time after 8 o'clock. Clear up as far as West street the noise of the gong could be distinctly heard, and all the policemen on duty anywhere in the vicinity came rushing toward the store, followed by the people from the theaters and the omnipresent crowd which seems to spring out of the ground when anything happens at night. In a few moments more another gong was heard and the patrol wagon came up Tremont street with the horses on the run, and two more patrolmen hanging to the seats. Patrolman Burns, of Division 2, soon had the door open, and the crowd prepared to see a number of desperate men dragged forth. A diligent search for the burglars began and the store was ransacked, from top to bottom, but without result; and the policemen were finally forced to the conclusion that "it was the cat." Patrolman Burns stopped the alarm and turned off the electric lights, but he could not quiet poor pussy's nerves.

When seen at the store this morning, the cat's eyes were as big as saucers, and she had evidently not nearly recovered from her experience of last night.—Boston Transcript.

A DRAMATIC SCENE.

Swearing Allegiance to the Reorganized French Government.

The "Friends of the Constitution grew daily more numerous, more powerful, and more radical, in Valence, and when the great solemnity of swearing allegiance to the new order was to be celebrated, that place was chosen as a convenient and suitable one for the convention of twenty-two similar associations from the neighboring districts. The meeting took place on July 3, 1791; the official administration of the oath to the civil, military, judicial and ecclesiastical authorities occurred on the fourteenth. Before a vast altar erected on the drill ground, in the presence of all dignitaries with cannon booming and the air resounding with shouts and patriotic songs, the officials in groups the people in mass, swore with uplifted hands to sustain the constitution, to obey the National Assembly, and to die, if need be, in defending French territory against invasion.

Scenes as impressive and dramatic as this occurred all over France. They appealed powerfully to the imagination of the nation, and profoundly influenced public opinion. "Until then," said Bonaparte, referring to the solemnity, "I doubt not that if I had received orders to turn my guns against the people, habit, prejudice, education, and the king's name would have induced me to obey. With the taking of the national oath it became otherwise; my instincts and my duty were henceforth in harmony.—W. M. Sloane's New Life of Napoleon in the Century.

In a recent article on Coffee and Cocoa, the eminent German Chemist, Professor Stutzer, speaking of the Dutch process of preparing Cocoa common in Germany in which ammonia is added, says: "The only result of these processes is to make the liquid appear turbid to the eye of the consumer, without effecting a real solution of the Cocoa substances. This artificial manipulation for the purpose of so-called solubility is, therefore, more or less inspired by deception, and always takes place at the cost of purity, pleasant taste, useful action, and aromatic flavor. The treatment of Cocoa by such chemical means is entirely objectionable. . . . Cocoa treated with potash or ammonia would be entirely unsalable but for the supplementary addition of artificial flavors by, which a poor substitute for the aroma driven out into the air is offered to the consumer." The delicious Breakfast Cocoa made by WALTER BAKER & CO., of Dorchester, Mass., is absolutely pure and soluble. No chemicals, or dyes, or artificial flavors are used in it.

HOOD'S ON TOP.

A Mammoth Edition of Beautiful Calendars for 1895.

[From the Lowell, Mass., Morning Mail.]

Hood's calendar for 1895 may now be obtained at the drug stores and every one who gets one secures "a thing of beauty." Indeed, in the novelty of the design and the exquisiteness of the coloring, the calendar surpasses all previous issues, just as Hood's calendars have for many years surpassed all others. The calendar is formed in the shape of a heart and is ornamented with two beautiful child faces which have always been charming features of Hood's calendars. On the right is a representation of "Winter," the sweet little face with light brown eyes peeping out from a dainty cap, while the snow flakes are falling all about. The face on the left is a picture of "Summer," and is lighted with blue eyes and the head covered with bright flowers. The shades are perfectly blended, and the whole picture is surrounded by a tasty border. The design was made by Miss Maud Humphrey, one of the most gifted and celebrated water color artists in the country. The calendar gives the usual information concerning the lunar changes, and upon the back is printed a table of astronomical events especially calculated for C. I. Hood & Co.

The calendar is issued to advertise Hood's Sarsaparilla, Hood's Pills and the other preparations of the firm, and is regarded as most difficult to manufacture, its novel shape being such as no other concern has ever undertaken to produce in large quantities. It was necessary to purchase several additional machines especially for this job, so that there was a very large amount of machinery and a whole regiment of people employed in this branch of the extensive business at the big laboratory in Lowell. During the five months when the calendars were being made there were actually employed every day in this part of the work at the laboratory six printing presses, one bronzing machine, four eye letting machines, seven wire stitchers, eight large paper cutters and 162 persons. At the beginning of the work this large force was able to produce about 100,000 calendars a day and for several weeks toward the close the daily production amounted to 140,000 calendars. The edition of Hood's calendars for 1895 was 10,500,000, or about 2,500,000 more than last year.

This, of course, is an immense number, but the general reader has only a faint conception of its magnitude until he is reminded that the little 500,000 added to the ten millions is considered an enormous edition by many of the largest advertisers in the world. If the calendars were laid down in a single line, they would reach almost one thousand miles, and if the different pieces in the calendar pads were laid in this way they would extend almost three thousand miles, or from New York to Liverpool. For the past eight years, Hood's calendars have exceeded in number every similar publication, but it was hardly dreamed that they would ever come up to the mammoth edition which was demanded this year. Lowell has long been proud of this great industry which has given her almost a world wide reputation, and it is a matter of no small importance that so many of her people find pleasant and profitable employment in the work of making and advertising the great blood purifying medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose actual cures in every part of the country have been the wonder of the medical profession and have caused many hearts to overflow with gratitude.

Those who are unable to obtain Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendars at the drug stores should send six cents in stamps for one, or 10 cents for two to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Lincoln's Joke on Seward.

On the 9th the First Corps, commanded by Gen. Reynolds, was reviewed by the president on a beautiful plain on the north of Potomac Creek, about eight miles from Hooker's headquarters. We rode thither in an ambulance over a rough corduroy road, and, as we passed over some of the more difficult portions of the jolting way, the ambulance driver who sat in front, occasionally let fly a volley of suppressed oaths at his wild team of six mules. Finally Mr. Lincoln, leaning forward, touched the man on the shoulder, and said:

"Excuse me, my friend, are you an Episcopalian?"

The man greatly startled, looked round and replied:

"No, Mr. President; I am a Methodist."

"Well," said Lincoln, "I thought you must be an Episcopalian, because you swear just like Gov. Seward, who is a churchwarden." the driver swore no more.—"Lincoln in War Time," by Noah Brooks in the Century.

Hammered Iron Work.

The popularity of black iron lamps and lanterns for the piano, the study or porch, has given impetus to the languishing art of working in hammered iron. It is the highest type of iron work as well as the most beautiful, and we are glad to see it revived. The hammered iron work of the middle ages has been reverenced almost as a departed art. The best of this work is very expensive, but that has not prevented the production of some magnificent examples. The opportunity for the use of hammered iron work is large, including gates, railings, balconies, etc., and it would appear that once general attention ws directed to this species of artistic ornamentation the field of its application would be extensive.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

Fishing Owls.

Did any one know that owls did a right smart business in the fishing line when they had a chance? The Fish Commissioners of New Hampshire, have discovered that owls have been stripping the spawning salbling off the beds in their state. Naturally the fishing is all done at night and the water on the midlake spawning grounds being very low has given the owls the chance which they have improved. Quite likely the salbling expose some portion of their bodies above the water, and the noise they make in the water attracts the night birds, and every morning the spawn takers have found evidence of their visits.—Forest and Stream.

Process of Death by Electricity.

According to Prof. J. Kratter, of Graz, who has for some time been performing experiments on the effect of electrical shocks on animal life, death is most usually caused by sudden cessation of respiration and consequent suffocation. During the suffocation the heart continues in action. If the asphyxia lasts more than a certain time, about two minutes, the heart stops, this being a secondary phenomenon. Generally speaking, the animals used, cats, dogs, rabbits and mice, were not easily killed by 1,000–2,000 volts alternating. The danger appears to lie in the nervous system, and to decrease with the amount of brain development. Frequently death occurs by momentary stoppage of the movement of the heart, but a slow cessation of the heart's action, such as has been observed in cases of human death, was never observed. In no case was any anatomical alteration observable to which death might be attributed, but there are sometimes lesions, breaking of blood vessels, and the diagnosis is rendered certain by the peculiar burning at the positon of contact, and by the escape of blood from the capillaries, which indicates the path taken by the current.—Philadelphia Record.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

BIENNIAL MESSAGE.

DELIVERED TO THE JOINT SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Information and Suggestions Relative to the Affairs and Condition of the State—The Reports of the State Officers are Reviewed and Recommendations Made.

The following is Gov. Nelson's message to the legislature:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

Conformable to law and custom, I communicate to you by this message the following information and suggestions relative to the affairs and condition of the state.

During the past year our state has had its share in the industrial depression and stagnation prevailing throughout the Nation. A fairly good harvest, has however, to a large extent, measurably relieved the situation. In those parts of the state not devoted exclusively to wheat farming prosperity prevails, credit is ample and money far from scarce, and even in the wheat-farming belt there is no actual destitution or distress.

Forest Fires.

In one limited locality only have our people been visited with any serious calamity. On the 1st day of last September a forest fire, lashed into fury by a high wind, totally destroyed the villages of Hinckley, Sandstone, Sandstone Junction, Finlayson, Miller, Pokegama, Partridge and Mission Creek, and devastated a large area of the surrounding country, occupied by small farmers. More than four hundred lives were lost, a large number were maimed and crippled for life, more than 2,000 people were left helpless and destitute, and over $1,000,000 worth of property was totally destroyed. The territory ravaged by the fire embraced an area of nearly four hundred square miles. On the 3d day of September I issued a proclamation asking for contributions for the relief of the survivors of the fire and appointed C. A. Pillsbury of Minneapolis, Kenneth Clark and Hastings H. Hart of St. Paul, Charles H. Graves of Duluth and Matthew G. Norton of Winona, as commissioners to collect and distribute such contributions and to supervise the entire scheme of relief. These commissioners have performed their work with great energy, fairness and diligence. They have collected from involuntary contributors, and disbursed among the survivors of the fire $9,121.58, and finding that still more was urgently needed to complete the work of relief and to make suitable provision for the destitute, they have borrowed on their own credit the sum of $15,000 and have disbursed or incurred the disbursal of the same in completing the scheme of relief. The commissioners deserve the thanks of our state for procuring this extra amount of money, so needful, and I earnestly recommend that you take early steps to suitably reimburse them for the liability thus incurred. They have generously given both their time and their credit to the great work of relief and the least the state can do is to see that they suffer no loss or disadvantage in consequence thereof.

Grain Inspection.

Two years ago I called the attention of the legislature to the fact that while due provision was made by law for weighing, grading and inspecting grain under state supervision, at the terminal markets of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, there was no law on this subject affecting the primary and interior markets of the state, and I suggested the importance of placing the grading and inspection of grain at interior as well as terminal points, under state supervision and state control. Pursuant to this suggestion; the legislature enacted chapter 28, General Laws of 1893, commonly known as the "Country Warehouse Law," requiring all grain elevators other than at terminal points to take out a state license, declaring them public elevators and placing them under the jurisdiction and control of the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners. Since the enactment of this law, all elevators within its purview have taken out license and have operated as public elevators subject to the supervision of the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners. That this law has been productive of good results is evident from the fact that there has never been so few complaints made nor as little fault found about the grading and weighing of grain as since the passage of this act. The fact that country warehouses are now subject to state regulation and state control makes the warehouseman more careful and considerate and the farmer less prone to complain and find fault. The honest warehouseman finds nothing oppressive in the law, the honest farmer finds in it a reasonable safeguard and protection, and the demagogue is deprived of his favorite text of complaint.

Special Injury to Crops.

In several counties of the state the wheat crop was greatly injured by the ravages of the chinch bug. The prevailing drought enabled these insects to do more than ordinary havoc. Dr. Otto Lugger, entomologist of the state experimental station, made great efforts to stay the destruction by infecting the bugs with the germs of a fatal disease, an experiment that had, in some degree, been tried and found helpful in other states. To some extent his efforts gave relief, and he could have accomplished much more had he been supplied with ample funds and ample assistance for the emergency. The only funds at his disposal to pay all expenses and all help was $250 received by him from the governor's contingent fund. The chinch bugs are liable to continue with us for years to come, and we are likely in the future, as often in the past, to have visitations from grasshoppers. In view of these facts, I take the liberty of recommending that you make an appropriation of not less than $5,000, available for the purpose of exterminating these and other grain-destroying insects, and for the protection of the farmers against the ravages of the same. Such an appropriation should be annual and continuing, with a proviso that any surplus beyond $5,000 should at once lapse into the general revenue fund; thus preventing any undue accumulation of this fund. This appropriation should be placed at the disposal of the entomologist of the state experimental station, who should be ex officio state entomologist, and whose duty it should be to assist our farmers in exterminating all crop-destroying insects and in protecting their crops against the depredations and ravages of the same.

Itasca State Park.

From the report of the commissioner of Itasca State Park, made on the 1st day of last December, it appears that the state has acquired the ownership and control of 10,879 acres within the limits of the park, and that there are still within these limits 8,521 acres, owned by private parties and scattered in tracts of various sizes among the state lands, that ought to be acquired by the state. These lands are covered with a valuable forest of pine, spruce, fir, cedar, ash and oak, and the owners are likely at an early day to cut and market this timber. When these lands have been stripped of their timber they are the easy prey of forest fires, and a fire breaking out upon them will inevitably spread to the other lands of the park and thus the whole area will become a burnt, black and desert waste, and will cease to afford any safeguard or protection to the source of our mighty river.

The legislature of 1891 acted wisely and with rare good judgment when it established this park. Itasca lake and its preservation is sacred and dear to every American heart. The lake and all its beautiful environment should, as far as possible, be kept intact in its primitive and normal condition; and in order to accomplish this, the lands in private ownership should, as speedily as possible, be acquired by the state. These lands can be obtained neither by purchase nor condemnation proceedings until the necessary funds are provided for that purpose. The work planned by the legislature of 1891 should be consummated and completed by the legislature of 1895. I commend this subject to your favorable consideration and recommend that you appropriate sufficient funds to acquire these lands by purchase or condemnation.

Game and Fish Law.

The legislature of 1893 codified all our game and fish laws [illegible]. Many of the more important provisions of the act [illegible] by our supreme court. [illegible] Game and Fish Commissioners to which I call your special attention. The hatchery at Willow Brook, in the suburbs of St. Paul, is on leased ground, for which considerable rental is paid. The board suggests the advisability of the state's acquiring the site to this ground, and if it can be obtained at reasonable figure I think the suggestion is timely and judicious.

The board has been very successful, under the new law, in its efforts to protect and preserve the fish and game of the state. Non-residents and foreign corporations, stationed within the borders of our state, on the shores of Rainy lake and Rainy river and the Lake of the Woods, are engaged on a large scale, in a lawless manner and out of season, in catching fish in those waters and shipping the same in large quantities to different points outside of our state. On the Canadian side of these lakes and this river, these fishermen are required to obtain a license or permit, upon the payment of a fixed fee, before being permitted to engage in fishing. A similar rule should be established by proper legislation, as against such fishermen, on our side of the line. While the act of 1893 is in most respects a model and very effective, yet in two particulars it is very seriously at fault. The period within which ducks and other similar birds may be killed is entirely erroneous and out of place. This error occurred through accident, but it is gross and palpable and should be promptly corrected. Except as to fishing in international waters, all fishing is prohibited between the 1st day of December and the 15th day of April following. This provision is needlessly harsh and unjust. The settlers in our extensive lake region are men of limited means and rely, to a large extent, upon the supply of fish food for their support. To debar them from this resource during the most dreary and desolate part of the year is uncalled for and really oppressive. These people should be permitted to catch fish, in a proper manner, at all seasons of the year, for their own consumption, but not for shipment. By the terms of the act of 1893, white fish can be caught with a net only in international waters. This variety of fish cannot be caught with hook and line, but only with a net. In the so-called park region of our state the lakes abound with a species of whitefish—the best and most palatable kind of fish in those lakes. This act, by failing to permit the catching of such fish in a net, is really prohibitory and practically interdicts such fishing. This is unjust and unreasonable and should be remedied. I commend these matters to your favorable consideration and attention.

World's Fair.

The Minnesota State Board of World's Fair Managers have made and filed their final report with accompanying vouchers and receipts, from which it appears that they have received and disbursed the following sums:

RECEIPTS.
Legislative appropriation of 1891	$50,000.00
Legislative appropriation of 1893	100,000.00
Received for interest on deposits of special treasurer	1,150.05
Received for interest on deposits of general treasurer	570.44
Received from all other sources (as per detailed report)	1,826.07
Net receipts	$153,556.76
DISBURSEMENTS.
For world's fair purposes as per vouchers and receipts	$137,787.53
Unexpended balance returned into the treasury	15,000.00
Balance retained for printing and distributing final report	769.23
Total	$153,556.76

The board performed the task allotted to them with fidelity, energy and credit. Minnesota was faithfully and judiciously exhibited and represented at the great fair. In proportion to the money expended, no state made a better showing. We are all under much obligation to this board and to the Ladies' Auxiliary Board for their gratuitous, zealous and efficient service. The fair was a great object lesson, well worthy the price and far-reaching in its benefits and lessons.

The New Capitol.

The legislature of 1893 passed an act to provide for the appointment of seven suitable persons, one from each congressional district in the state, to act and be known as the "Board of State Capitol Commissioners," whose duty should be to secure the erection of a new state capitol, according to the provisions of the law. In conformity therewith, I appointed the following named gentlemen, who were confirmed by the senate, duly qualified, and have since been acting as the said board, viz.:

H. W. Lamberton of Winona, from the First Congressional district.

John DeLaittre of Minneapolis, from the Fifth Congressional district.

E. E. Corliss, of Fergus Falls, from the Seventh Congressional district.

By the terms of this act the governor is made a non-voting member of the board, and a total appropriation of $2,000,000 was made, to be provided by a tax levy of two-tenths of a mill upon the assessed valuation of the state each year, not exceeding ten years.

The Board met and organized May 13th, 1893, and have since been diligently engaged in the prosecution of their duties. They have purchased a commanding site for the new building, payable out of the appropriation available during 1895, 1896, 1897 and 1898, at a total cost of about $285,000. It is situated at the head of Wabasha street, in St. Paul, about four blocks from the site of the present capitol. The new site is bounded by University avenue on the north, Park avenue on the west, Wabasha street and Central avenue on the south and Cedar street on the east, and contains about 335,750 square feet, or 7 8-10 acres. It is on a commanding elevation, is easy of approach, and fronts upon one of the principal thoroughfares, being upon the direct line of travel between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The board has recently received competitive designs from architects from different parts of the country, and are now engaged in the selection of one to be adopted for the new building, no decision having yet been reached.

In the crowded condition of the present state house the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, the board of health and other departments of the state government cannot be provided with suitable quarters, and are obliged to hire rooms away from the building, while many of the other departments are greatly hampered for want of sufficient room. By the time the new building can be completed the business of the state will have still further expanded, and the present building will have become still more inadequate for the requirements of the state.

The work of constructing a new capitol has been entered upon at a time when both labor and material are exceptionally low priced, and hence the building can be erected at less cost to the state now than under former conditions. I regard the enterprise as a necessary undertaking and refer you to the report of the board of state capitol commissioners for further information concerning it.

Coal Combine Investigation and Litigation Resulting From the Same.

Pursuant to a resolution of the legislature of 1893, a committee of three senators and six representatives was appointed to investigate unlawful combinations among producers, carriers and dealers, enhancing the price of coal to the consumer. The committee, in proceeding with the work of investigation, through its agents, obtained the possession of certain books and papers of J. J. Rhodes, a coal dealer and the alleged manager of an organization of coal dealers, without his consent and against his protest. Mr. Rhodes thereupon instituted an action against the committee and its agents to recover $50,000 damages for the taking and detention of the books and papers. The legislature thereupon passed an act appropriating $50,000 to pay the expenses of such litigation and to pay any judgment that might be recovered against the defendants, or any of them. Mr. Rhodes has finally, after the action referred to had been twice appealed to the supreme court, dismissed the same as to all the defendants, thereby substantially terminating the litigation. Pursuant to the act of the legislature last mentioned, an effort was made to procure the indictment of Mr. Rhodes and his alleged associates, in the district court of Ramsey county, for engaging in an unlawful combination to enhance the price of coal, but such effort proved unsuccessful. There has been expended out of the said appropriation of $50,000 the sum of $1,531.88 for attorneys' fees, costs and disbursements in the case of Rhodes and in the efforts to procure his indictment, leaving an unexpended balance of $48,468.12. [illegible] the general [illegible] legislation.

Pine Stumpage and Public Lands.

A resolution of the legislature of 1893 directed me to make a judicial investigation of the sale of pine stumpage upon section 36, township 42 of range 26, Mille Lacs county, made by the state auditor to C. A. Smith & Co. and authorized me to employ counsel and incur expenditures for that purpose. Pursuant to such direction I employed counsel and instituted, through them in behalf of the state, an action against C. A. Smith & Co. to annul the sale and to recover pay for the timber already cut. In this action judgment was obtained against the defendants for the sum of $10,302.48, damages, interest and costs, and the sale as to the timber uncut, which was upwards of two-thirds of the entire lot, was annulled. Out of the amount recovered I expended the sum of $2,240 in attorneys' fees, costs and disbursements, and paid the balance, amounting to $8,062.48, into the state treasury.

Pursuant to joint resolution No. 5, of the legislature of 1893, a committee of three members of the senate and four members of the house was appointed to investigate all frauds committed in despoiling the school, university, internal improvement and other lands of the state of their timber. By the provisions of the same resolution the governor was also directed to investigate and examine school lands containing pine timber, or which had theretofore contained such timber. The appropriation of $5,000 for the use of the committee and $10,000 for the use of the governor, made by the resolution aforesaid, was only allowed by the state auditor to the extent of $7,748.29—the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the legislative expenses of 1893—and of this amount $5,000 were placed at the disposal of the committee and the balance at the disposal of the governor. The committee has proceeded and made great progress with the work devolved upon it by said resolution, and inasmuch as it was hampered for the want of funds and the work assigned to me by the resolution was on the same line and for the same purpose as that entailed upon the committee, I made it my agent to carry on the work of investigation assigned to me, and, as such agent, placed at its disposal the funds allotted to myself. The committee has made a very full and comprehensive report, which contains a detailed account of its work and many valuable and important recommendations and suggestions for which I invoke your most earnest and attentive consideration. Steps should be taken, under proper legislation, to continue the work of investigation so [illegible] inaugurated by the committee, and [illegible] facilities and additional funds should be liberally provided for that purpose.

In connection with this subject I cannot forbear to call your attention to the unsatisfactory character of the law as to the sale of pine stumpage. No timber other than pine can be sold apart from the land, and pine timber can only be sold after a board, composed of the governor, state auditor and state treasurer, has determined that the timber is in danger of being destroyed by fire or other cause. After such determination, the timber must be duly estimated and then sold at public sale to the highest bidder. The governor and state treasurer have no means at their disposal by which they can determine whether a given tract of pine is liable to be destroyed. The only data furnished them is the meager and generally unsatisfactory report of an examiner sent out by the state auditor. And the estimate made preliminary to the sale is, as a rule, made in a hasty, perfunctory and slipshod manner and hardly ever tallies with subsequent scalings. In my opinion, it would be well, if the governor and state treasurer are to have anything to do with the disposal of pine stumpage, that each of them be equipped with adequate means for obtaining information through the channels of his own office, to the end that these officers may be a check upon one another and upon the state auditor and to the end that the state may have the benefit of the independent and well-advised judgment of each of them. Each one of these officers should also have the power to procure an estimate of the amount of pine standing, as the state auditor now has. From estimates obtained through three independent channels more reliable data could be secured, which would be a check upon subsequent unreliable scalings. The frauds most likely to occur in connection with the sale of pine stumpage arise chiefly from dishonest and unreliable estimates or scalings. I commend the entire subject to your careful consideration and attention. Our supply of pine is year by year growing less and less and we cannot exercise too much care in disposing of the residue. In this connection I cannot forbear to call your attention to the importance of protecting our forests against the ravages of fires. It is a difficult subject to regulate, but I have no doubt your wisdom will devise some means to relieve us from our present helplessness. You have ample authority in the premises, for the subject is clearly within the police power of the state.

Dairy and Food Commission.

The report of the dairy and food commissioner shows that energetic and continued efforts, meeting with considerable success, have been made to protect the dairy interest of the state against the inroads of oleomargarine. Seizure and confiscation of the inhibited product has been the most effective weapon—far more dreaded than the mere naked prosecution of offenders. And were it not for the law governing traffic and commerce between the states, under which the manufacturer in another state can ship his product into our state and dispose of it in the original package, seizure and confiscation would afford complete relief. In all cases where the product has been disposed of by the foreign shipper in its original state and has become intermingled with the other property of the state, then it has become subject to state control, and in all such cases the dairy department has, without hesitation, resorted to seizure and confiscation. A suit was instituted in the federal court for Minnesota by the Armour Packing Company against the dairy commissioner to restrain him from such seizures, but when the company found that they could only restrain "in transit," or "in original packages," and that the commissioner disavowed any purpose to invade this ground, they dismissed their suit.

The case of Weideman vs. The State of Minnesota, involving the validity of chapter 11 of General Laws of 891, the so-called "pink law," was prosecuted by the dairy department to a successful termination, and at the October term of 1893 the supreme court made a decision sustaining the constitutionality of the law, which had, before that time, been a mooted question.

A proviso relating to cottolene was added to the lard law of 1891, by chapter 126 of the General Laws of 1893, which has led to some controversy. It has been insisted on one side that the word "cottolene" was used in a limited or trade-mark sense to describe one particular product, while on the other hand, it has been contended that the word was only used in a general sense to describe adulterations of certain class. This ambiguity of construction should be removed by further legislation.

In addition to its other duties, the dairy department, through its first assistant commissioner, has, without extra charge, given instruction in butter making at the state dairy school at St. Anthony Park. This school is a great factor in the development of our dairy interest and is well patronized and well sustained. Our state is fast becoming one of the leading dairy states of the country, and at this time, when wheat raising, owing to the low prices, is so unpromising, we cannot well do too much in sustaining our dairy department and dairy school. I commend both to your favorable consideration.

Red River Valley Drainage.

The legislature of 1893, upon condition that the Great Northern Railway company would contribute one-fourth of that amount, appropriated the sum of $100,000, to be expended at the rate of $25,000 per year during four years, for the purpose of draining the Red river valley, by opening closed water courses leading into the Red river and its tributaries, and by opening existing streams in the valley. The Great Northern Railroad company has complied with the condition aforesaid and has contributed its share, which has made $31,250 available each year. Pursuant to the terms of the act making the appropriation, Ezra G. Valentine and N. D. Miller were appointed to act with the governor and secretary of state as a board of audit, to initiate, carry on and complete the work of drainage. This board, in 1893, let contracts for the Tamarack river ditch in Marshall county and the Sand Hill river ditch in Polk county. The former is 7¾ miles long, 20 feet wide, of an average depth of 4½ feet, and cost $21,483.06. The latter is of the same width, 7 miles long, of an average depth of 5 feet, and cost $23,774.75. These ditches were finished in the spring of 1894, and have drained, reclaimed and restored to a tillable state thousands of acres of wet, swampy and overflowed lands of the richest and most fertile in the valley. A part of these lands are owned by the state, and these have, in consequence of the drainage, become enhanced in value to an extent exceeding the amount of money expended by the state. In 1894 the board let contracts for the Mustinka river ditch in Traverse county, the Borup ditch in Norman county, the Ada ditch in Norman county, the Snake river ditch in Polk county and the Kennedy ditch in Kittson county. The Mustinka river ditch is finished. The other ditches are incomplete and will not be finished until next summer. These ditches will drain and reclaim a vast area of overflowed and wet lands, some of which are owned by the state. Not only will large areas of land be reclaimed by this comprehensive system of drainage, but the entire valley will be affected and undergo a vast improvement and change for the better. Wet lands have caused late seeding, and late seeding late maturing crops, and these crops have had to contend with early frosts. Drained lands lead to early seeding and to early crops beyond the reach of frost. The Red river valley contains some of the richest and most fertile lands in the state. Some of these lands are low, wet and overflowed and require drainage to become arable and productive.

The work of drainage is too extensive to be carried on by local enterprise and local means. The federal government gave our state a large grant of lands to be used in draining and reclaiming just such lands as these. The state having accepted the lands, stands morally, if not technically, charged with the trust, and in expending money for this work of drainage, is doing no more than what it fairly undertook to do when it accepted the grant. The contracts that have been let will nearly exhaust the money that has been appropriated. There is still a considerable amount of drainage that ought to be undertaken by the state. Of this perhaps the most extensive and important is the opening of the Middle river near Argyle in Marshall county. This involves a ditch as large, as difficult and as expensive as the Sand Hill river ditch in Polk county.

The straightening and dyking of the Otter Tail river, in Wilkin county, and the opening of the Rabbit river, in Grant county, are also works of importance. There are, in addition to those mentioned, many other important places where drainage, too extensive for private enterprise, is urgently needed and called for. I have visited and personally examined all the ditches I have referred to and nearly all the localities where further ditching is needed. More funds are required to complete this system of drainage and I am confident that no money can be expended to greater advantage or with better results than for this purpose. I therefore earnestly recommend this matter to your favorable consideration and attention.

Municipal Government.

The importance of securing a more uniform, more complete and well-guarded system of municipal government for our larger towns is evident and pressing. Since the adoption of the constitutional amendment of 1892, inhibiting special legislation, the necessity for a well digested general plan has become still more urgent. No part of the American system of government has exhibited more defects or been subject to more just criticism than the mode in which our municipal affairs are managed. Aside from the city of Washington, where the government is practically in the hands of the president and the congress of the United States, there seems to be two methods in vogue in establishing city governments. By one plan the legislative department of the state government prepares and enacts in detail the entire scheme and plan of municipal government; by the other plan, the people of the city are left to perfect and adopt their own municipal system. The latter plan is of more recent origin, but has proved quite satisfactory where tried. If you proceed on this line it will necessitate the enactment and submission to the people of a suitable constitutional amendment.

State Census.

Pursuant to section 23 of article IV. of the constitution, it is your duty to provide for a census of the state during the present year. Provision should be made, not only for a correct enumeration of the inhabitants, but also for a correct census of the real and personal property, the manufacturing, agricultural, mining and commercial industries of the state and of the labor and capital employed in the same. Such a census, if properly taken, will be a valuable guide in the future progress of our state. In order to insure correctness the work in detail ought not to be committed to local assessors, but to some other public functionary, or to persons especially appointed for that purpose.

Legislation in the Interest of Labor.

The factory act of 1893 has, on the whole, fulfilled the purpose for which it was enacted. There are some minor defects developed in the practical workings of the law that should be corrected. Our mining industry needs a mine inspection law, in spirit and purpose similar to the factory inspection law. Chapter 25 of the General Laws of 1893, the so-called personal liberty law, should be amended so as to be clearer, more specific and more stringent in its provisions.

Recent labor strikes, prolonged and extensive, strongly suggest the importance of enacting suitable laws for the conciliation or arbitration of disputes between capital and labor, in some tribunal or before some board designated by law. Inasmuch as both capital and labor have the undoubted right to make a peaceable strike, compulsory arbitration is not warranted and would be unwise. But in most cases, if a proper tribunal with judicious safeguards were provided, capital and labor would both be disposed to voluntarily submit their controversies to arbitration. And the tide of public opinion would, in such cases, not only impel the parties into such a court, but would make its decrees respected and obeyed. He who would refuse to arbitrate or, having submitted to arbitration, would refuse to accept the result, would forfeit all public approval and would, in the outcome and in one form or another, have to submit.

In the presence of so much idle labor needing the assistance of public and private charity, it would be proper to consider the wisdom of giving our various municipalities more enlarged powers to raise and expend funds in the construction of waterworks, sewerage, streets, parks, electric lights and other essential urban facilities, to the end that such public improvements could be made in a manner to afford labor to those who without such labor would have to rely on charity of some kind for their support. The object of such legislation should not be to authorize needless improvement, but to give the needy unemployed the preference in obtaining municipal work, which they do not have under the ordinary contract system.

Bank and Loan and Trust Companies.

It is the duty of the public examiner, under existing laws, to examine into the affairs and ascertain the financial condition of banks, saving associations and loan and trust companies, and to report the same to the governor, with such recommendations and suggestions as he may deem pertinent. However precarious the condition of the bank may be, about all the governor is specifically authorized to do on receiving such report is to publish the same. This, in case of banks or loan and trust companies that are insolvent or that have impaired their capital, is wholly inadequate. The powers of the public examiner should be so enlarged, by appropriate legislation, that in case he ascertains that any bank or loan and trust company has, through any cause, impaired its capital or become insolvent, or has conducted its business in defiance or violation of law, then, in either case, it should be his duty and he should have the power to require the stockholders and officers of such bank or loan and trust company, upon reasonable notice, to be designated by him, to replace the capital impaired, or in case of insolvency, to raise sufficient funds to meet all liabilities; and in case the capital impaired is not so replaced or the insolvency existing is not so provided for within the time limited by him, then he should have the power and it should be his duty to at once institute proceedings in court to have such bank or loan and trust company placed in the hands of a receiver for the purpose of closing up its business and distributing its effects among its creditors. Powers similar to this—indeed more arbitrary and drastic—are given to the comptroller of the currency in respect to national banks, and such powers have proved to be both effective and necessary safeguards.

The public examiner should only be required to report to the governor the condition of those banks and loan and trust companies which have impaired their capital or become insolvent or have conducted their business dishonestly or contrary to law. A similar rule might well be applied in the case of public officials and public institutions. By limiting reports to such cases—that is, reporting the bad and omitting the good—the public examiner would be relieved of a large amount of unnecessary clerical labor.

In view of the fact that the provisions of our banking law are scattered through a number of separately enacted statutes, not as harmonious as could be desired, I would suggest the importance of having these acts codified and enacted into one homogeneous act.

From the report of the public examiner, it appears that during the year 1893 seven banks failed, made assignments or had receivers appointed, and that in every instance this condition was brought about by the unwarranted acts of the officers in making excessive loans upon insufficient securities, or in making undue or excessive loans to themselves or the directors of the bank. The law should be so amended as to prohibit the making of such loans, and all officers violating such law, whether intentionally or through carelessness, should be held civilly and criminally liable for all loss or damage.

School and University Funds.

Our school and university funds are invested in the following fund and securities:

INVESTMENTS OF SCHOOL FUND.
Cash	$114,878.05
Land contracts (including $1,833,020.44 transferred Internal Improvement Land contract)	6,711,803.43
Minnesota Funding bonds, 3½ per cent	159,000.00
Tennessee Settlement bonds, 3 per cent	1,673,650.00
Minnesota Revenue bonds 4 per cent	100,000.00
Minnesota Building bonds, 4 per cent	150,000.00
Tennessee Redemption bonds, 4½ per cent	270,000.00
Tennessee Redemption bonds 3 per cent	201,250.00
Alabama Consols, series "A," 4 and 5 per cent	183,000.00
Alabama Consols, series "B," 5 per cent	15,000.00
Alabama Funding bonds, 4 per cent	105,737.50
School district and County bonds, 5 per cent	1,027,730.72
	$10,712,119.60

INVESTMENTS OF UNIVERSITY FUND.
Cash	$8,927.27
Land contracts (including $80,763.48 transferred internal improvement land contracts)	590,730.68
Minnesota funding bonds, 3½ per cent	300,000.00
Tennessee settlement bonds, 3 per cent	75,000.00
Minnesota revenue bonds 4 per cent	50,000.00
Tennessee redemption bonds, 4½ per cent	80,000.00
Fruit farm	1,300.10
Experimental farm	8,500.00
	$1,034,007.05

The law under which these funds are invested in state bonds limits the investment to not exceeding a dozen enumerated states, and most of these are not borrowing states, so that it is now very difficult and in time will be next to impossible to make investments in such stocks. The field of investment in state bonds should, in the discretion of the investment board, be extended to all the states of the Union. The foregoing table shows that the highest rate of interest is derived from school district and county bonds. In view of this fact, and in view of the urgent demand for an enlarged field of investment, it would seem to be judicious and good economy to permit investment to be made, under proper safeguards, in the bonds of the several towns, villages and cities of this state, issued for general or special municipal purposes. It is better for the state and better for the borrowing municipalities that these funds be invested among our own people. I accordingly recommend that a proper constitutional amendment be passed and submitted to the people for ratification at the next general election, authorizing the investment of the school and university funds in the bonds of these various municipalities of our state. In this connection, I also call your attention to the decision of our supreme court in the case of Rogers vs. Board of County Commissioners of Le Sueur County. The decision indicates that additional legislation is needed in order that the power to borrow money on the part of counties may become of practical utility.

State Institutions' Land Grant.

Under chapter 5 of the General Laws of 1865, a swamp land grant of 325,000 acres was made to certain charitable, educational and penal institutions of the state. Three hundred thousand acres of these lands have already been selected, and from these have been derived the following revenue and income:

Sales of land	$18,285.78
Right of way	335.35
Sales of timber	17,598.14
Mineral leases	17,973.00
Total	$54,192.27
Which is invested as follows:
Cash in treasury	$37,251.70
Land contracts	16,940.57
Total	$54,192.27

In view of the existence of this fund, its permanent character and its continued increase, more ample provision should be made for its permanent investment than is now given, to the end that as large a revenue as is compatible with safety may be obtained from this source.

State Finances.

On the 30th day of November, 1894, the state treasury had to the credit of the several funds hereinafter described, the following sums of money:

Revenue fund	$814,944.53
Soldier's relief fund	9,072.81
Forestry fund	35,336.92
Redemption fund	5,178.61
Funding tax fund	79,101.29
Permanent school fund	117,006.56
General school fund	61,516.87
Permanent university fund	73,867.58
General university fund	27,922.36
Internal improvement fund	3,403.63
Internal improvement land fund	20,707.92
Internal improvement land fund interest	3,058.91
School text book fund	43,816.67
Swamp land fund	6,950.63
State institutions' fund	39,215.75
Reform school fund	4,412.22
Grain inspection fund	22,842.12
Total	$1,338,544.58

The total amount of the funded and the unfunded debt of the state, less cash in the sinking and redemption fund, was, on the first day of August, 1894, the sum of $1,892,183.18, of which sum $300,000 were Minnesota revenue and building bonds, primarily issued to cover a temporary overdraft upon the general revenue fund. These bonds draw 4 per cent interest and may be redeemed at any time. In view of this fact, and of the large surplus in the general revenue fund, I concur in the recommendation of Treasurer Bobleter that a legislative appropriation be made out of the general revenue fund, sufficient to pay these bonds; and that the law providing for the levy of a redemption fund to liquidate these bonds be repealed. I also concur in the recommendation of Treasurer Bobleter that section 6 of chapter 151 of the General Laws of 1891, providing for the annual levy of a forestry fund tax, be repealed and that in lieu thereof a direct appropriation be made out of the general revenue fund sufficient to meet the requirements of the timber culture law.

In view of the large surplus in the general revenue fund, it is evident that a considerable reduction in the levy of taxes for general revenue purposes is warranted. I, accordingly, recommend that such levy do not exceed the sum of one and four-tenths of a mill on the dollar of taxable property.

State Prison.

There are at the state prison cells and ample room and accommodation for 580 convicts. On the 10th day of December, 1894, there were 537 convicts in confinement, of which 83 were sent us by the United States government, for which the state is paid at the rate of 40 cents per day for each man. The time of most of these federal convicts will expire within the next two years; and if we deduct their number from the aggregate it leaves only 454 chargeable to the state, and with only this number there would be 126 vacant and available cells, which would amply meet and cover the probable increase in our prison population during the next two and perhaps three years.

At my suggestion, contained in a special message, the legislature of 1893 applied the parole law and the so-called reformatory plan to the state prison. Two years of experience and observation have demonstrated the wisdom of making the change. It relieves the executive of much importunity, and it makes prison discipline less harsh and rigorous while fully as safe as under the former system; it affords the convict an opportunity to ameliorate his condition and to commute or shorten his time by his own efforts and merits, thus placing the man who is without friends upon a footing of equality with those who are better favored in this respect. And in addition to all this it seeks to provide him employment and to look after his welfare in that most critical period of his life—the time immediately succeeding his discharge.

The manufacture of twine at the prison, while it has entailed no direct loss, has indirectly been of great benefit to the agricultural interests of the state. At the time the enterprise was initiated the price of binding twine was high and had been unreasonably enhanced by the manipulations of a great twine or cordage trust. The prison twine has been of a good quality, has given satisfaction to the farmers, has been furnished to them at near cost, and has been one of the chief means of reducing the price of twine 33 per cent below the rate existing when our people were at the mercy of the great twine trust. At the time the machinery for our twine plant was purchased, the state, owing to the hostile action of the trust, was unable to procure other than soft fiber machinery, which has limited us to the manufacture of hemp twine, and this, owing to the high price of hemp as compared with manila and sisal, and to the fact that farmers prefer, other conditions being equal, twine made from the latter, has made it very hard and difficult to compete with hard fiber twine. These facts, and the fact that sisal and manila are, owing to the removal of the duty, becoming still cheaper, make it almost imperative for the state, in order to successfully continue with the manufacture of twine, to procure, as soon as may be suitable, hard fiber machinery, in order that twine may be made from these much cheaper and much more desirable fibers. Such machinery, with a capacity of from 6,000 to 10,000 pounds per day, can be obtained at a price not exceeding $24,000. There is a balance of $15,088.82 remaining in the treasury unexpended of the amount appropriated for the purchase of our present twine plant. I recommend that this balance, with an addition of $9,000, be appropriated and set apart for the purchase of suitable hard fiber machinery for our twine plant. Under existing law only one-half of the prison labor can be leased on contract and only for a term not exceeding two years. These restrictions have proved very embarrassing, especially now since the Minnesota Thresher company, which employed one-half of the prison labor, has gone out of business. The abandonment by the company of its manufacturing enterprise left 300 idle convicts on our hands. After much effort the managers have succeeded in finding employment for about 200 men in the manufacture of boots and shoes, under a two-years' contract, at 50 cents per day for each man. But this still leaves 150 convicts unprovided for. In view of these facts and conditions, I concur in the recommendation of the board of managers, that in respect to contract labor the restriction of numbers be entirely removed and that the limitation of time be extended to ten years. It is almost impossible to secure favorable contracts, or indeed any contracts at all, for so short a term as two years. And unless ample scope is given the board to lease the prison labor, additional means and facilities, at considerable cost, must be provided in order to furnish employment for the convicts on state account.

For further information and for details I refer you to the valuable and interesting reports of the managers and the warden. No prison is better managed nor in better hands than ours, and the recommendations of the board and the warden are entitled to great weight and serious consideration.

State University.

The growth of our state university in numbers and in the enlargement of its scope of work and field of instruction has, within the last ten years, been exceedingly rapid and beyond precedent and expectation. There are now enrolled and attending the university in its various schools and departments an aggregate of 2,050 students. There are nearly 500 students in the law department, 368 students in the medical department, and 250 students, including 60 women, in the school of practical agriculture. This rapid and unusual growth and expansion has of late caused the inevitable expenditures to outrun the appropriations, and in consequence the university is at present hampered with a small deficiency arising partly from increase in running expenses and partly from outlay for extra room and repairs and necessary apparatus. Unless immediate provision is made for this deficiency the salaries of professors and instructors will be in arrears and the institution will be otherwise embarrassed. Inasmuch as there are available funds in the treasury I recommend that you make a special appropriation at an early day to meet this deficiency.

The university, in order that its growth may continue unhampered and in order that it may be able to meet all the requirements of our age and people and in order that it may hold the high rank it has already attained, is in urgent need of more buildings. A gymnasium and drill hall, a mechanic arts building, including room for heat and lighting plant, a laboratory of hygiene, including a department of pharmacy and suitable quarters for the state board of health, in addition to the dairy school and a dormitory and boarding hall at the school of agriculture, are all urgently needed and should be provided for by suitable appropriations. The library building will be completed during the present year and will afford ample room for study and research. But our supply of books is very limited and a large addition to the library is urgently called for by the students and teachers in all the departments. Without an ample library the university will be handicapped and placed at a great disadvantage. Next to an able president and faculty, there is no equipment of a university so essential and so much demanded and called for as a good library. Our university stands at the head of our educational system and occupies a leading and commanding position as an institution of high order, both at home and abroad. The most fastidious have no longer occasion to send their children to the east or abroad. All that is worth knowing and learning can be obtained at home and in our own midst. Our university has made Minnesota known throughout the civilized world. It deserves kind and liberal consideration at your hands. You should deal with it in a broad and liberal spirit. The people expect nothing less.

Conclusion.

In conclusion, permit me to suggest to you the importance of exercising economy, both in appropriation and in legislation. In these times of industrial stagnation, when so many enterprises are at a standstill or in a comatose condition and so many people are incumbered with outstanding liabilities, and are hampered in their progress for want of funds, the situation urgently calls for a diminution in taxes and expenditures, which I know you fully realize and will endeavor to mitigate. Excessive and needless legislation—legislation to meet a lot of petty ills that are more easily cured within the realm of moral suasion, is one of the tendencies of our times, in respect to which we ought to practice a little self-restraint. The people can be burdened with too much and too cumbersome legislation, as well as with too lavish expenditures and too heavy taxes. I feel assured that a spirit of economy and self-restraint will be your guide in all directions, and I address you not in a spirit of giving you instruction, but rather to let you know that you will have my hearty co-operation in your exertions and labors. May an Allwise and Merciful Providence guide and bless our efforts.

TAYLOR WILL SETTLE

SO EX-GOV. MELLETTE OF SOUTH DAKOTA THINKS.

He Arrives in Chicago to Hunt for Taylor and Hold a Conference With Other Bondsmen—The Shortage Now Placed at $370,000.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Ex-Gov. Arthur C. Mellette has come down from South Dakota on the supposition that the defaulting state treasurer, W. W. Taylor, may be in Chicago and anxious to make a settlement. He is interested to the extent of a $50,000 bond in the location of Taylor, and to start action in the matter he called a meeting of the men who had guaranteed the treasurer's honesty. J. T. McChesney of New York, who was an equal indorser with the ex-governor, was the first to arrive, and several days will be spent in a conference over ways and means and an examination into the exact condition of affairs. The men from the North now estimate the shortage at $370,000, which is $20,000 more than the bond. It is the opinion in Huron and Pierre that Taylor will produce $200,000 as soon as he is found, and a willingness to do this and remove the embarrassment of the present treasurer would probably secure much leniency as to the remaining $170,000. There are seventeen men on the Taylor bond, most of whom have been asked to the conference.

"It is a question now," said Mr. Mellette, "whether Mr. Taylor is in this country or Europe. There is much diversion of opinion, but I am of the opinion he is here and may try to make a settlement. He disposed of his Evanston and Chicago real estate before he dropped from notice. This is taken both as a sign that he wanted all the ready money possible for his travels and that he was getting his collaterals into cash for a possible settlement. There is as yet no plan of action, but the indications are that a settlement is most desired. The state needs money at once."

Other Men in Trouble.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 15.—A joint resolution was presented in the house for a committee of five from the house and three from the senate to investigate the affairs of the ex-commissioner of school and public lands, Thomas H. Ruth. The investigation was called out by the fact that Mr. Ruth refused until too late to send out the annual apportionment due Nov. 15, although the lists had been prepared on time by the clerical force of the office. The whole scheme is considered to be a collusion with Taylor, the missing state treasurer, and the state will lose about $100,000.

The exact figures of Taylor's shortage, as given out to-day, are $367,023.81, but of this amount there has been located nearly $24,000, of which sum $8,000 has been received from a letter to Deputy Bunington, which letter was mailed at New York on the 6th inst.

Several weeks ago the grand jury of Brule county returned an indictment against Judge Kellam, of the supreme court, for receiving bank deposits after his bank was known to be insolvent. Judge Paffy was holding the court at the time, and as the state's attorney stated there was no good grounds for the indictment he referred the matter to Judge Haney, of that circuit. Judge Kellam was notified of the indictment, and at once went to Chamberlain to demand trial. He met Judge Haney at Mitchell and asked that the jury be recalled and he be given an immediate trial. At Chamberlain he called upon the state's attorney, who at once wrote an order setting aside the indictment and the same was signed by Judge Haney. The action grew out of the fact of the failure of a bank of which Kellam was president, but the affairs of which proposition were not under his management, he being in this city attending to his duties on the bench. He is only blamable for allowing his name to be used by the bank and not paying attention to its affairs.

Two Hundred Thousand.

Huron, S. D., Jan. 15.—Members of the legislature here to-day say no proposition has yet been made by Taylor's bondsmen looking to a compromise, although the matter is openly talked of by legislators and state officials. Ex-Gov. Mellette made no investigation of the matter while in Pierre, and passed through here this morning, going East. He has no authority to make any propositions, and is at a loss to know what course to pursue. The conspiracy phase of the matter is strongly denounced by some and given credit by others, but it is not generally believed that Taylor's bondsmen were cognizant of all the facts and are shocked to find the shortage so great. The fact that the state offers only a small reward for his capture leads many to believe that compromise is in the minds of those most interested. Taylor's father in Lafayette has not means sufficient to make good the amount embezzled by his son, and is not likely to go to Pierre. The opinion is prevalent that plans will be devised in a few days, if Taylor is not found, whereby sufficient funds will be procured for present needs and to carry on the business of the state until he is brought back, as it is believed that he will produce at least $200,000 very soon after his capture.

Attorney Deland and Deputy Auditor Schwartz were here to-day examining county records to ascertain if any property transfers in which Taylor or his bondsmen were interested have been made and filed here. They decline to give any information except in a general way of what they discovered in looking over the affairs of Taylor's bank in Redfield, other than to say that all his interests there have been attached. They admit that the Redfield bank has been the channel through which Taylor mostly operated.

Fire and Frost.

Jefferson, Iowa, Jan. 15.—The house of J. H. Baldridge, near this city, and part of its contents were burned last night. It was very cold at the time and nine children, from three to sixteen years old, froze their hands and feet. The family is destitute and the children are in a critical condition.

The State of Georgia had 50 lynches during the past year; Mississippi 16; Louisiana 15; Tennessee, 15; and Texas 12. In the South altogether there were 166 while in the North there were 24. Minnesota has a clean record—she didn't have any. The whole record is a frightful one, and should call the peoples attention of the United States to the necessity of awakening a public sentiment that will demand the substitute of lawful process for the violence of the mob. Our protest to Turkey against the Armenian massacres is less effective with the shadow of this ghastly record behind it. —Ex.

Reports from the Red Lake country indicate the log crop of that section will exceed all estimates that have been made. The hauling is excellent and no excessive cold has interfered. It is difficult to ascertain the quantity of logs to be cut on the reservation as the methods of the department are as mysterious as they are unwise, but it is understood that the usual amount of Uncle Sam's stumpage will be given away to the Indian manage, by Secretary Hoke Smith, It is rather a tough kind of competition to meet by men who have to pay big prices for timber then sell it in competitions with timber which somebody gives to the indians' without the least shadow of authority. —Lumberman.

All wealth comes from production The crude resources, materials and elements of nature must be manipulated by skilled hands intelligently directed to produce that which recognized as wealth. Since production is the primary source of wealth too much production inevitably implies too much wealth. If the world has produced too much then the world is too rich In the natural order of things there cannot be a surfeit of production without there first being a surfeit of wealth. Overproductions of of the necessities, comforts, even luxuries of life cannot truthfully be said to exist until all who are willing to work for a livelihood have all reasonable wants satisfied. If overproduction is the real cause for present conditions then the world is hard up, stagnated, a most undesirable place of habitation because it has grown so rich! We are embarrassed, crushed, driven to bankruptcy, enforced idleness' hunger' rags' because we are so infernally rich!! Surely riches have become curses if the overproductions theory is true, —Farm, Stock and Home,

AND THEY GAVE AWAY THE SMOOTH LITTLE SCHEME OF THE BANKERS.

Testimony Before the House Committee and Speeches In the House—Something For the Farmers to Chew On—A Statement Showing Bank Profits.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—It is late in the day to comment on the testimony recently taken by the house committee on banking and currency, preparatory to bringing in the Carlisle-Springer bill, but since we have heard the debate in open house we find many little gems in the testimony which shine with a new luster When first brought forth, many of the bankers' phrases were dark as Pythian oracles, but since the general scheme has been fully developed we find much meaning in them. Everybody has read and admired Abe Lincoln's famous allegory, in which, under the figure of house timbers framed by Stephen, Franklin, James and Roger, he showed a previous understanding as to slavery in the territories. We now find an exactly similar correspondence from the first call for the Baltimore conference to the last house speech in favor of the bill, and we know what we had only suspected—that from the start the real design was to get rid of all legal tender paper money, to swipe the whole $493,000,000 out of being. We also see why the managers were unwilling to wait till the Fifty-fourth congress met

In the heat of debate several little things slipped out almost unconsciously, so to speak. The bankers' testimony and the language of those who spoke for them in the house showed that they regard Cleveland as their man and the next house as quite subservient on the money question, but a careful polling has shown that the McKinley wing of that house, if I may call it such, is determined to make the tariff question prominent. Indeed at least five of the men who will manage things in that house—and the hold over Republicans are so few that they will have quite a soft thing—have bluntly stated that no currency bill whatever shall be passed until they have rearranged the tariff schedules As it is just as bluntly announced that Mr Cleveland would veto a new tariff bill, the men who are engineering this deal want it completed before this congress dies Another little secret, and a very interesting one, slipped out One banker in his testimony tried three or four times to tell it, but they managed to head him off, and there were indications when it came out in the house that it was by accident This is that in their hearts every one of those fellows believes that there is to be a collapse this year, and probably a reaction against the gold basis, which will show in the next fall elections

The evolution of this can be traced in plain figures They started with the general assertion that this country now contains $650,000,000 in gold. Next was an estimate from Director Preston of the mint that the sum is "about $600,000,000" The next man put the amount at "something over $550,000,000" Congressman Walker of Massachusetts thought it did not exceed $450,000,000 Finally a banker witness blurted out the statement that the banks contained less than $200,000,000, and after adding that in the treasury and what is supposed to be hoarded the last guess was that the "demnition total" is between $225,000,000 and $250,000,000 And it is going fast. They want to carry their point before these things are discussed among the people They went at it very cautiously and skillfully, but unconsciously furnished a deal of humor.

The testimony covers 870 printed pages averaging 360 words each, and a gentleman who has taken the trouble to count assures me that the words "elastic" and "elasticity" occur in it over 400 times. Now, an elastic currency, in the sense they use it, is just as much an absurdity as alchemy or witchcraft, but it is the great fad of the day They have forgotten all their old time jokes about "India rubber money," "gum elastic currency" and the "elastic yardstick." Here is a specimen "elasticity" extract from the testimony of Mr George G. Williams, president of the Chemical National bank, New York.

"Mr Warner—Do you think that the plan you propose would give sufficient elasticity to the currency?

"Mr Williams—I think that the national bank notes would take the place of the legal tender notes, and when they are not wanted, as at present, they would be redeemed That would give sufficient elasticity to the currency If $150,000,000 of legal tender notes were withdrawn and an equal amount of national bank notes substituted, which would be readily redeemed, I think it would afford sufficient elasticity to the currency

"Mr Warner—To what elasticity do you especially refer? The elasticity which will keep the general volume of notes in accord with the general development of business, or the elasticity which will provide a large excess in one month, for example, over what might be necessary in the next month?

"Mr. Williams—The better the redemption facilities the more elastic is the currency "

Is this the same Mr Williams who testified a few years ago that the rise and fall of prices, and still more of the rates of interest, furnished the true elasticity, that when there was much idle money and a low interest enterprisers would get the money for new investments, that as the interest rose it would tend more and more to check rash speculation, and that if not prevented by usury laws the banks would thus automatically regulate the money supply? If I remember rightly, he quoted several authors to the effect that banks are merely transfer agents to collect small sums of idle money and make it effective; that they, being the first to know when speculation is becoming dangerous, should give warning by raising the rates of interest, and that the usury law by preventing this was fairly chargeable with a great deal of mischief If this is not the same man who wanted all usury laws repealed, I should very much like to have the present opinions of the other Mr Williams. There may be an interesting case of a financial Jekyll and Hyde.

He happened to mention the large profits made by the Chemical National bank, which led members of the committee to press him with questions, in answer to which he stated that while the capital of the bank is but $300,000 its surplus is $7,000,000; that its stock is at 4,200 per cent premium, selling at $4,300 per share; that it pays 150 per cent per annum on the par of the stock and adds $300,000 a year to its surplus, having at present undivided profits exceeding $1,000,000 Of course he was very emphatic in denouncing the greenbacks as an element of danger. They went at this, as I said, very cautiously Secretary Carlisle barely suggested the retirement of the greenbacks Comptroller Eckels came out somewhat more openly Horace White followed with a still more explicit proposition, and after him each successive banker witness grew more emphatic in declaring that the greenbacks and Sherman silver certificates must all be funded in bonds and destroyed as rapidly as possible. To change a noninterest bearing debt into an interest bearing debt in a time like this would, they thought, be of great benefit to the people.

Of all the witnesses there were but three who came out fairly and squarely on the real issue—namely, Messrs. Butler, Warner and St. John, the first for an exclusive gold basis, the two latter for bimetallism. Mr. George A Butler, president of the National Tradesmen's bank of New Haven and a banker of long experience, dashed into the subject by saying that there is twice as much money as can be held to the present standard; that the volume must be sheared down to fit the gold basis; that in the process farmers and laborers must submit to a further reduction of prices, and that, instead of promising them relief, congress ought to be honest and advise them to grin and bear it. After showing that for the past four years the net export of gold and that used in the arts had been twice the production from our mines he demonstrated that the export would not only continue, but increase, and that there is no other way to prevent it except to produce more stuff and sell it at lower prices—prices so low that foreigners will buy of us rather than of other cheap producers. He estimated that traveling Americans spend abroad $80,000,000 per year, and that the interest on various stocks and bonds held abroad and other annual dues make a total of $195,000,000 per year, which we must pay Europe independent of paying for imports.

In the subsequent debate in the house several members put it in round numbers at $200,000,000 Along with much else of this sort Mr. Butler said: "It has been frequently urged on the government to sell its bonds abroad and import gold. You can bring the mountains of Switzerland here just as well as you can do that. So long as these conditions exist gold will leave the country. I have been through all the panics, but I confess that I have never seen the time when I felt more uneasiness in regard to the future of the country than I do at this hour It will go on until people who are even now crying about low prices will be very glad to sell their products at lower prices than now. It is hard, dreadfully hard, on the farmers of the United States that those who stand nearest to the soil have from the foundation of the world to this hour always had a struggle for existence."

Cold, hard, cruel words, but unquestionably true if the gold basis is to be maintained And this leads me on to mention the singular and most suggestive fact that not a single one of all the witnesses or all the speakers for the bill in the house even so much as hinted that the difficulty might be overcome by export of manufactures, by economy on the part of the wealthy who visit Europe or by any process whatever which might even remotely affect the plutocrats Every man jack of them laid the whole burden on the farmer, and one gentleman, whose sentiments were humane almost to the point of maudlin tenderness, concluded his remarks on that subject in these words: "I can see but one remedy, and that is brains—brains in everything, in farming as well as in banking and manufacturing Farmers must produce as cheaply as possible, and the country must, and it will enlarge its lines of exports, and perhaps arrest or retard the outflow of gold."

The views of Hon. A. J. Warner are well known, and Mr William P. St John, president of the Mercantile National bank of New York, went further in his advocacy of the free coinage of silver All this time the alternating gab about an extra session went on. Friends of the president told us positively every morning that he would call the next congress, and equally near friends every evening said the rumor was nonsense. My guess is that he will wait until it has been thoroughly polled on the money issue and then call it if it is found "reliable." J. H. BROWNING.

An Object Lesson.

"I was in Halifax recently," said Rufus Darby, "and offered a silver dollar in a small purchase, but the shopkeeper refused to take it without a discount. You see our silver is a little off with the Britishers. They will take it grumblingly at 10 to 20 per cent discount.

"'All right,' remarked the man, 'I'll take your paper money, but we don't want your 60 cent silver dollar.'

"'Very good,' said I, and I pulled out a silver certificate.

"'That's all right,' said he. You see he wouldn't take the silver at par, but the paper based upon the same dollar he accepted willingly."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Utilization of Separated Milk.

Prof. J. P. Sheldon, England, in Farm, Field and Fireside published in that country has an article upon what to do with separated milk. He gives many reasons showing that it is valuable and useful as a food, and particularly to people who are doing mental work, entirely.

He then takes up the question of its value for feeding pigs and calves, for which it is very useful.

It is generally thought among dairy farmers that separated milk—which, unlike skim milk, is perfectly fresh, and fit to send away to a distance if need be—ought to sell at a price per gallon superior to that which is obtained from pig-feeding.

For the ordinary skim milk of the dairy farms where no separator is used and which are not situated within practicable reach of a market which exists, or might be created for separated milk, the best thing to do is to feed it to calves, pigs or horses.

Fresh, sweet, aerated milk that has passed through a separator may, however, be put to a higher and more profitable purpose. There is no need for the intervention of pigs or calves to convert it into food for man. These quadrupeds, indeed, are brought to be quite superfluous in the capacity of "middlemen," for the utilization of separated milk.

In order that the best use may be made of it a "firsthand" use of it should be tried—that is to say, should be consumed by the genus homo himself as it is, or in some kind of cookery. The best way to use separated milk is to mix with it the dough which is used in breadmaking, and we may well doubt if there exists any other equally profitable purpose to which it can be applied, unless it be consumed as a beverage. The best and whitest bread is that produced with the aid of milk—separated milk, or ordinary skim milk. To me it appears feasible that all the separated milk in the country might be used, with profit and advantage to themselves by the bakers of London, Birmingham, Manchester, and other cities.

"THINGS THAT GO ASTRAY."

A Peculiar Story About the World's Fair.

The annals of "things that go astray" contain no parallel to the case, which, appropriately enough, reaches us from the United States. It appears that eighteen months ago the Spanish government sent for an exhibition at the Chicago world's fair a priceless collection of objects connected with Columbus and the memorable voyage of discovery which placed the new world upon the map. But the collection never reached the exhibition authorities, and it is not the least astounding detail of an astounding story that this exhibit of surpassing interest was never missed. All through the summer no one asked inconvenient questions about the missing curiosities, and in due time the world's fair closed. A fortnight ago a United States warship arrived at Cadiz to return the rest of the exhibits. Then the outcry arose: Where was the Columbus collection? No one knew anything about the matter on board the vessel, therefore warm expostulations were addressed to the United States authorities at Washington by the Madrid foreign office. The affair of the missing antiquities was well on the way toward causing an international misunderstanding when, Eureka! the precious case of objects came to light this week in a bonded warehouse, away, not only from dust and damp, but also from the eyes of the millions who went to Chicago last year and to whom they would have proved one of the most interesting features of the show. That such a blunder could have been possible casts a flood of light upon the chaos and disorder which reigned supreme by the shores of Lake Calumet during last summer.—Grimsby (England) Express.
